

I can understand why people would like to use their cell phones on board, but it could become a major problem for some people because the seats are so close together. It would be hard to deal with when the person who is on the phone frequently is seated next to me. I think if there is an emergency perhaps exceptions could be made to use the cell on board. Other than that, I would have reservations. Another question is related to flight safety. Could it cause engine control problems? Or flight control problems?