

I have participated in the "no call list" since the privacy act was established. What a wonderful feeling to be able to sit down with my family at dinner with no interruptions of annoying, pushy sales representatives (telemarketers). If the FCC was to allow this to happen again (I would receive as many as four or five calls a night) it would definitely put a damper on the amount of quality time I would be able to spend with my family. If I wanted to buy something or contribute to a charity, I would look up the business or agency in the yellow pages. There is enough advertisements on the television and in magazines, I do not need someone to call and "hound" me to buy from their company. With so many citizens being inflicted with Identity theft, I would not trust a telemarketer in the first place. I would search out on my own to find what I wanted. It should be MY right not to have telemarketers or businesses calling me at all hours. So far, I have been very satisfied with the "privacy act" and will continue to support it. PLEASE, do not allow these people to take away from my family what we have enjoyed, FAMILY TIME!!!!
