

Indiana's Do not call list is very effective, and very popular among those eligible for its protections. There is no valid reason to weaken its protections. Isn't government for the people, by the people, still the ideal?