

I want the no-call list to stay effective for the state of Indiana. If businesses can't get my business without having to call and bother me at home, then they probably aren't worth doing business with to begin with.

I don't want to come home to an answering machine full of telemarketing calls. I don't want the phone to ring off the hook while my family eats dinner. I don't want our evening family time constantly interrupted by sales calls. We already have enough of this with the charity organizations that can legally call and disturb us.

Do not let anyone try to bend or slide under the rules you have already set. The No-call list is a great thing. I wish it had been in place years ago.

Sincerely,

Mary DeHoff
