

it is about time testing for morse code (element1) was dropped.

it is an antiquated, obsolete mode of communication that should have been done away with 30 years ago.it has done nothing but hold up great and potentially needed operators from gaining the radio privilages that they deserve. due to they war on terror and homeland defense,as well as natural disaster type emergencies,the country needs all the radio operators it can get, from all walks of life.

the amateur radio hobby provides this, and element 1 just gets in the way.
operators