

I am a frequent air traveller -- logging in excess of 100,000 miles last year. One of the things that makes air travel, and the inevitable delays, less of a hassle is being able to relax in the airline club lounges and do work. A key component of doing work is getting on-line. I want these club lounges in general, and Continental's President's Club in particular, to be able to continue to provide their own, free wireless service to me. This is a benefit for which we've essentially already paid by joining the club, and the seamless ability to connect in airports without having to subscribe to numerous different providers is a must. Thank you for respecting my right to choose to use the wireless service of my choice.