

As a consumer, I use roaming constantly. I believe that the FCC should establish a rule that best helps consumers switch from one provider to another without additional costs to the consumer. A comprehensive and dependable wireless communications network is essential to this country.