

Consider having a morse code endorsement where once earned gives the extra class licensee access to the 25 khz cw subband making the extra truly extra privilege giving the cw operator extra pride. Once the written test is passed they would get all the other subbands (phone). Those not interested in code wouldn't care that they don't have those 25khz and those that do care about code would also be happy and have some pride that they got the cw endorsement. I suggest that the endorsement be 10 words per minute. This would satisfy those who want no code and those who wish to keep the code requirement.
