

In 1963, the government mandates that television sets must be manufactured to receive UHF and VHF stations. It seems logical at this point in time the government should require all TVs sold to have digital reception capabilities. Consumers are not going to be receptive to the digital conversion if the TV they just spent $2000 on 4 years ago can no longer receive OTA TV stations.