

I live in Mt. Shasta, California, where our local newspaper is only published once a week. Our local public access television station (MCTV, cable channel 15) is an extremely important source for local news and current community events, including many public meetings. It is also an excellent source of creative, independent programming.

I urge you to preserve and protect our access to local television. This type of television is one of the best uses of the medium, and it must be preserved.

Sincerely, Stephen Morrell
