

I like that fact that we have mandated public cable access and local channels. Its always nice to have fresh, local fruit, eggs, butter, milk, etc.

Its even nicer to have fresh, local flavors and a choice or option of creating "own show" if you don't like whats out there. Or, to see local content. You have to have some diversity or a pressure release valve to free speech. Its also a cheapish place for people interested in the field to sharpen teeth on the cheapish. This is better than community college and prison for some and therefore cheaper. You have to force funding and contracts for local (funded) public cable access like you have to force suggestion box or eliciting the opinion of the guys in the mail room or the janitors closet.

Sometimes the smartest man in the room is the one who watches everthing but never says a thing.

Sometimes the smartest and loudest cavemen in the town...are the Enrons and the Cherynobyls.

Best wishes, peace, and love.

More diversity and independence of voice...even if the free market...won't support it.

Babies are weak and can do nothing for us..but will still listen to their inarticulate cries.
