

Due to the compactness of the seating in today's carriers, to add to the already high noise level within the aircraft by allowing the use of cell phones while in flight is absurd, in my opinion. It would be difficult at best to hear an announcement by the flight crew in the event of an emergency. Simply turning off the service at that event would do nothing but add to the confusion as people's connections were dropped, they would tend to speak louder. Keep the current ban in place for voice communications from the air. PLEASE!
