

I am writing to express my strong disapproval of any relaxation or elimination of the public interest limits on media ownership.

Democracy is founded on an informed electorate. A free press is a corner-stone of our country and essential for our survival. We are in great peril with many of our rights disappearing into thin air as our government has begun to turn on its citizens. We own the air waves.... they should be used for the benefit of the public. The FCC is supposed to oversee this important public asset. This country is on the wrong track and the FCC along with it if they weaken the ownership limits!

Localism and diversity are the cornerstones of a democratic media system, and we cannot afford to compromise them in any way.

Media ownership matters and determines the content we receive over the public airwaves. We need look no further than the recent scandal over ABC's "docudrama" about the 9/11 attacks, in which the Walt Disney Company willfully distorts the history of a national tragedy for political gain.

We need local broadcast station owners who will serve the local public interest not those of faraway corporate owners.

Stewardship of the public airwaves is a very serious responsibility that merits true public accountability.

Limits on media consolidation have been a bulwark against the concentration of economic power in the marketplace of ideas -- a critical part of balancing the public service mission of the media with their private profit motive. Our democracy requires the free flow of information from a broad range of diverse voices.

Media consolidation has already led to declines in local and minority ownership as well as the homogenization of content in radio and television. Permitting cross-ownership of newspapers and broadcast stations, or allowing further concentration in local television markets, will only worsen the problems we already have.

When the FCC attempted to weaken and remove media ownership limits in 2003, millions of Americans rose up in protest. Congress and the courts ultimately intervened to turn back that misguided regulatory process.

Now that these same rules are being reconsidered, the FCC should stand firm with the public against further concentration of media ownership in the hands of the few.

A vote against media consolidation is a vote for democracy!
