

The government can't seem to decide what it wants: When it's Microsoft or AT&T, the government cries "Monopoly!" and intervenes. But when it's choice and diversity of the airwaves, the government cries, "Too much freedom! We better control it!" It would be best if the government simply stayed out of it and let the free market create choice and competition.