

The US government should stand aside and let the communication industry provide the services of which they are capable. Every time the government steps in to regulate something it costs the taxpaying public. After all the entire government is overhead to the economy.