

The government should take the correct action to help all media consumers, by not by taking additional control of the airwaves. Rather, the government should move to increase competition and choice by removing any laws that are out of step with modern change occurring in the current selection of available media outlets.

Asking for greater micro-manageing government control of the nation's broadcast media no longer make sense in today's world of blogs, podcasts, internet sites and 500 TV Channel access.
