

Cable companies are currently talking about the implementation of Switched Digital Video(SDV). This will unfairly impinge on the use of third party equipment such as TiVo. How can you let cable companies decide which channels they will switch? This is in effect telling the customers what they can and can't watch even though they pay for the switched channels. Cable companies are ignoring the integration ban by denying basic service to customers who use third party equipment. Please put a stop to this.