

I am a Sirius listener and stockholder. I am also a professional with an MBA. I have been closely watching the commentary regarding whether the merger is in violation of antitrust laws. My feeling is that satellite radio is among a long list of audio devices used for entertainment. This can include analog radio, a home stereo system, music played via cable or satellite TV, iPods, music played through a cell phone or PSP, the list goes on and on.

The industry is broader than just "Satellite Radio" it is, essentially, Audio Entertainment. Not only that, I have read that there are plans to include video at some point in the service offerings, which opens a whole new field of competitors, hardly a monopoly. Please allow the merger to take place as proposed.
