

Let the satellite merger go through. I'm a user of one of the services but want content from the other service as well. The best thing would let XM and Sirius merge so consumers can get the combined content without having to get two radios/two subscriptions.

Especially at a lower cost for the two combined. Plus it would give the company the ability to offer tiered pricing packages.

The merger would not create a monopoly when there is "free" radio (am/fm/hd), internet radio, mp3 players, ipods, etc. How would the merger create a monopoly when as a consumer I so many other options to get my music.

If anybody has a monopoly it's the NAB. Obviously they don't want the merger because satellite radio is already such a threat. They aren't concerned about the consumer just themselves. That's why they keep buying quote "independent" reports against the merger. I guess if you pay enough it can get anybody on your side right or wrong.

I'm a consumer let the merger go through so I can have the best of both worlds.....more and better content at lower and more selective pricing packages.

P.S. No one paid for my comment, it's totally free.....I guess the Carmel Group nor the former Attorney General John Ashcroft can say the same.

Good Luck with your decision.
