Dear Jay Keithley,

The FCC clarification of the emergency captioning requirements was wrong. All emergency information must be captioned with no exceptions. I must be aware of emergency situations such as a terror alert or impending natural disaster.

I support the Application for Review of Clarification of Obligation of Video Programming Distributors to Make Emergency information Accessible to Persons with Hearing Disabilities Using Closed Captioning, sent by seven national consumer organizations on August 14, 2006, CG-Docket # 05-231.

Sincerely,

Subject: Close captioning obligations

FILED/ACCEPTED

DEC - 7 2006

Office of the Secretary

I am a Senior Citizen who has been deaf since 4 years of age. I really rely on close captioning for not only local news and regular programming but also in any emergency situation. I live alone and do not have someone to depend on for this information. Even if I did have someone it should be their burden to inform me as they may not always be around in an emergency situation and it is a big burden to relay that much information all the time.

Without close captioning, my access to technology and information is severely limited. There should not be any deregulation of the present close captioning laws governing public broadcasters requirement to provide close captioning in all of its programming especially in an emergency situation.

The only person I could see making such a lax ruling would be someone who is not deaf! AS a deaf person this makes no sense to me.

I would appreciate an email response to let me know that you received my email of concerns and also to keep me abreast of present laws considerations affecting close captioning.

To Whom It May Concern:

I am a hearing impaired television viewer. I rely on captions for entertainment programs as well as news. It is necessary for me to have emergency announcements with captions. This gives me the information needed in case of a severe weather situation, etc. You only get so much from visual information. I would not know if I needed to evacuate or go to a shelter if I did not have captions. I find that in programs that there is a lot of background noise the captions really help to understand the dialog.

I fully support TDI's request that the FCC withdraw its August 7, 2006 clarification notice and continue its current 79.2 regulations on emergency information broadcasts.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.

Dear Thomas Chandler,

The FCC clarification of the emergency captioning requirements was wrong. All emergency information must be captioned with no exceptions. I must be aware of emergency situations such as a terror alert or impending natural disaster.

I support the Application for Review of Clarification of Obligation of Video Programming Distributors to Make Emergency Information Accessible to Persons with Hearing Disabilities Using Closed Captioning, sent by seven national consumer organizations on August 14, 2006, CG-Docket # 05-231.

Sincerely,

I am astounded and outraged by the FCC's latest "clarification" of closed captioning in emergencies. This is a giant step backwards. We deaf people have absolutely no confidence in "good faith" efforts of the broadcasters. Only firm regulations will bring results. This clarification should be rescinded. Jerald M. Jordan
