

Corporations cannot be trusted to control the net

All that corporations seem to be able to do anymore is constantly merge, limit our choices and offer less and less for continually growing costs.

By allowing corporations to control who has what amount of bandwidth you are basically getting rid of the freedom of free speech and new business creation that has made the internet what is today.

The communication mega corporations already control how we access the internet itself and believe me from a consumers viewpoint, the service has only gotten worse while the companies have gotten larger.

You will essentially be cutting out people with any viewpoint that is dissenting to these corporation, and therefore removing the truth and trustworthiness that is no longer available through regular media sources but still available through blogs and independent news sites.

I am very much allowing them ANY control whatsoever when it come to the internet itself. it needs to remain a neutral source and it can only do so by remaining how it is today. thank you.