Dear Ms. Dortch:

The FCC is considering placing a cap on the use of the Universal Service Fund (USF) for wireless service. A wireless-only cap is clearly anti-competitive because it singles out wireless technology, which consumers are choosing more and more over landlines. We should be rewarding competition, not punishing it. What's more, rural people deserve the same access to telecom services that are available in the rest of the country—isn't that the purpose of the USF?

Wireless technology plays an ever-increasing role in economic growth and is a critical instrument in emergency situations, but if the recommended cap is implemented, many communities may never realize these benefits. In a country that prides itself on equality, it seems hypocritical to restrict certain individuals' access to an essential tool simply because of their geographic location, especially when they have contributed for years to the USF along with everyone else.

I urge the FCC to vote against the proposed cap on universal service support for wireless service.

Thank you.

Cynthia Stewart
