

Hard Enough Already

It's hard enough to find some of the information for topics that I have to write about or do a speech about, it doesn't need to be made harder.

At my school we have slow computers and only have a set amount of time to write things, most of the time it's one class period. It takes a really long time to load the internet and to go to different sites. If Net Neutrality is messed with a lot of people in my school may have their GPA go down simply because they do not have enough time to do the research because some of the websites used are not used for anything else than random research.

Please do not mess with Net Neutrality, I have a hard enough time at school already.
