

Our Constitution and Bill of Rights are still the

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

I am 76 years old and I use the internet as a source of information about what is going on in our lives, our country and the rest of the world. In order to make rational decisions, it is necessary to have all the facts, not just carefully edited pieces intended to give false information to the public. Corporations use the internet to sell no-good products, push children to demand things they shouldn't have, overstuff the public with what will make them look good. I have, thankfully, managed to see through these things but putting the wireless market in the hands of liars, those whose intent is to deprive the population of the real total truth must not be allowed to steal the airways from the American people to whom they belong. This would be the latest method of denying free press to the many, just for the good of those who are trying to turn us into robots with no intelligence. This is a crime against us and the Constitution. We American people are not stupid and we will not allow our freedoms to be taken from us. Do not allow this stealing of what belongs to the people!
