

I use the internet to seek the truth

I peruse the internet for the truth; reading much of both sides, forming opinions based on my experience, the books I have read, and the way I personally believe. Any regulation, anything that would interfere with the free flow of information that I use would be a strike against the freedoms and protections of free speech we are purported to have in this country.

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.
