

Net Neutrality is Necessary to Freedom of Thought

I regard any politician who attacks Net Neutrality to be an enemy of freedom of expression and freedom of thought. The worship of profit as the only good is exactly what's wrong with commercial television and increasingly newspapers. Now communications corporations are trying to impose this shallow and harmful value on the Internet, the last bastion of unfettered public discourse.

I will never vote for any politician who attacks freedom of communication. No amount of campaign money will give such politicians the power to make me forget what they've done.