

Please don't sell our airwaves to corporations. Already, we are paying hundreds of dollars each month (to Comcast) to receive TV entertainment and access to the Internet. We don't have a choice. Even if I think cable TV costs too much (and it does), if I cancel it, Comcast requires me to pay more for Internet access. It's legal extortion and the FCC has the power to change it; please do so.

The US lags behind most other industrialized nations in cost and quality of Internet access. If the tools used to enable commerce and drive innovation are restricted to a few entities, the U.S. will continue to suffer from the demands of Wall Street and the almighty dollar.

Please do what is right and disprove those who think the government is beholden to the corporations.
