

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone. The public airwaves belong to the public and must be protected and used for the public good. That means that the FCC must not hand over control of our airwaves in order to be gouged, manipulated and brainwashed by government propaganda. Television networks and the print media(newspapers) are now controlling what information citizens are fed. Bring back the freedom and the right to be informed and to have access through this new media. An informed citizenry is what democracy is all about.
