

I am a disabled American Registered Nurse and the Internet has become my chief source of information and news. Why must I continue to pay higher rates and have fewer choices than 16 other countries? Has Congress forgotten its purpose of serving the people and protecting their rights? Please allow me and many others the opportunity to access alternative sources of news and views, to educate and entertain ourselves, and to communicate with others.

After years of phone and cable company control over Internet access, the United States has fallen to 16th in the world in high-speed Internet rankings, with few choices and some of the highest prices for the slowest speeds in the world. We will continue this decline as long as we let AT&T, Verizon and Comcast dictate the terms of Internet access for the majority of Americans. The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Please help protect my and others rights and ability to have choices.

Thank you.
