

I have absolutely no doubt that the FCC will give away all bandwidth to the richest companies in the USA and that our current global standing of 16th place in world internet rankings will fall even further. I also have no doubt that the FCC, and the Bush administration do not care!

I suspect that this is the payoff (purchased access?) from past campaign contributions received from the ATT's of this world and the word is out to "reward them".

As the USA continues its downward spiral, and our leaders care less and less about the population in general and more and more about "big business" and "personal interests" there will be more giveaways to the big companies. I am also sure, if the past 6 years of the Bush administration are any indication, that the leaders of this country will tell any lie [as they have been doing] to achieve their goals, and dance the dance of big business.
