

Our government was based on a principal of freedom. Innovation and free competition are what made this country in to world power that it is today. This is especially true in the world of technology, where we have strong roots, and some of the most respected resources in the world.

This trend of leadership should be continued, by setting aside an appropriate portion of the spectrum, for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. The market should not be open to incumbents only. The advantages already given have allowed the US to slip low in the rankings for speed and cost of access.

Please help us return America to a leadership role in technology and access for it's people.
