

Supporting a public infrastructure such as the Interstate highway system and supporting public education has made our country strong and prosperous.

Making high speed wireless internet access into this kind of public infrastructure will unleash creativity and innovation just as the interstate system and support for education did in past decades.

The FCC should promote and protect the resource of free and open and neutral internet access in order to make our country is the leader in the new internet revolution.