

having access to the internet is critical for someone like myself; single low income mother with many illnesses and very few resources. i hope to someday become employed while using the computer to raise awareness about the crimes of humanity and teach people to be better humans, a kinder universe is what is going to help save us from global warming

one world, think global act local michelesonoma@yahoo.com

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.