

The government must protect our airwaves from the large corporations that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

The FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with current providers.

Simply handing over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies will stifle a true free market, competition and innovation. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

FCC members must return to their original purpose of serving the public and not their big pocketed lobbying friends.
