

Public Airwaves belong to the American people. Every American citizen deserves to have access to the information highway. Just like we deserve to have access to libraries and public schools. A lack of access will negatively affect education and income earning potentials. In order to have equal opportunity, you have to have equal access to information and opportunities available only online. The government must protect our airwaves from I propose you make them a public utility, with set regulations for use and pricing, and make them available to those in poverty for free or for literally nominal fees in the same way that universal lifeline programs exist for other public utilities. Don't give our airwaves to the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets.

To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.
