

It is critical to have a free press, and it is utterly critical in this failing democracy that the government be vigilant in keeping the networks open, not letting them falling into the controlling hands of network giants who wish to control the media, thus citizens' access to full information and the opportunity to think for ourselves.