Once again, the federal government shows how it is comprised of nothing but sellouts who turn over the PUBLIC airwaves to the highest bidders. And, of course, those in the federal government who do this, do it with no sense of shame or decency.

As an Amateur Radio (HAM) I use the public airwaves for the public good, in case of an emergency. This dedicated group of men and women are there when the phones and cell phones are out of commission because of tornadoes, hurricanes and events such as what happened in New York on 911. A large part of the Amateur have become ”Emergency Communicators”, having taken courses paid for with a grant from ”Homeland Security”. I am very upset that the Public Airwaves are to be given to Corporations that DO NOT HOLD THE PUBLIC’s VIEW!

I am against the federal government turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon & Comcast. These companies will use the airways in such a way to harm the public good. This is serious and I believe be detrimental to the general public while helping private parties.

I am voting against every Republican on the ballot. It is obvious that we are heading toward a two-class country at accelerating speed....rich & poor.

These are public airwaves that should be to the benefit of the general public. Corporations will exploit them for their own use with no regard to the public's interest. Don't they own and control enough.

Corporate takeover of our News has enabled the disastrous policies of this President. Corporate takeover of our airwaves will cause further disaster for broadcasting will no longer be a watchdog for society but a vehicle to sell products for companies.

Please the tax payers need to have the airwaves for use ... emergency etc. This is not for private industry.

Free access = free speech

I feel it’s SO important to keep the airways truly public. Private gatekeepers is just another way to let Big Money be Big Brother.

Please act as the protector of the public good and improve access for individuals, not corporate entities.

The airwaves are for everyone! Please do not allow them to go to the highest bidder, at an ultimate cost the public should not have to bear. Free access to information is the only way to ensure an informed public.

For the love of God or whatever, in what irresponsible fantasy land are you people functioning??? The very concept of turning over control of now open airways to commercial enterprises is unconscionable! You may as well head for Philadelphia, open the glass case the Declaration of Independence lies within and start stomping on it. Protecting open airways is vital to this nation. Once we start snipping away at freedom of speech - and make no mistake, this pending attempt to offer our open airways to phone companies to manage is nothing other than forfeiture - we will be looking at a potential future rife with control of information, debate and communication carnage. Shame on the FCC for this brainless sidle-up to diminish open and free discourse!

This is wrong! Again, another federal government post the appears to be pro-corporation over pro-citizen. What a HUGE handout to those poor, trouble, struggling media conglomerates like AT&T, Verizon, etc.

It was a transparent "greasing" of the cable/satellite providers who are also getting a BIG payday from your new laws of making all TV broadcast signals digital.

Screw the poor people who can't afford a new digital signal TV or the enormous, cable bills. Hey guess what?? There IS a monopoly that you all turn a blind eye to - cable TV

The Communications Act of 1934 states that the airwaves belong to the people, not corporations. However, since corporations have taken over control of all branches of the federal government, the rights that formerly belonged to individuals are now shifting to corporations. In political science, this is the definition of fascism. This was predicted by Jefferson, Lincoln, and Eisenhower. Basically, those who are perpetrating this take-over have prostituted themselves to the Almighty Dollar, which, metaphorically speaking at least, means they worship at the altar of the Golden Calf (Mammon), i.e., they are Satan worshippers. Just so you know, you’re not fooling anyone. You represent a junta that has stolen two elections and has almost no public support, other than the manufactured votes created by software hacking. All this will pass, eventually, and humanity will evolve. So, your legacy is your choice: fascism or democracy. What will it be?

To give these airwaves to big corporations that will sit on them rather than use them for the good of the public is a slap in the face of every American. It will show that the FCC no longer cares about the people it is supposed to serve but rather cares only for big corporations. Do not make this grievous error in judgment. Stop big corporations from taking over one of the last pieces of American freedom and innovation.

I believe that all US citizens should have the Freedom to use their own equipment to access the airwaves at no cost to themselves and no profit to private corporations.

The people should be able to raise competition in the wireless internet market. After all we should have choices. Are we not a free country?

Our public airwaves must be used for the public good and not be used for private enrichment.

Competition is the key to progress in the market system, no? The corporate dominance in America today makes America less than it could be. More control given to these few giants of communication would make matters worse. Do not allow this!

Step selling out America and protect our airways for the common good. There is already enough corporate greed. Please don’t add to it!

I am an avid listener of online music. I am just beginning to learn about the options available to me. I would not like to have my options limited. I think our country is very innovative and most other technological nations follow our lead. Let’s not put a damper on innovation and choice. the internet was made to connect the public. Let it continue on that mission.

Additionally, I feel that public and small online webcasters would be unfairly penalized with the fees that have been set recently. I think these fees are unreasonable and will put many webcasters out of business.

The internet should not be the purview of only big business. We need alternatives to the mainstream media which is not meeting many people’s needs. Please continue to let innovative webcasters connect us together. Thank you for your consideration.

Please do not move to turn over additional public airways to corporations, such as Verizon and Comcast. This is an asset that belongs to the citizens. The private sector already has enough airwave space, and the public interest does not. It would be comparable to giving corporations control over Yosemite National Park. It is just as terrible, because corporations already have enough and the public interest does not.

These public airwaves should remain public and not for private companies.

The Internet is a modern miracle, open to new, unthought of changes in our lies. It would be foolish to harness it for the profit of a few, probably harmful to them also in the long run.

The airwaves belong to the public and we want it to be for the good of the public. Mindless entertainment designed to keep us occupied with anything but the important issues of the day means our democracy. We did not get to be such a great country by being selfish.

The move of greed against open speech and content of the internet is appalling in the face of any citation of human rights, civil liberties and freedom of speech. Our Constitution was not written that freedom of speech belongs only to those who can control what we say and where we say it. If you have one shred of decency left in your souls and hearts you will strike down this insidious law before you condemn the right of free speech to a grave in defiance of our founding fathers.

I have been in the telecom industry for over 20 years. I can already see the nasty rebound that this move will have. It’s time to leave traditional telephony behind and move into the 21st century internet. Then there are the major cable corporations that wanted nothing to do with giving many of us internet service. Now they want to restrict airwaves from those small companies that choose to provide us with service?

I have wireless internet service now - from a very wonderful company. Every major telephony/cable carrier refused to give me service. Sure, I’m located in a rather rural area, but that’s what wireless access is all about. So, I do not want to see this taken away by major corporations that have no intention at all of using those airwaves to give us service. Wireless is not their infrastructure - they have no incentive to use this for us rather than against us.

The major telephony and cable carriers must not be allowed to "purchase" and/or "control" these airwaves. And I don’t believe for a minute that these airwaves are not somehow being "purchased" by these corporations.

There are some things that belong to public domain. Democracy in America implies that citizens have specific freedoms and rights. Public access to the internet without stipulations and freedom from corporate control is an inalienable right that must be protected. The American people must have a say in this. In addition to the monopolistic tendencies of these predatory companies, COMCAST tore up our public streets for months, creating noise, dust and destruction of roadways, so they could "serve" the community. Our local governmental structure caved in, probably with no reimbursement for this abuse, and now they "own" our city. Do not let this happen again.

Powell's little boy was deregulating media ownership while his daddy was selling out his country in a construction hat. We need a person at the FCC who isn't a corporate stooge, a knee crawling suckass who sells away everything within his grasp even when it doesn't belong to them like mining public land, giving individual rights to corporations and the minions at the FCC charged with protecting the public airwaves serving them on platters to fat greasy American parasites enriching their brief pathetic lives. Save our airwaves before your jobs are deleted like your corporate conscience!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

One of the great ways that democracy continues to work in the USA, and through the internet to the whole world, is by free and open technology. It will be a disaster to freedom everywhere to give the internet over to major corporations. We need to save some of our options for the little guy. Although I do not yet have a blog, I am a freelance writer, and may want one any time. And as a Verizon and AT&T customer, I urge those companies to hold off their dogs!

This is a free speech issue. The airwaves have pretty much been usurped by self-serving corporate interests anyway. Phone companies in the US have done little to bring down the cost of owning a cell phone. People in Africa, Europe and Asia get cheaper access to wireless services than we do and the innovation boom in Asia is something customers in the US can only dream of in the States. So here’s my question opening up more bandwidth to these companies will help us how?

Okay so if you still go ahead, then I guess we are being governed by no less a corrupt government than most of the countries in Africa (our only problem is that companies here know how to maximize that advantage over here).

It is the FCC’s duty to protect infringements on the freedom of individuals and the means of communication. If we allow only corporate interests to control the public airwaves, soon we will become like any other deregulated country: everything will be controlled by an oligarchy of a few interests. Everthing else that is part of the media will be even more controlled by financial interest. What next? One national newspaper? Federally run TV like the Soviets used to have? Like North Korea has? These companies-I’ve had bad dealings with all of them-don’t care about the little person or the customer. Giving them more power is a HUGE mistake. Clearly then, the political as well as economic agendas of all will influence what kind of programming happens or doesn’t, and people will not people to have freedom of speech, or choice of music or commentary.

The public airwaves should remain just that, PUBLIC. Enough of the huge corporations running our country, without competition and innovation our country will stagnate. There is no good reason to turn them over to already rich corporations, we need some fairness.

The FCC administers the airwaves for the public good. Conceding the wireless Internet frequencies to the U.S. telecommunication megaliths, will suppress innovation and increase wireless and land based Internet costs to the U.S. consumer, as well as further weakening the competitiveness of the U.S. telecommunications infrastructure worldwide. If the FCC permits this frequency "land grab" it can no longer be considered an independent bureaucracy dedicated to the public interest, but merely a corporate shill.

On the one hand it is no more than right for companies that have made large investments in the infrastructure that the Internet uses. But on the other hand they definitely should not have further access to more bandwidth or public domain airwaves for their own enrichment. The FCC should make a priority of keeping at least half of the airwaves and bandwidth freely available to the public for high speed Internet service.

The internet has brought a new kind of freedom of information and communication not only to America but to the world. We need to keep these airwaves as open and accessible as possible. The government should not be auctioning off more of our freedom to the highest bidders (such as AT&T, Verizon, & Comcast). I implore the FCC to make the right decision and keep the public airwaves available for public use. I am a Verizon customer and I will not be pleased to hear of this company's involvement with such dealings.

The amount of the spectrum currently allocated for public use is atrocious. The military and commercial interests (essentially one in the same these days) have been allocated SHAMEFUL amounts - we are in the Dark Ages of spectrum allocation. It's time we awake to the full possibilities. Tesla's future of energy independence will rely on real access to the full spectrum of possibility. Don't deny the future of humanity something so valuable for short-sighted commercial defense of existing market-shares.

The trend toward giving control of America to a few people (corporations) is one of the signature motifs of the fall of every significant power in history. It will cripple us. No not now, maybe never. Electrict communication is the last expanse of national public property. Giving it or selling it all away is the wrong thing to do.

Just look at how Cable operators have stifled competition but more importantly Public Access and free speech by allowing payola and the black market use of Public Access to stifle free speech. You still have not realized the 15% competitive use of cable television because of the Payola which is as you know commercial bribery.

Do not allow the ”public” air waves to be monopolized by the big communications companies. Once again we see the true power of our elected “leaders”, we the people have the right to have our needs respected before the corporate interests. We have seen in the past that it is more important to allow those who believe their profit interests are more important than our right to a free market. Case in point the division of the airwaves in the sat TV market where those like myself are sold into ”local” areas that are farcical intrusions into our Constitutional right to a free access of news and information.

We the people of our great country need you our protectors of a free society to stand for us and denign the requests of those who feel they have a ”right” to steal our access to a free and unfettered news and information sources such as the internet bandwidth.

Diversity of opinion is essential to democracy. At present, too many large corporations control diverse and critical information and opinion channels: radio, television, publishing, movies, etc. The public air waves should be used for the benefit of the public, not for those who are interested in making money or controlling the information Americans can access. You are betraying the American public and Republic which you are sworn to protect against all enemies. Monopolies - which these companies are - seek to create the kinds of "Trusts" that President Theodore Roosevelt deplored and broke up, providing for the kind of competition that the Republican Party swears up and down, backwards and sideways that it loves. By this attempted betrayal of the public trust, you are creating a monopoly on information such that it becomes the private, exploitable, property of a very, very few who will use it to their own advantage. They will not employ it to inform the public of issues that matter tremendously, but to reap ever greater monetary rewards in an ever smaller group of hands. You will, in effect, foster the creation of a "nobility", an "aristocracy" of wealth and power that is the exact opposite of what the Founding Fathers and all subsequent presidents - save this present one - has ever upheld his promise to preserve, protect and defend against all enemies. By this betrayal of trust, you are effectively contributing to the destruction of the American Republic. The Founding Fathers, based upon their knowledge of history, pessimistically presumed their creation would last perhaps 25 years, if that long. The thought it likely that power would tend to concentrate itself in the hands of a very few, extremely wealthy elite and likely lead to a form of dictatorship, as was the history of much of the world.

President Theodore Roosevelt also campaigned hard for the institution of an inheritance tax so as to break up the large landholders and business conglomerates of his day in order to avoid the development of just such a privileged elite, immune, for all intents and purposes, to the laws of the land that govern the "common folk," the "peasants" and smallholders and small business people: the middle class that is the backbone of America. It is precisely this Inheritance Tax, the self-same one that is now, propagandistically dubbed the "Death Tax", that the egregiously cynical and avaricious Republican Party seeks to overthrow, paving the way for precisely the conditions that President Theodore Roosevelt sought to prevent.

As of July 4th, 2007, the American Republic will have lasted 231 years. It is your responsibility to ensure that it lasts at least another 231 years.

Allowing private enterprise to monopolize the airwaves is a mistake. It will be the downfall of America's technology sector by slowing the free market, and making high-speed internet access unavailable to the average citizen. Only large profiteers will benefit. Again, vote NO NO NO on this... keep the airwave and internet access available to all, and reinforce the new high-speed access for all Americans.

The FCC has made many poor decisions that favor big, rich companies that gain masses, hold monopolies and in general, hurt the hard working people of this country, along with the very poor. The economic gain that would come from universal internet access far outweighs the utility that would be gained from allowing corporations to monopolize what is fundamentally a public good. Increasingly, societies are turning toward public ownership as a solution to market failures. Allowing these airwaves to be monopolized would be a grave disservice to the spirit in which the internet was created. The internet is supposed to be a great equalizer, a "democratizer of information access." Please don't make it just another service that the privileged have easy access to at the expense of the working class and poor. The positive externalities associated with widespread internet access are too great to sacrifice to special interests. It's time the government started standing up for the governed instead of big business.

The public needs to have control over airwaves, not companies who desire a monopoly on internet access. Rural communities shouldn't be shut out just because they live in remote places. Dear FCC,
Thank you for taking comments from the public. Having worked for "corporate America", I know first hand that the bottom line goal is stockholder profit. There is nothing "wrong" with that—it is simply the nature of the situation. However, I feel adamently that a match of these airwaves with corporate America is in fact a MIS-match. The nature of these waves should be left open. This is very much akin to leaving open spaces in cities! Thank you in advance for your careful consideration of this monumental choice. Jenny Capella

I want to see maximum participation and participation from new and small companies who are willing to produce new products and services that the big companies don't want to provide. These new and smaller companies don't have the deep pockets of the big companies. More varied participation is better in the long run for our economy - the more players the more likely it is that there will be many new products and services to choose from.

And by the way, where is that high speed digital communications system the big corporations said a few years ago that they were in the process of building? Corporate America is NOT true to its word. That's why we have public government!
James Allen Kramer
Everett, WA 98204
Don't let companies take public airwaves for corporate gain. If it's public it means public. For all the public to use, not a company to buy up and do nothing with. If anything tell the companies that want to buy them they must be used for free public access within a certain amount of time or they go back to the government and they forfeit the funds they paid for them. If they use the airwaves for free public access during the time designated and continue for something like 10 years. They would get 1/2 of their original funds paid for the airwaves back, 20 years, the other half. This give them an incentive to do something with them and the government time to make a return on the money paid for the airwaves.

Since the beginning of US telecommunications policy (more accurately, also the beginnings of the ITU) the airwaves have been carefully managed for the public good. Recently, that has changed. It is unfortunate, to say the least. Decisions made today will last for decades. You have an opportunity now to stimulate innovation and keep the spectrum in the hands of the people, as was intended. Please think long term when decided this issue. We are depending on you to make decisions regarding telecommunications policy that most Americans will not understand, and that will influence our ability to innovate for decades to come.

Please don’t limit our freedoms. Keep our public airwaves - for the good of the public.

The public airwaves are part and parcel of the means of public speech. They do not need to be curtailed from the public so that others would make money.

We need innovation just to keep up with the rest of the world. The FCC bureaucracy is doing more harm than good if it doesn’t allow us to compete.

It's important that you support the development of technology for the citizens' benefit, not just for Big Business' profits.

The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers.

Corporations do NOT represent the public interest. Please do not turn over the airwaves to huge global/international for their private enrichment.

This is clearly a trade for more access to our private information.

When you as an individual get shafted because some corporation cares more about money than human life, you will know what it's like. I believe in country, not company. I want my rights back. You people have taken them all and then use us as your lab rats. You wonder why people lose their minds and go on shooting sprees...this is why. Money over life, money over love, money over what's right. I hate this country anymore because of what corporations have made it.

The FCC is charged with administration of the airwaves for the public interest. Serving corporate interests by selling out the public is unconscionable and despicable. You are selling out the interests of those you pledge to serve in favor of those who will further personal gains, yours and theirs.

Too much public domain is being privatized to the detriment of the public. We are being nickeled and dimed to death by huge corporations at every turn. Our airwaves should fall into the same category as the air we breathe... not to be owned by any person or business.

Public airwaves should not be held hostage by these private companies. The public needs the continued innovation of wireless access to foster a better democracy for all. Be assured, I will continue to purchase premium services from these companies. They should not, however, be given control of all wireless access to the Internet. I look forward to the day when all Americans can access basic government services online without falling prey to the bait and switch tactics of these companies with their unbelievable promotions, which convert to expensive monthly plans.

The Public Airwaves must remain public, free to all for use. No corporation or individual must have the right to control the access to this airwaves. A free open Internet has proven without a doubt the importance of this fact to an open dialogue between people. Bush claims to be a defender of democracy and by keeping the airwaves free and open to all is vitale to a democracy.

Do something good by keeping the airwaves available for the public good rather than allowing them to be locked down and unavailable for public use. None of the major Telecoms have recently engaged in any activity to benefit the public - only in actions that benefit the Telecoms. The FCC has the opportunity to open the door for creativity and competition in a way that hasn’t happened in a long time. Take that step and benefit us all.

If this is about money, I’d rather pay a tax to keep the public airwaves public than sell them off to the private sector. Really, is nothing in this country sacred and for the people? I'm an economist and know the benefits of private ownership for innovation and efficiency. The 'public' in public airwaves is one of a free society's greatest resources. The internet belongs to we-the-people. It was developed with societal funds and it should be guarded for our uses just as the great public parks are (though with even greater vigilance.) Free national broadband would make an explosion of creativity and innovation in our nation. We should pursue this like the modern Manhattan Project.

The airwaves should not be allowed to be controlled by corporations who will only continue the trend of corporate greed at the expense of the public. The airwaves are for the use of everyone, and as many people as possible should have free or inexpensive access to them, whether by cell phone or computer internet access. Don't allow corporate greed to tramp on the rights of citizens again, as is happening in so many aspects of our lives. Step back and look at the big picture, and where your decision will truly be of benefit to the majority of the American public. Please don't allow the lobbyists to control you and your decision.

it's sooo heartwarming to know that the FCC is going to aid and abet the outright theft of public airwaves for private profit! and we complain of it when russia's oligarchs stole russia's natural resources at cutrate prices in the 1990s! the underlying pathology in the contemporary body politic is that the public airwaves are not being used for the public good...that candidates have to prostitute themselves to buy airtime for their pitiful sound bites etc. if you decide to sell this part of the frequency spectrum for private profit you will only aggravate the illness still more. SHAME on YOU!

The free access to information is so important to the future of this country. Look at the cell technology in use by the Japanese. They are forced to compete, to innovate. I travel extensively for my work to make a living. I must have internet access to stay connected with my employer, staff and clients. The internet is an essential part of today’s communication and way of working for many Americans. I use it for my primary home and home office phone lines. I also use it to stay connected with my spouse and children while on the road. Even if I’m traveling the twins can see their Papi’s face and hear my voice prior to going to bed.

To accomplish this now, I monthly pay for four (4) internet access providers plus any hotel charges for accessing high speed internet from my hotel rooms. This is nuts! This is in addition to services I pay for from internet based companies.

I would welcome the FCC keeping the airways for good public use and keeping the innovation moving swiftly so that one day I may have just one internet bill and one easy way to connect.

Don’t let the corporate giants control the internet. Look what they did to TV! Nothing but junk. The news is a sham. Since the main stream media don’t cover the news it is up to the small reporters. If mainstream wants their audience back, I’ll give them some ideas of what to do. What problem does the government and the president have with individual expression, small business enterprise and fair competition? Say ”no” to the corporations even though they give you lots of money.

I am a verizon customer and I think they are the most dishonest company I have ever dealt with. I am trapped there because of steep cancellation fees and because everyone in my family has a different renewal date.
I have comcast for cable and I am not too thrilled with them either. They are a middle eastern owned company, and it worries me that they could very well be funded by terrorists and I often receive marketing material from Comcast in Arabic. This concerns me!

It's time to stop the hegemony of private corporations over the airwaves. The public have the ultimate right to have access to the internet without paying big corporations premiums for services that the corporations decide. "Free enterprise capitalism" is NOT free and is censored by a tiny minority of the whole society. America is freedom, at least that's what Bush keeps saying: keep it FREE of minority control.

Dear Federal Commission

the dismal condition of the media in the United States today in my opinion stems from previous decisions of the Reagan era that allowed private ownership of a public domain with no return for the public good, no educational programming and certainly allowing the owners of the once public airways to use them for their private benefit allowing distortion or outright misleading of the American People. I strongly encourage you to stop further deterioration of this unchecked and unfettered sale out of public goods to private corporations, and kindly invite you to reverse previous positions that have allowed corporations to distort the civil discourse in our country.

Sincerely

It is irresponsible and contrary to the public good for the FCC to even consider turning public airwaves over to corporate entities for their own enrichment. That is counter to the very concept of "public good" and a violation of governmental trust to utilize these resources FOR the public good... not to further enrich already bloated corporations at the public's EXPENSE. Let's not make the same mistake we made in passing the Telecommunications Act of 1996. Very few corporate promises and positive projections have become reality. The Act was supposed to create jobs and keep consumer prices in check, but never did. In fact, the American public got more media concentration, less diversity, and higher prices.

I just returned from Costa Rica, a comparatively poor nation to our own, but the Costa Rican government guarantees low cost access to telephone and internet to all of its citizens. Since the greatness of the US economy is based on free enterprise, you should not allow any company that buys these frequencies to "sit on it" so that others can’t use them. The biggest threat to a democracy is an informed populous. The consolidation of the news media into the hands of a small number of corporate owners has led to a news for profit filtering of the news. By allowing corporations to hold a monopoly of the airwaves, will also lead to a lack of flow of information, competition, and innovation in the wireless world. Please don’t allow corporations to buy more than their fair share, just to not allow consumers a chance to have a choice. That is not free market.

I am a handicapped person and use the internet for shopping. This is becoming increasingly difficult since I can only get dial-up service where I live. Many websites are becoming inaccessible to dial-up because they take too long to download. My business, which enables me to support myself, is also being handicapped by the slowness of my internet connection. Please do not limit access to the airwaves. Public airways should be public and not for private profits.
Please retain these new frequencies for public domain, as there are many possibilities for providing common-access and inter-communication via these frequencies. I would hope that some cities (or even states) would take advantage of the possibilities for improving the wireless telecommunications environment for the public good: free airwaves mean greater access to commerce!! :) thank you for your consideration, james c sharp III

Public airwaves have been used historically to maintain a separate voice from the commercialized airwaves – one that does not attempt to buy and sell public opinion. By selling off public airwaves to private interests, you would be undermining an important aspect of public discourse. Please do not.

Is it not enough proof the damage to a Democracy private airwaves can do (i.e., Nazi Germany, now Fox/Murdoch) that you are willing to now eliminate ”truth” for the good of ”We, the people...”. Are you willing to hedge all of our futures and demise by ignoring history? We must have an avenue to speak of injustices and atrocities. We are at the cusp of our own existence. When we lose our voice, we lose hope - as witnessed by the current lawlessness of this administration and it's actions against it's people.

You need to require that whoever wins any airwave rights must utilize them fully within two years of award or said rights will return to public ownership. Moreover, any award to Comcast should require that Comcast provide Philadelphia area sports programming also owned by Comcast to all satellite providers on the same terms as it provides that programming to other cable providers and its own cable division.

The internet is great for democracy— it evens the playing field and helps organize folks for action, and can be a very inexpensive way to keep people informed and active in politics. It should be available to every citizen, at very low cost, but it never will be as long as corporations are able to keep competition to a minimum. Please decide to use these newly available frequencies for the public good, instead of enabling private gain. Establish mandates on public access in exchange for the privilege of using them.

Thank you,

As it is far too many television and radio stations are owned by private for profit corporations, and the "news" we receive reflects those corporate interests. The airwaves are meant to serve the public, and I vehemently oppose any attempt to further privatize.

Whou are you representing? You are wiping out the middle class and keeping people poor with catering to these big companies. Not everyone makes $100,000 and can afford all this. This is why violence is up. It is not because of one parent household. It is because people cannot afford the basics which is causing them to be in debt. They are tired of being in debt and seeing how the rich live and want it too. Then they start stilling not from the rich because they have police and high tech safety fences but from the poor just like them who have nothing.

I think enough of our freedoms are taken away from us here in the USA, this is not fair to people who already pay to have an internet service to have to pay even more to have internet service. This upsetting that AT&T, Verizon, and comcast want to take over the internet, make it impossible for common folks like my family to even have internet service. We already pay way too much to surf the internet to research news articles, to stay in touch with family members etc... I felt that we shouldn’t have to be charged anymore than what we are already paying!!!! This is Greed plain and simply. Please do not use the excuse we are doing this for the Children. I am a parent and Greandparent who is responsible to make sure that my grandchildren are not on the computer without me watching over them plus the locks that I can put on my computer to keep them away from sites that may be appalling. My Computer is in my livingroom and out in sight for anyone in my home to see what ever anyone of us is doing!!! Sick of hearing Do it for the Children, that is an old excuse, it just for Money to get more and more money. Thank You for hearing my opinion.

Please, do not stifle competition of our public airwaves. New and exciting technologies and innovations are here now and many more can be expected in the near future. This is so important for America and its future to be able to compete and keep up with the rest of the world. Keep our airwaves open for the public good. Healthy competition will eventually lead to standardization of technologies so that all brands will have to use the same standards to compete. This is good for America. Europe and other regions of the world use one standard for cell phones and other technologies, thus their service is superior to ours. They do not have dropped calls or have to buy specific brands of equipment to use on specific networks like we do here in America. America needs to keep pace with the rest of the world by allowing new innovative technologies to be made universal, regardless of who provides the service to the public airwaves. Everyone must work toward the public good. Companies should not be allowed to stifle competition by utilizing different standards and different equipment that disallows the use of cheaper and better technologies on their own individual antiquated operating systems and services. Allow new and innovative companies to compete with the larger companies by keeping the airwaves open to the most innovative and useful technologies available. The people of America deserve the best and demand the best.

Why aren’t Airwaves Public Good Grants being made available for qualified citizens to launch civic engagement projects for the benefit of their communities? Open Airwaves – could be offer an opportunity for non-profits to connect to develop programming that would help build capacity in the citizens of communities.

”Open Air” – coordinated by a diverse citizen board who would approve multi-cultural programming.

Think of it! What other country has this? Do not give airwaves or sell airwaves to the corporates who deal in airwave distribution.

Let the Open Airwaves be a Foundation...for citizen civic engagement in meaningful ways.

I am a writer and educator who uses the internet to teach my students, many of whom are from rural areas. For many of them, going to university is the first time they have had reliable internet access and I often have to spend valuable class time showing them how to use it. This should not be happening when we currently have the capability to deliver the internet cheaply and efficiently to many areas. The airwaves belong to us, especially the young students of this country.

The old way of giving away or auctioning the airwaves needs to be changed. Using public spectrum is no longer a pioneering effort that should be subsidized by the tax payer. Granting spectrum to for-profit corporations needs to be changed and licenses need to have a share of the revenue returned to the tax-payer or have a finite lease period. There is limited spectrum and it belongs to all our citizens, not just the few that generate HUGE profits from it. Let’s use what limited spectrum that is available for the public good.

Subject: You say you want a revolution...

Hi,

I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

True freedom of information will cease to exist if corporations control access to wireless Internet. The public needs you to protect airwaves so that they can be used for the public good, not be sold to the highest corporate bidder. If the U.S. is to have a truly free enterprise system, the wireless Internet must be free for innovation and competition, not controlled by a few wealthy boards of directors. There have already been too many inroads made on public television (PBS) and public radio (NPR). Keep this from happening to wireless Internet. Otherwise we will all wake up one day to find the whole country is the victim of one huge corporate takeover.

The media is one of the biggest conglomerates these days. We don't know what to believe or why things are being fed to us. What scares me most is that 90% of the public believes everthing that is fed to them. Mostly war propaganda and paris hilton CRAP!!! Lets stop the nonsense!!!! Oh and why does comcast even bother spending billions on advertising when they are the only choice out there for cable. Just to boost their egos and rub it in our faces that they are the only choice. I believe the airwaves should be free and open to the public. Selling "air" to big corporations only means that the little people (which includes me!) will either have to go without or worse. Big companies think only about one thing: dollars. They do not care about much else. I do speak from experience in this matter: if I could change to another company other than AT&T I would in a minute!

In March of 2002, the FCC "deregulated" DSL service, and we saw all of the smaller (non-Bell/ATT/etc) companies disappear from the market by the end of that year, eliminating virtually all competition in that market. Similar actions will undoubtedly lead to similar results in the wireless sector. The FCC should endeavor to avoid making the same mistake a second time, and endorse and require adherence to the Cellular Carterphone rule for wireless internet.

We no longer live in a Democracy. America has become a Corporate State who’s beuracratic systems cater only to the rich and powerful corporations of this country. It is time to start taking our country back and tell the large corporate organizations we will not tolerate their idea of government. We need congressmen that will side with the people of this country. The airwaves belong to everyone and should be kept free to the public and available to all at low cost or no cost. Internet service should be a public domain; not owned or controlled by big business.

Keeping the airwaves public is the right thing to do for our democracy. Public airwaves contribute to a robust national infrastructure, which is what we citizens want our government to be doing for us.
Taking our airwaves away from citizens and handing them over to corporate interests is nothing less than a flat-out corporate giveaway. Josh Diebel
hazel park, MI 48030

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can't enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks.

The airwaves belong to the public not private entities. It must be clear that it will be a disservice to every American if the FCC cannot recognize this basic fact. The United States is at the bottom of the list of western countries when it comes to accessibility, speed and affordability of broadband services. Why is this...because the reigns have been given to the promise of big business and no one has held them accountable to deliver on their promises. It’s time to hold them accountable now!

We saw the damage done when ownership rules were overhauled in 1996. Now a small handful of bigger companies owns all of our radio stations, and each big company uses it's stations as pawns to protect their cash cows. A perfect example in Minneapolis/St. Paul was a radio station known as Rev105, which was around in '95/'96, and is still talked about today. It didn't stick to a playlist, instead it played music from a variety of genres, and played music in the way real people play music themselves. But once large companies were allowed to consolidate ownership, this station was taken off the air and has had its format changed numerous times to coincide with actions of the parent company's largest competitor, always being used to deflect competition from its flagship station which has been the dominate station in the market for many years. In the meantime, internet radio popped up and showed people the way, making the logical leap to satellite radio, which is now absorbing the biggest names in entertainment and taking them off an increasingly boring standard radio format. Then the iPod further proved this mistake by showing that what real people want isn't just a thousand channels to select from without commercials, but really it's more about the mix of music. People are eclectic and want to listen to an eclectic mix. This led to stations such as Jack FM, which is now in many cities, and is operating by mixing it up, trying to make it so you really don't know what you'll hear next. Or the best example in the Twin Cities is a newly minted (well, 2 years ago now) public radio station called the Current, which is very much like what the aforementioned REV 105 used to be. Now all these big conglomerates which bought up all the radio stations in the country are going private, and selling off their stations. Video did not kill the radio star, but the FCC killed radio. Radio was unable to keep up with the demands of the consumer because we allowed the profit motive to drive our decision-making.

Now we stand on the precipice of allowing this to happen again with our internet providers. Currently, if you want to get good quality high speed internet service, you pay $50-$60 a month, whereas dialup costs next to nothing, but once you've used high speed, you can never go back.

Please keep these airways available.

Susan Stone

I'm appalled that there is even a question like this being discussed; also at the direction that has developed concerning ownership of radio and television outlets, and newspapers. Everything that was logical, that made sense, about the importance of broadcast and news distribution, has been flushed away over the past few years in the cost of truly free speech. But, what can we expect from an administration, who allowed Rumsfeld to say in a press conference regarding the two Washington Congressmen who were visiting Afghanistan, prior to the invasion, "they should get back here, get in line, and shut-up".

I live in a free society. This seems to mean every person for him or herself- steal all you can from the American people, and turn a buck on it. Europeans have phone service and internet that should make us green with envy. We have a bunch of rich thieves "owning" the public airways, roads, and communications companies. There are few more critical issues than whether and how public access to information is defended and expanded. The opportune availability of airwaves could easily facilitate the democratization of internet access, with dramatic effects on public information, greatly enhancing the quality of public dialogue. As our oversight agency responsible for deciding how these airways will be used, I strongly urge the FCC to rule against privatization of these airways. Public space should not be for sale.

I support this petition to keep the airwaves open to wide access. Thanks

I have an amateur radio license, (class= advanced, call= kg8pg) so I may have a different appreciation, perspective, of the whole radio spectrum, especially the value of our airwaves, not just the value in dollars either. Being allowed the use of spectrum, makes regular people, the poor, the great middle class and the wealthy, all with, for the most part, equal use, shared access. So many people feel that in America, some things should never be up for sale, with some things in America, we don’t play favorites. Please let’s not change it. See if this passes it won’t devalue spectrum, (airwaves) they’ll be worth just as much, probably more. What this will do, is to devalue human-beings. Just one more distinction to let people know, they aren’t as good or worth as much as this one or that one. It says your not equal. The internet has grown and become so great just because its equal, its not fair, after we all helped it grow, its served up. The biggest pieces going to those with the greatest ability to manipulate it.

What is this country turning into- Communist Russia where all the big corporations run the state and control the people with an iron fist? I am convinced that the integrity of our country is at stake here. I urge all Senators an Congress to represent AMerica and it’s true values here. Conclomersates should never monopolize freedom of expression and prevent competition in the marketplace. Especially where free speech is concerned. A few people already control TV and mass media in this country. This would be the worst crime committed against America called Corporate Terrorism on our citizens. Please top this madness and prevent these high powered companies from weilding the ax on all others and on America’s basic 1st and 4th amendment rights. Thank you. Someone needs to stop this ASAP!

In the 1980s, the courts decided that AT&T was in fact a monopoly and that this could not be allowed to continue. To solve the problem, the courts ruled it to be in the best interests of the public that AT&T should be forced to divest itself of certain portions of its business, and that it should be required to allow independent telecommunications providers to use the extensive communications infrastructure that AT&T had built.

When this decision was handed down, it was justified with the declaration that divestiture would promote competition, which would, in turn, bring about better service and lower prices. For a while, the industry did seem to go that way. Any number of small, independent companies sprang up, service options became more plentiful, prices went down (well, maybe).

But in the end, divestiture backfired. Many of the small companies were unable to make a go of it in the marketplace and simply disappeared. Others were eaten up by bigger fish, which in turn were gobbled up by still bigger fish. The bigger players got too full of themselves for their own good and left us stuck holding the bag for bad accounting practices and outright fraud. And today, we're nearly right back where we started, with a few megatels that are monopolies in every way but name – only now, it's worse for consumers, because as private corporations, the megatels are not subjected to anywhere near the public and governmental scrutiny as the pre-divestiture AT&T.

It would be dead wrong for the FCC to allow AT&T, Verizon and Comcast to gain the same kind of choke-hold on Internet access that they currently have on telephone service. Free access – that is, access uncensored and otherwise unfettered by corporate stockholder interests – is essential for the health and vigor of the democracy we purport ourselves to be.

Do the right thing, FCC: keep the public airwaves open for the public good!

The large telephone companies should not have the right to charge for more than the basic use as is now done. They have no right to make additional revenue based on the content that the providers I select can deliver. Their cost structure, service and offerings are the reason that I use other providers of internet, etc.

Russia has cut the number of voices which their citizens are allowed to hear. Venezuela has recently done the same. If we want to differ from these regimes we cannot allow a few corporations to control our airwaves. We must keep our internet to remain open for anyone. When it comes to the radio, controlled by right wing commentators to the dwindling number of corporations which control TV viewers, there is very little diversity in my opinion. Please do not allow a small number of corporations to begin to gobble up internet communications, too. It is not as dramatic a takeover as that which has occurred in Venezuela, but it is a takeover, nonetheless.

If corporate gatekeepers have control over our public airwaves, then we would have to possibly pay to visit a website or send a message over the internet, or heck even using a walkie-talkie...millions of our people use the internet at their leisure, and use it as a get-away from the real world. Letting big corporations take control of the airwaves, then people would not be able to do this without having to worry about how much they have to spend. Not only that, it will cause a lot of anger. People will have to use a PC or connect their laptop to a phone line in order to use the internet, and not only that, hurt most small businesses and schools whom rely on this wireless technology. Not to mention, people may even riot over this, which if you ask me is pretty stupid to fight about...but hey, we have the right for the pursuit of happiness! When part of the spectrum is auctioned off, please do the right thing and do not allow the winning bidder to limit the use of the airwaves to proprietary or anti-competitive technologies. To whom it may concern,

Our country has never gotten over having handed over its airwaves to private corporations in the 1940s and 50s. It frustrates me how many times I’ve had to explain to friends around the world that, no, ABC is NOT the American equivalent of the CBC or the BBC.) With PBS and NPR we’ve tried to play catch up, but are still well behind Britain and Canada, for instance, in having a TRULY public media whose survival isn’t constantly threatened by corporate interests and the ignorance, indifference and conflicts of interest of our legislators.

Let’s not blow it again.

And remember: disgust with the unchecked power of British corporations such as the Hudson’s Bay Company and the East India Tea Company fueled our original drive for independence. How did we lose our way???

Please stop giving away all of the rights for the people to the companies that care less about anything but their huge bonuses!!

Please stop corporate greed and monopoly.

I want the new spectrum which will be vacated by old analog broadcasters to be used for the PUBLIC GOOD...NOT to simply be "sat on" by big cable and phone companies to stifle innovations!! PLEASE allow these PUBLIC airwaves to be used for the PUBLIC GOOD, and to be used by new emerging high-speed over-the-air internet access providers, NOT by AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast!!
Please do not turn over the airwaves to private companies. Many cities across the globe, such as Tokyo, offer access to free wireless internet. The United States should be able to offer this as well.

FCC: If there was ever a no-brainer for continued public control, this is one. This path that government is no good and that the private sector is, is as falacious as it can be. I worked for the federal government for over 42 years, and this dramatic change in its perceived purposes and what is beneficial for its people and long term good of the nation has all but disappeared by this despicable large corporation managed fascists nation by definition. To say that there is competition by private sources and that there is less to none by government has in practice turned out to be the reverse. Ask yourselves, when has the last Anti-Trust suit been brough to bear on any large corporation during the past six years? I know of none. I rest my case. J. Dominic R. It is a concern that radio stays a free, unsolicited, open forum for debate, variety of programming, diversity of shows, uncontrolled by a few big conglomerates. I oppose this ordeal and would not support this issue and would rather keep as is, with MORE- funding for public television and radio, which isn't in the cards currently.

Though we do need successful companies for a healthy capitalist state, we also need to ensure accessibility of basic services (which is what the internet is becoming) to the poorest among us, as a truly healthy economy should be judged by the quality of life of the poorest. The internet could become the great equalizer, making it a right the access the vast marketplace of the country, not a divisive segregated privilege. Free up the internet and put more money in the pockets of middle and underclass Americans.

We are writing today regarding control of the new spectrum of airwaves and the pending issue of how, or who, should control them – and for what purposes? Companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast only want to use them for private gain instead of the public good. These airwaves belong to the public and access should not be limited to a few or simply the highest bidder. The airwaves should be to the largest extent possible, for ordinary people. The airwaves should become similar to a public library or highway, rather than the restricted country club they are now. This can only happen, if you the policy makers create rules that open the airwaves to everyone. Corporations want to establish permanent property rights over the public airwaves, shutting ordinary people out. This spectrum would then be bought and sold to the highest bidder. Citizen access would be virtually non-existent and the public would be at the whim of the huge corporations for information.

These newly available airwaves are an once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize things like internet access and the possibility of beaming high-speed internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than is currently available.

Use the public airwaves for the public good; do not turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless revolution. As I'm sure you are aware, the phone and cable companies want to block this progress. They've spent billions laying wires and buying influence, and enjoy having the public locked in with few alternatives.

Give us choice and not monopoly; as without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can't enter the marketplace. Please do not continue to place these huge conglomerates that do what is in their best interest in charge of what belongs to the people; it is time that we the people do what is in the best interest of the people.

At what point does the FCC protect the public good? With that question in mind; put the public airwaves into the hands of ordinary people.

The decision facing the FCC should be clear - Please remember: "... of the people, by the people, and for the people."

We are already suffering from the near monopoly that has been allowed to exist in the oil and gas industry. Information is our country's greatest asset. We cannot put its distribution in the hands of a few mega-corporations.

I wholeheartedly agree that whoever wins the auction should not be allowed to stifle competition and innovation. The penalty for doing so is already established but not enforced. Failure to carry any and all types of data should result in loss of "common carrier" status. Anything less will lead to oligarchy (more so than already exists).

to my knowledge the only reason the fcc originally regulated the usage of airwaves was for the public good in the case of radio and television. Please don't loose sight of the fact that in the current situation wireless internet airwaves serve the public best by being freely available and not auctioned to the biggest corporations with the biggest pockets. As an IT worker with 3 years of experience as a sole proprietor, I feel strongly that wireless internet airwaves should be left to the open and free. As we shape tomorrow’s society, it is important that people of all income levels access the internet. In any case, wireless networks still need to terminate at telecom backbones. These companies can regulate their cost of bandwidth usage and the free market will adjust. In the meantime, many small businesses will arise out of the availability of the airwaves, but not if they are owned by large corporations. Please don’t auction off God’s air-waves

Mussolini said that the definition of the fascist state was one in which government and business interests were synonymous. Give the airwaves to big business, auction off our real freedoms, and the ”freedom” trumpeted by blue and red alike will only reveal itself to be only a slogan of a unanimous fascist political-economic state. If ”fascism” seems like just such a slogan to you, an empty epithet used by the Left, I suggest you take account of the consolidation of business interests and degradation of personal liberties that have occurred these past ten years. Stop now.

As a combat vet I fought for "liberty and justice for all"... I did not not shed blood for any form of dictatorship, that includes market control of the THE PUBLIC AIRWAVES.

Do not dare to further besmorch the good name and honor of those of us who fought for freedom by furthering fascism through the Corporate State. We the People....

The privatization of public airwaves is a slap in the face to the very foundation of this country and its founding fathers. To quote Thomas Jefferson, "Educate and inform the whole mass of the people... They are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty.”
The internet should belong to me and others like me who, as individuals use it for our benefit, and not that of large wireless companies like AT&T or Verizon! Let’s keep the internet free for ourselves!

The public airways are part of the Commons, they are not available to be taken over by a Democratic government. Corporate ownership of the Commons would effectively curtail public access and use. Public use of the airways has spawned so many innovations already that it seems counterintuitive to try to put access rights into corporate hands. Please do not take yet another free speech, free thought, free expression venue away from the American citizens. This is akin to regulating air consumption.

One of the major benefits of the present hard-wired Internet access methodology is that it is practically tamper-proof. Further, in most cases it is possible to trace a connection directly to the actual computer that is making the connection. Taking the Internet exclusively to the airwaves would make evesdropping and clandestine origination relatively simply to accomplish. Think what this would do to our Homeland Security! Further, I am opposed to putting this vast capability into the hands of those whose past record indicates they do not have the public’s best interest at heart, and the idea of putting it into the hands of the likes of AT&T curdles my blood. Turn it down!

To whom it concerns, it is imperative that the airwaves are protected from money mongers who want to stifle our freedome of them.

I am a senior citizen 84 years old and my family is scattered all over the country. My computer is my main means of keeping in touch with them as I can’t afford phone bills. I am not the only senior who would be affected if those companies get control of what should be free to anyone. There are too many of our freedoms being taken away from us and something needs to be done about it.

The usefulness of the Internet can not be overstated. In the UK everyone has high speed. What’s the matter with us?

Edlin Patterson
Penn Valley, CA 95946

Currently there are limited ways in which the general public can freely access the internet (public terminals at libraries, limited numbers of free WiFi zones in urban areas, etc.) and other ways which can be done cheaply – such as via a cheap dial-up connection though they tend to require other expenses such as a physical telephone line, or existing cable hookups. Right now I can access the internet from my phone from anywhere but it comes at a steep premium—far more than the average citizen is willing to pay. But the ability for me to be able to do this is a tremendous timesaver and indispensible when out and about saving me money by avoiding traffic, finding relevant stores and restaurants near to me versus driving farther out and at the same time supporting local businesses, looking up information to aid a task at hand, and so forth. Cheap, widely available internet needs to be a baseline stepping stone so we can push the United States higher up in the list of connected countries and to encourage greater technological innovation by getting the masses connected and with immediate, always-on internet, wherever they go. Public airwaves, if sold to private companies, need to have stipulations on those private companies in the deal to ensure that they do not stifle competition and innovation.

If we have more choice in Internet services it means more competition. More competition and innovation creates better products and services. This kind of market is what our country is founded on. Re: Public Airwave
What are you thinking about!
I know technology is fast changing and evolving but the current "market" is not even close to competitive, much less serving public good.
I went to cable to be exposed to "less commercials," so I PAID for the service. (Remember free TV signals were paid by advertisers) I now have a analog TV set that will be useless without a cable in 2009; pay for a signal, the TV will absorb 125 channels but I receive 79 channels and 45 are useless to me! 5 channels are my local ones I can get by an antenna. A "black box decoder" apparently cannot be gotten to receive x amount of signals chosen by the consumer and there are superfluous tax charges. My $35.99/month dollar cable bill has risen to %58.00 per month. Miami area has 12 different companies but start-up costs make the first 2 years a waste of money. Satellite drops in bad weather at the neighbors AND $100 BOX PER TV UNIT IS CRAP!
I use computer at the office and I get "SPAMMED" at least 52 to 74 time per day!
I got a cell phone for Hurricane Floyd because it appeared so massive in news reports. It turned out not to hit Miami and I kept the phone for 2 years. (Verizon). Because I only dialed out, the phone was never on. It wasn't until I travelled that I found out that the U.S. did not include El Dorado Hills California! I had the US plan! Signal not in range! Also, when I repeatedly went to sales/repair office, the "internal" antenna of a seldom used cell phone was broken and I was advised I could BUY a new phone and now get a contract! My original phone was not with a contract - hmmm I wonder why I couldn't get a signal!
I am an AT&T phone user; I use the "one-plan; unlimited " Local/Long distance for $78.00 all inclusive. .Can't seem to get SERVICE for $39.99 as advertised without additional plan costs as it should be. I don't talk worth $78 but keep the land line for emergency and would shut it off if a phone wasn't necessary.
IN CLOSING, UNTIL YOU HAVE A GENERAL PUBLIC (individual/not commercial) THAT GIVES AN 85% APPROVAL SERVICE/PRODUCT RATING, YOU SHOULD NOT AWARD 1 BLESSED THING MORE TO COMMUNICA-

Big Business just keep getting fatter and fatter and with that comes greed. We as the people need to have our voices heard and we most definitely need to take action to put a stop to keep corporate gatekeepers from stifling innovations and competitions from any market. The FCC needs to make the right decision on this one, and that's use the "public" airwaves for the public good!!

Please remember that government bureau excesses often have to be reversed by Congress, or worse, nationalization. Separately, when folks bought up names on the internet to "warehouse" or to resell them, Federal courts reversed this trend because of the obvious misuse of valuable property. The FCC should not get caught in the Congressional-correction nor the Federal-courts trap.

If the FCC allows this take-over by avaricious corporations like AT&T, it will be another nail in the coffin of what used to be our democratic country. I am presently forced to be a customer of AT&T because I have no option and I have never dealt with a more ruthlessly opportunistic company in all of my 74 years. I would like to behave as if we were still a country... as if this were still the United States of America and not the United Corporation of America... As if we were still the government of, for and by the "people" and not the Corporations. I'm sick and tired of having to decide between supper or prescription drugs for my kids and of working 12 hour days and having nothing to show for it. I miss my wife and she and I miss our kids. I realize that the corporate profits won't be as predictable as those generated by your war on Iraq - but if you cut me even just a little slack, I'll spend the money with the corporations soon enough anyway - I'll just feel like I have a little more dignity and control over my life. And maybe I can get my kids through college someday and help to make our nation stronger by helping them to be productive members of our society. Hell, maybe they'll invent something or discover a cure for some disease. Maybe they'll build a better mousetrap or help others to live a more learned and productive life. Could we just try to be a great nation once or twice in a year. Could we fake it till we make it? Does anybody care?

The continuous and damaging consolidation of power and influence in all aspects of American life is sapping the future of our middle class as well as future generations of Americans. Turning over large portions of the public airwaves to huge corporate entities like AT&T and Verizon is representative of this rapidly burgeoning problem. I believe that the FCC would be abdicating its duty to oversee the use of the public airwaves for the public good if it allows this plan to go forward.

Dear FCC,
Let's turn these untapped airwaves over to local, state and federal emergency responders and federally fund the development of a broadband national public safety network that provide both voice and data interoperability and advanced communications for the responders who need it most. The cost to design, deploy and operate this network could be accomplished at a fraction of the cost of a commercial network and would be more reliable and secure. Please don't squander this critical spectral resource on a profit driven corporation. The US public deserves better communications networks for its responders and this is the way to go. Thanks!

Telecommunication companies have been given all the freedom and leeway possible, at some point we need to reclaim some of our own bandwidth for ourselves. These companies, corporations, and conglomerates have taken every inch and opportunity available to gouge consumers for the essential communication services the world relies on in the 21st century. Open access is essential to a democracy. Keep the web in the hands of the many.

The public airwaves should belong to the public. Many people are prevented from using the internet because of the exorbitant prices cable and phone companies charge for access. These are the very people who would benefit most by using the internet to get access to information and products with lower prices.

These are called public airwaves. This means it is for the public good. Not for big business.
The United States has been a country that encourages innovation. Areas like wireless internet are where we can still lead the world since we don't produce steel, tvs or clothes much anymore. Thanks!

We don't want corporations owning the airwaves. Freedom of speech is the real beauty of the Internet. Where else can we find news without spin and articles that include referenced documents for us to read; just by clicking? We don't need corporate/government control of the Internet. Now that mainstream news can be trusted to offer only fluff, spin and fear, we need the Internet to be - by the people, for the people, and of the people. Our government certainly is not. Where else can we cry for freedom to the millions listening? Where else can we have hope and witness the courage of those millions who are active in the good fight the fight for American Freedom of speech and the fight to keep our Constitution alive. This is exactly why the control is necessary by corporations and the government. They want us to be dumb to the takeover of the US and they cant do it as long as people can expose corporations and government over the Internet. That is the important issues around the freedom of the Internet.

Dear FCC:
Public airwaves should not be auctioned to just a select few companies. They should be spread out to as many companies as possible to foster competition and innovation. Please ensure that you foster such innovation through well thought out actions and auctions. Thank you.

Although the "cat has been out of the bag" for a decade now, in my opinion, airwaves should NEVER be "sold" to ANY entity, for ANY purpose. Leasing is ok, but they should never sold. A century from now, it will be clear that this was a really stupid thing to have done.

Please embrace democracy and our public’s good... stifled capitalism is not America’s strong trait.

Please do not turn over the available public airways to companies like AT&T, Verizon and Comcast. Please keep these newly available airways available for the public good.

I am extremely tired of the relentless privatization of the public airwaves under this administration. It is past time for the bandwidth grab to end.

The air waves shouldn't be strangled by the bi corporations. Don’t they already take enough of my money?

Please stay out!

The country is founded on several key principals, one of which is freedom of the press. If media consolidation continues, we will lose our freedome. Stop any further consolidation of the media and oppose Rupert Merdock’s purchase of Dow Jones.

The public airways belong to all Americans. Just as Yosemite and the Grand Canyon and the great Lakes are part of our "commons" and our natural heritage, so, too, are our airwaves. They should never be given up to any media conglomerate or media company. They get to use them by your agency licensing them and taking fees for their use. They do not now and should not ever subsume ownership! They belong to us and our children's children, period. No gatekeepers, no privatization. If these companies don't want the current arrangement, perhaps they can go to China or some other country and try to buy the public spaces. I'm sure other media companies could fill in if the current crop won't comply. You represent the citizens of the US and not the business sector, period!!!!

| This government is doing a fabulous job of simultaneously destroying the fabric of our system with privatization while continuing to expand on its size with wasteful new departments and programs. Don't turn our public airwaves into a system designed by the Pentagon model: privatization of a necessary entity to increase the personal wealth of a select few Americans. We now have a 4th Branch of government that no one talks about: paid mercenaries.

Other countries I visit have much more inovation in their service at only ten-percent of the cost in the USA. Please keep the public airwaves out of the private sector. It breeds bad news if it is allowed into the hands of large broadcast companies. Protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

Something needs to be done to control TV personalities, speaking for themselves or their networks, who create a spin that influences listeners/watchers and change the actual dynamic of electoral races. I am not referring to voiced opinions, or visiting pundit opinions, but organized concerted efforts by a network or specific show to skew facts or to control public opinion. ie: Bill O'Reilly in general. Chris Matthews hatred for Hillary Clinton. That idiot Tucker Carlson. Even in a show for , by and about punditry, their should be disclaimers, apologies, explnations, and people being questioned should be permitted to finish their statements, even if the host disagrees with them. Time and time again we are subjected to mega-companies buying up other mega-companies. This is another attempt by the mega-companies buying up what has traditionally been the airwaves of the general public. Another federal agency is bending to the pressure (or accepting future offers?) of big money business with little if any concern for us, the voters and revolutionaries. Where are the "clear" airwaves for the First Responders?

Please keep our airways public.

The corporations need to be regulated. It is the responsibility of government to be competent at regulating the economy. Government must be independent. As for the corporations, it is their JOB to try to take over everything so they are just doing their job. Government however is NOT private economic or corporate interest. Public access is just that, and it should be available to let us say 90% of the American public. So access, in general, should be increased, not decreased. This is not the concern of any private or corporate entities. These are simple public airwaves to be accessed, for free or nominal cost, and fully secure and regulated, by the entire public and the society. That is all. There is nothing more to say about this. I know what I am talking about. The government’s interests are completely, utterly distinct from that of the business community. Public things are simply and utterly public things. The Bush administration may perhaps be completely ignorant about it. Who knows? You never talk to us anyway. You must NOT pursue wrong policies. Of course, we are going to remove you people anyway, in 2008. Not regulate your freedoms or rights, no. We would not do to you what you do to us.

The publicly-owned airwaves are priceless and belong to the people. They must never be sold or public control and access guaranteed in the Constitution and Bill of Rights as freedom of the press will be utterly compromised. Public ownership of the airwaves is a fundament of democracy governed by "we the People," You must retain them in the hands of the people and not let them be stolen away.

Now is the time for the government to TRULY be of, by and for the people. As you know power to control information to the public is already highly concentrated in the hands of a few media moguls. Using these new airwaves for the public good will be good for the economy because it will encourage new innovation and entrepreneurship! Already phenomena such as corporate mergers and media consolidation are a huge threat to freedom. The potential for dictatorship grows as these things continue. The public airwaves must serve the public good. We have seen the horrendous decline in journalism standards in part due to the consolidation that was allowed in the broadcast industry. We can not repeat the same mistakes in wireless broadband frequencies. The current telecom providers exist not to serve the public, but to enrich shareholders. They can not, and must not be given custody of this national asset.

As a web developer I want the airwaves for public, not private use.
I think that big communications companies, particularly in the cable TV and home internet areas have far too little reason to ever lower prices. I have been a customer of Comcast (my only option is not to have cable TV or have dial up internet) and feel that every month I am gouged for the the amount of service I use. More competition and options by current companies is sorly needed! I do not feel that the current companies have been great stewards of the public trust so far, why would we give them even more??
Would you also auction off the public waterways? What won't you give away?

The public airwaves in the United States have, to a greater and greater extent, come under the control of corporate interests, who use them in service of profits. These are PUBLIC airwaves, NOT corporate airwaves, and the F.C.C. MUST fulfill its mandate as a government agency by working for the public good and curtailing corporations' control of, and use of, these public airwaves. As such I urge the F.C.C. in the strongest possible terms to act in the public interest by keeping the airwaves public and not turning them over to corporate control.

As we have seen other countries become dominant in many manufacturing sectors and even service jobs outsourced beyond our borders, our nation needs to boost economic opportunity as much as possible. By keeping airwaves public, this important commodity remains available to innovators who may come up with all kinds of new modalities for their use, stimulating the creation of new jobs.

I believe strongly that we should enable competition, not stifle it. Selling these newly available airwaves to large corporations may be good for a few large communications corporations, but does not serve the greatest public interest.

Privatizing public access stations is equivalent to loosing fair and free access to local community information and free speech. I strongly oppose this idea and would lose all respect for the companies participating in these projects. I would hold these companies as responsible as the federal government for taking away community individuality and censoring, open and free information.

It’s really quite simple. The air waves belong to the people not the corporation. We lose too much by not allowing real competition to work so that the public has access to what is becoming the only information source not run by a handful of companies whose biggest and most vital agenda is to make sure that these companies continue their monopoly. Breaking up monopolies at the beginning of the last century helped the that century be one of growth and innovation. You have the opportunity to produce similar results for this century. I urge you to embrace that future, not one of shrinking innovation and fuedalistic capitalism.

<td>We can all see how what we have left of the &quot;public airwaves&quot; is harding for the publics’ use at all. Money and commercial have most everything sewed up; and the Public Broadcasting System receives so little funding from the government anymore that they must spend an enormous amount of their time and dollars on fundraising. Just like our politicians. Money and commercial interests seem to have taken over more than just our &quot;public airwaves&quot;. Has anyone spent any time in England and watched their BBC? Has anyone spent any time in any of the other industrialized nations and learned about their national health care systems? We, as a people, had better wake up and the sooner the better, before it’s too late. Sincerely, Carol Morra</td>

The line between government and corporations is being blurred everyday, gradually. If corporations become in control of public airwaves, I see them gradually censoring more information which they may feel is not favorable for their business, or the government’s interests. When money gets involved, the truth tends to gets skewed in the direction of the people who are making the money. Public airwaves are public and non-profit, unbiased, and should remain that way. We, as a country are going down a slippery slope if this outlet for the truth becomes controlled by big business.

Corporations or anyone else other than the general public should NOT have any monopoly or preferential privileges in their access to the PUBLIC airways. The Public airways primary purpose is to SERVE the general public NOT the bank account of special interests or corporations. Lest make sure that this is the way that this is the way that this system works.

The public airways are just that; public and no large group should have the sole rights or the right to limit.

The air cannot be owned. Leave it free of greed.

The free exchange of information is necessary for the future of our democracy.
It is absolutely essential that these public airways be developed for the common good. Information sharing and network-building is at the heart of a strong democracy and should absolutely be encouraged by all means. Corporations should not be allowed to purchase public airwaves to stifle competition.

Dear FCC, Please do not let the big name companies have more control for setting up monopolies on the internet waves. Please make decisions that will be for the good of all and not just a few. Please make the public air waves available for the public good. We need representation that reflects what "We The People" want instead of the poor judgement in major issues that our congress and other government representatives continue to use in deciding on Major issues that affect our nation. I have run away repeatedly from the likes of AT&T only to find myself back in their clutches with another product that has yet sold out. Brazil is now finding out what hostile take overs really mean as Hugo Chavez has dismantled the media and press along with assuming control of other agencies that serve that countries citizens. Even among protest and rebellion. Americans have had their best interests repeatedly trampled on by big business and special interests. I'm a senior citizen living on a very limited income. I don't subscribe to cable tv or own a cell phone, as the cost of both is prohibitive. I do have high speed internet as dial-up didn't work in my area. High speed service costs a scandalous $44.75 a month (that's $539.40 annually). Can you in conscience justify giving such companies as AT&T, Verizon, Time Warner and Comcast the power to charge even more than they do now?

Just look at the oil and gas and pharmaceutical industries how they are raping the public while government overseers only seem to sweep a clean path for them to raid the public treasury. It would be refreshing to see the public win this battle to keep the airways for the public good and deprive the corporate CEO's from their multi million dollar bonuses.

Time for a change of policy... Free market systems (or “The Washington Consensus”) have been economically proven inefficient under certain conditions. This is one of those conditions. A new public/private partnership has to be developed to help foster innovation, improve services, and provide a breathing ground for the next generation of new small businesses that will push America forward.

I need more affordable options—not fewer—for a high-speed internet connection. Living on a small farm, I have only one option now, a Verizon 24k dial-up connection, advertised for twice the speed, but never available at that speed. I know that the FCC has tried to give away the Public Airwaves before and that there was a record public response against it and that ground level response came from a vast variety of people. This is essential to the Freedom of our Country.

Please don’t sell off another piece of our precious freedom to the corporations!!

Never sell out the public ownership of airwaves. Corporatization of public intelligence is the death knell of any free society, not to mention of any society. It is the socio-economic path on which growth goes the way of blind emplire and decline – the path of the cancerous parasitism.

The public owns the airwaves. Do not give them to near-monopoly companies.

Where is the First Amendment freedom of the press in the Murdochization of our media?

America is truly blessed. We, however, have seen less appreciation of all our blessings especially the manner in which the federal government doals our resources out to big business. Now the FCC has an opportunity to give a resource to the people and they are being drawn to – yup once again big business. Stop consider public airwaves for the public good. Once it’s gone it’s gone.

Restricting market growth stifles innovation. The long-term effect of this is less effective and efficient systems that cost consumers more or aren’t able to provide the best service to all customers.

Our country needs a tax-payer sponsored communication system dedicated to training the public on issues facing the nation. An important feature should be the availability of a TV network to be used for political debates and presentations in lieu of the money race forced on today’s political contestants. Our political system is being corrupted by special interest and lobbyist that make political contributions with expectations of great returns in political favors. The political playing fields could be leveled if we wanted a more fair system. Instead of paying perks to lobbyist and special interest, the taxpayers would be far better off paying for a government owned and managed communication system.

Please consider the public good, rather than corporate profits if making your ruling. These are PUBLIC airwaves, and the public needs your help. The future is now; the enormous opportunities for education and innovation that a truly universal internet make possible can only be a benefit to our country. And please remember, some other countries will make these parts of the electromagnetic spectrum truly public. These countries WILL pull ahead of the USA economically through their use. A vote to turn the public airwaves over to corporate use (or LACK OF USE) is a vote against a stronger America. Thank You for Your Consideration - Chester Clarke

I am ashamed that the United States, among industrialised countries, has the slowest and most expensive broadband in the world. This is technology that we invented but that we do not have access to due to the greed of the telecom co. For once please make a decision that will be good for US and not big business. For the $60.00 per month that I am paying Comcast for so called "hi speed" internet, I should be getting at least 10 times the speed that I am getting. But we will never have that as long as the telecoms are allowed to conspire to stifle competition.

You as the federal government split AT&T and SBC into two companies now you allow them back together and give them the right to start all over again in charging us more for are phone services. I just got my first bill from AT&T my recovery charge is .99 cents now they send me a notice that it is going up to a $1.99 in July. They have another charge in there for Western Wayne county? Where is western Wayne county from Northern or Southern or Eastern Wayne county. This will probable not be read other then myself as I type this so have a nice day and see if you can charge me more money on something soon for god forbid that I have extra dollar in my hand at the end of this month.

We do not want innovation and creativity to be turned over to large companies who will stifle competition.

Keep the public airwaves for the general public and not for the large corporations who will make loads of money off the general public.

The airways should be truly public. We don’t need companies such as AT&T running our lives. Keep the internet free!

How dare you even consider doing this!

Not good what is happening to internet radio... as well

Please stop giving or selling for virtually no money public property. We do not want private companies controlling the internet.

For Heaven’s sake. Do what you are suppose to be doing. Protect our Freedoms. NOT the Big Money, Big Business Interests. PLEASE.
Stifling the Internet will close the last-resort avenue of information outside Main Stream Media control. Without an alternative voice, Freedom of the Press will be effectively silenced in America as well as the rest of the world.

The communications industry should be forced to allow equal air time for all candidates for pub-they must pay to use our resource. This would

FCC, please do not turn over public airwaves to private companies. Information that we citizens of the U.S. are able to get is systematically being denied us by our own government similar to what Hugo Chavez is doing in Venezuela (another example is the denying of journalist filming what’s happening in Iraq). Turning over the airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, etc. will further allow more restrictions. For the sake of freedom, democracy, and the public good, please don’t do this.

The continual mergers of corporations in our country are ensuring that there will be an increasing lack of competition. To give some of these same companies airwaves that should be used only by and for the public is to show an enormous lack of integrity and concern for the American public. Because the current system is for private companies only for profit, there is no investigative reporting to give citizens the truth about what is happening in the towns, states, nation and world. The way the system is now is destroying democracy because corporations using public airwaves to exercise freedom of suppression including the blackout of political candidates who may disagree with them. We need a forum where every candidate gets equal quality and quantity time to discuss their biography, record, issues and platform without paying enormous money for 60 second ads for media corporate profit. The citizens are losing, the nation is losing and the world is losing, and democracy is losing. Because investigative reporting is an expense that lowers profits, news is being reduced to the incumbents propaganda press releases, commercial releases presented like news, an overemphasis on street violence, and stupid attempts at entertainment. Corruption in government is spreading because officials have to raise huge amounts of money for campaign funds which are spent on corporate media ads of little worth and little dignity. We need a public broadcast system of public airwaves that is dedicated to candidates, all candidates for no cost, in which all citizens can receive at no cost. The airwaves have the potential of being a means to education of all kinds of disciplines that would raise public awareness, and provide healthy input. Instead, it is indeed more and more a "wasteland" of such bad humor that no one would think funny without a laugh track, a wasteland that is full of violence and now soft pornography which is growing more explicit. No where on any channels on TV are times allocated to public opinion, like newspapers which have letters to the editor. The concentration of corporate ownership of channels of public airwaves makes hearing and discussion of many points of view, the backbone of democracy, all but gone. We do not get to hear our legislators. We get special reports of the president's propaganda without getting to hear from another view. This situation is adding to the power of an oligarchical fascist media and government. The current situation is not what the founders of this country intended. That the media is all "libera" is merely a conservative GOP myth, a strategic spin. Do a study of how much time and the quality of time given to each current presidential candidate and you will see the extreme bias and the preselecting of our candidates by the few who own most of our media. John Nichols of The Nation magazine has said it all very well in his book, Tragedy and Farce. I especially do not want companies like AT&T and Verizon expanding their control of the public airwaves. They are companies that gave information about their customers to the government without a warrant and did not protect our privacy.

Please, quickly approaching my senior years and every day the price of simple services skyrocket to the advantage of these big companies. Don't give them any more opportunities.

Stop selling what belongs to all of us to the corporatocracy! Why should these companies make billions by selling us what is essentially ours?

How long are We The People of The United States Of America going to let BIG MONEY gauge us? We are already in debt to CHINA for Billions if not Trillions of dollars, The Petroleum giants got us by the throat with such high prices, the middle class is almost extinct and now you want to give one of the few things left for the public to compete and have a fair share to these Mogul companies. Please don't do it. Please do something right for a change. Thank you

It’s unbelievable that there is even an issue regarding how to allocate the additional public airwaves. These additional airwaves must be used to make the US more competitive. Giving them to international corporations (such as Comcast and AT&T) to sit on, makes no sense. It will not encourage competition or innovation. As usual, the American people will be the losers.

The people own the public airwaves and they should only be utilized for the public good, not private profit. The portion of our public airwaves you are now considering farming out to companies such as AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast, who intend to use this precious public commodity to stifle innovation and competition in the wireless marketplace. Allocate most of this space for free election debates by all candidates of the two major federal parties and any additional federal independent or minority party federal candidates, and for local community programming throughout the country as allocated by the elected local representatives and city or town councils. This portion of our public airwaves could also be used by CSPAN, PBS and NPR and other public, non-profit programming, especially from local colleges and community groups. It is time that a large portion of the peoples' airwaves directly served the people. Then maybe those we elect would not have to sell their souls to special interests in order to win an election.

Please make sure that our networks fair and balanced information. There are already too many commercials and too much trivia and propaganda instead of getting all the news we Americans would like to know about without having to search the internet for it or watch BBC. We hardly ever hear about the genocide in Darfur which has been going on for years. We get very little news about the war in Afghanistan and a lot more about the ILLEGAL war in Iraq over oil.

Since divestiture in 1984, the electorate has been robbed of it's National Treasure, the Network. None of these so called ”Phone Companies” is reimbursing the electorate for the use of our Network. Here is something everyone can understand: The electorate built the Network and the companies over 125 years, ergo the electorate owns the Network, therefore any technology developed by that Network belongs to the electorate. We are being asked to pay for our own property by the squatters. I for one do not condone this.

Dear FCC:

We all know what has happened since 1986 when Ronald Reagan engineered the commercial network's dream wishlist into reality by having time limitations for commercials eliminated. With rare exceptions commercial television and its so-called programs have become nothing more than delivery vehicles for an almost endless stream of advertising. Indeed, some programs are nothing more than thinly-veiled ads in and of themselves. The airwaves belong to the people, not a few individuals whose greed knows no bounds. The soon-to-be-available new airwaves must not be controlled by such people or their corporations. Air space is too rare an asset to be turned over to the pigs. They already have too much. Please use the public airwaves for the public good.

It is imperative that the airwaves be used for public use.

The public airways are not meant for private oversight or profit. Does anyone in the FCC have a Websters Dictionary??

The airwaves should be used for the public benefit and should not be the domain of a few large corporations. Please do not let this happen.

The airwaves belong to the people and should be used to serve the people.

Public radio and TV on our public airwaves is one of the treasures of communication. They have greater variety than private stations and are not under the thumb of advertisers. The wireless internet also needs to be protected from corporate take over. The public helps fund through membership, but it is the government which makes this medium possible.

Our airwaves are meant to be free and accessible by all not just corporations and money makers.

When the government deregulated prices for most of our things such as oil, and even internet to some degree, they said that the market place would regulate themselves, and set prices. Well, now it comes to the airways! Leave them open and let's see what the innovaters can come up with! Don't let the major players tie it up for their own profits. That will stifle all the new techniques and innovations that can come from this! Open it up to true competition!

Public airwaves belong to the people! Do not turn them over businesses for profit. I enjoy and learn from public radio and television.

What ever happened to fair competition, meaning having a choice of cable providers? For me, and for the residents in the town I live in, its "Comcast" or nothing at all. Something should be done about this.

Why give the FCC something else it cannot enforce as well as more money to mismanage while it seems it has difficulty trying to perform it's normal lawful charge of managing "our" airwaves!

Public airwaves belong to "THE PUBLIC" and should not be given over to large companies who will control them for their benefit and profit, and stifle the competitive market, and hamper growth and revolution within the internet. It is the job of "You" - "Our Elected Government Members" - to protect the rights of the public - and to keep our public airwaves in our hands - not in the hands of large corporations.

We already pay through the nose for services. It is time the government looked out for us and not the big corporations.
Anytime there is coompetition between companies and 'just' citizens - I hope the citizen wins. Families would no longer be forced to choose solely between high-priced phone and cable Internet. A new wireless market including lots of competition within that market would mean more affordable Internet access for families.

I am a 54 year old American. I have seen so many "freedoms" slide away into the ozone...in a rather sublime manner: we didn't notice...we were distracted by the need for mere economic survival!! I do NOT want to see more freedoms go to big corporations so they can finish off the job of economic rape. Americans who once thought they were doing a good job of working, taking care of their families, in short, living the "American Dream" are barely keeping their lives above water. DON'T continue to take from us...our well is running dry. Is a good life to be just for the rich? The middle class is gone, working class is dying, and many of us are becoming the "working poor" on $40,000 a year.

I can hardly believe most of the terrible programing on the TV news channels. They are like the sensational trash magazines. They emphasize "if it bleeds, it leads. They also emphasize scandal. The time they spent on that promiscuous Danielle Smith was like reading one of the worst trash magazines. I had to stop watching any of the major news stations and confine my news information to NPR and C-span

Air and waves through them should be available to everyone—please do not capitulate on this matter—we the people cannot afford to lose our freedom of speech any more than we already have—if only the corporate may speak, what will the artists, philosophers, designers, writers, poets (those things that make life bearable) do? If it is all about just the bottom line and selling and buying—we have lost our souls!

Don't fence us in!

keep our airwaves for public need not corporate greed

No more monopolies-stop this insanity, we live in America, where we deserve freedom-this will only drive prices higher, and they are high enough

Please protect our airways from corporation

Please donot turn airways over to private companies leave air waves to the public and not in 4 nor 5 companies That will be dictators and raise prices out of sight

No more monopolies-stop this insanity, we live in America, where we deserve freedom-this will only drive prices higher, and they are high enough

If the FCC does not protect our public airwaves, who will; we are already limited in who provides telephone service and cable-TV so why should we be limited even further when it comes to the Internet. Those of us on fixed incomes don’t have the options others do and allowing big companies like AT&T, Verizon, and/or Comcast make the rules is not right nor fair.

The Internet would never have become what it is today had one company or government been in control of it. We live in a free enterprise system. The consumers should control the market, not the other way around. The Internet is the one great leveling factor in terms of competition. It doesn't matter how big or small you are, you can succeed if you try. That used to be true of all business in this country, but we have optimized the corporate and political engines to the point where that is no longer true.

PUBLI C – It means of the people. Not AT&T, Verizon, etc. Back in the days when we used to have good telephone service, reasonable rates and a responsive provider it was because AT&T was a government sponsored monopoly that was held accountable to the people, not the stockholders and upper management. Why should a $30,000/year wage earner pay for a public good just so people who are already rich can afford to buy the public trust and get richer?

The FCC should continue to be the sole, only one to operate the public airwaves. The public good will not be served by profit corporations. We see enough degredation of values in the current corporate programing. It has gotten to the place that we have PBS and C-Span only unless we take a chance. It usually turns out disappointing. Lets keep these innovations and the wireless internet operating for the public good.

earned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don't want this competition to their Internet service—they'd rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

You can sign the petition I signed here—urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

I am tired of mega-companies making this country use only a handfull of companies for services needed. This is NOT a free marketplace and is closer to a monopoly. I cannot control what comes over my television set, and there is so much garbage I do not want, but still have to pay for. Then on the other hand there are stations that I would love to have, but they are not available to me. Nothing free market about that! As for phones I am tired of having calls dropped, dead areas where there is no reception, and being locked into contracts with no way out and limited options as to phones and plans. I thought that we as a nation would let the market place drive the companies, but what we have is the exact opposite. We are at the mercy of these companies. Bring back anti-trust laws if need be, but stop the spread of mega-corporations that have only their bottom line and their stockholders as their interests.

I live in the out fringe areas of our town and internet service is very high in cost. To do something that will stifle the competition is not in the best interest of anyone. Please think about those of us who have to pay a premium for our service because we have no access from our local phone companies.

You have turned the FCC into a rubber stamp for corporate moopolies. When are you going to represent consumers? Through deregulation you have made sure I have only 2 choices for tv, 2 choices for internet access, print news that fires hundreds of reporters and journalists weekly whild local news is being outsourced to India. We consumers want fair competition, not competition controlled by giant monopolies. I want more choices for wireless sources- not more AT&T, Comcast,Sprint.

Since when are monopolies permitted in this country? Were large corporations made to sell off parts of their whole? Let’s keep the airwaves competitive for everyone and give everyone a chance. After all, isn’t that the American way!?

With the administration of the public airways in the hands of a few private companies, is there not a danger of, if not an actual merger, then a 'merger of understanding"? Which would be tantamount to a dangerous monopoly which would control not just the economics of hardware but information as well? And isn't that the wrong path for a democracy to follow?

As a rural based network engineer I fight daily to overcome the limits that large companies impose because it is not lucrative enough to bring services to the markets where I live and work. If these technologies can be made available to our rural communities, the infrastructure for growth economically can turn around our declining economic situation. Our Education and future jobs in the US need the innovation and availability that are stifled by corporate profiteers looking only to increase their stock value. I have been an engineer and scientist since 1980, earning a Ph.D. in 1988. As such, I’ve used the internet extensively for most of my life. I am, by now, fully aware that the bandwidth remaining in the EM spectrum is an incredibly valuable resource. The government should, under NO circumstances, sell this resource. Much more reasonable is a some form of lease, with a time scale that makes investment by companies practical, e.g., 10 years. Moreover, only a portion of the available spectrum should be leased, leaving a reserve available for public use.

It appears that certain already-big companies want to make sure a new generation of competitors does not spring up to challenge them the way they challenged and beat the former biggest guy at the tavern. You need to require that all bandwidth auctioned is actually put to use within a very limited and very specific amount of time.

If corporations are to be given exclusive access to these new wave bands, it should be at a fair price and for a time-limited period. They should have to prove that they are providing a "community good" in order to be allowed to renew their airwave franchise. These assets are too valuable to be given away at bargain prices to private enterprise. If private companies cannot provide public access and preserve a public-friendly environment, the government should keep the wave-lengths locked up for the public good.

Big money corporations have taken over the USA. We are on our way to a fascist policed state. This is public airways owned by the people. Please do what’s right.

This is public airways owned by the people.

As a democracy we need to use the public airwaves for the public good. It is not in the best interest of the public to stifle competition and innovation by turning the public airwaves over to big companies.

Take an opportunity to depart from the corrupt corporatocracy of the Bush administration and keep newly vacated airwaves available for public and small business usage.

Corporations have more than enough voice in our country, and access to information that is untainted by a corporate agenda is essential to a healthy democracy. Please don’t let lobbyists control your decisions; your votes in Congress will be rewarded or penalized with our votes in November.

Having been routinely fleeced or ignored by my cable provider, Comcast, I can’t help but be moved by the thought that I might have this monopoly become more far reaching that it already is. The sole problem with Comcast is that they are, in this city and numerous others, the only game in town and therefore, as all monopolies become, unresponsive and dismissive to the wants and needs of their customers. It is not how we, as consumers, deserve to be treated and they are free to price-gouge and act to their whim. Let’s not allow big corporations to buy up every inch of broadcasting real estate and leave something untainted by the profit margin, eh?

The likelihood of unfortunate unintended consequences alone should be cause enough not to turn public airwaves over to the big proprietary communications companies.

Martha B. Pulley

Any claim that preferential treatment provided to large corporations will encourage development of new technologies simply defies historical fact. The public airwaves have been the venue in which the current technologies have been developed, because it has been in the interest of developers, both large and small, to do so. Five years ago the general use of broadband technology was limited to a small percentage of those who now employ its use. It is this environment of innovation and competition that has motivated and encouraged advancement. If it isn’t broke...

The airwaves belong to the public and they should stay that way. If this administration and this congress keep doing business as usual, this country will revolt. People matter, not how much money the big business’ give to the politicians. Our country has reached the breaking point and will no longer hesitate to put big business along with big government in its place, which is subservient to the people. Try us and find out.

Public airwaves should be used for the public GOOD. We have lost so much vital truth to be a more informed society since the Fairness Doctrine was abolished by President Reagan and Justice Scalia. Our intelligence scores have dropped remarkably in the world and where does that lead us? The internet was built with public funds and developed with public funds. I feel it is owned by me as part of that public and I want it left open with access to everything by everyone and not owned by corporations who can limit competition and access to information. The internet is one of the last sources of government accountability and should be kept open, not sold to the highest bidder. Consolidation and mergers have in recent months lead more or less to the re-establishment of the old Ma Bell monopoly. After having gone through solid month of service problems with the "new" AT&T I whole heartedly favor more meaningful competition and the innovation that flow from it. The potential public good which could develop from open access to the public airways is enormous and could revolutionize everything from education and distance learning to the way we conduct commerce and everything in between. Open systems are by their very nature innovative – closed or restricted systems stifle creative processes.

Why would we want Rupert Murdoch and/or a small handful of people/corporations to control our airways and, therefore, information? Sounds a lot like what we have criticized the USSR and China for - it doesn't matter whether information is controlled by politicians, individuals or corporations - the point is that no one should have that much power.

The tendency to privatize every single public venue so that giant corporations can make even more obscene profits is highly disturbing and even UN-American! I am saddened and horrified at what our country is coming to, and the damage being done by this greedy president and his buddies! I am not a kid, but a 70+yr. old woman who owns her own home. The internet should be free.
Hi,
I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.
These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.
You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

I have much to complain about What is being called the public access. * live in Tehachapi California and I believe I am being discriminated against by a two providers of television access. Dish and Direct. Tey are having a dispute over access, and they both lied and misrepresented their access inorder to get me to change from Dish to Direct. This has left me to the mercy of two controlling providers who have a monopoly on what I can watch on T.V. Each one of them have the power to eliminate what I may want to see and I hve no choice.

There are many scandals involving the current administration which are never released in the United States. (Most of the rest of the world is wondering how that lunatic in the White House can get away with so much.) The government has corrupted much of what news is released to the public in this country. In some instances the agencies helping to perpetrate these frauds do so unwittingly. There are many other instances in which the media goes along with duping the public. Some of the media must be allowed to present factual information which condoms the administration for good cause. They may not be ready to stand up and face the consequences from a corrupt administration. They must be allowed the freedom to do so.

Bottom line here is this - no matter what the tel-com PACs and lobbyists tell you, the airwaves and bandwidth belong to the PEOPLE, not to corporations. The people allow corporations to use them for our enjoyment and benefit. And in a world where technology is omnipervasive and access is imperative it is morally, ethically and legally wrong to give control of the airwaves and bandwidth to telcoms on the basis of "trust us to do the right thing. Fall short in your obligation to the people and trust that we will NOT forget your transgression.

Our government has intruded far too often into what is the public domain and far too garritusely/deeply as vengeful in what works freely in our economy, entertainment, communication, etceteras...this invasion into internet and its satellites is gargantuen in its scope and is un-called for to good use of the public domain so long unencumbered by corporate grab and political pay back for loyalty to the adminstration and politics in general..VOTE NO!!!!!

I had DSL at my house. Lightning struck an antenna and we lost DSL. Everything was restored, but we couldn’t get DSL back because AT&T determined we were too far away from a central station. We are less than a mile from a central station but it has been activated for our area and won’t be for another year. And now you want to turn over public airwaves to these corporations. There is no way that this should happen.

Dear FCC Members:
You are in a position to do great good or great harm. And, make no mistake, we, the people, know which is which.
In NO way should the free and neutral access of the internet be hindered. AT&T, Verizon, Comcast....have no public good in their sights. They have only public control and profits in their sights.
Keep our internet free and neutral. Set aside truly significant amounts of the freed-up air waves for this purpose.

Over the last 7 years, hasn't our Government given enough corporate welfare to greedy companies who will stifle anything that they can't make money on? Why is it that we can't use these airwaves publicly in the form of free municipal wifi? It's probably due to the fact that the FCC gets kickbacks from these companies on the side. Reserve these orphaned frequencies for "we the People". We own the right of ways through which these PIPES pass. Big media already has dedicated frequencies. Save these for the commonwealth so we can strengthen our democracy by enabling voters affordable and rapid access to alternate information (which big media spins, omits, buries, distorts, communicate with & organize & take action via our grassroot Inet groups. Enable startups to START-UP without discrimination by corporate media which is trying to gobble up all the frequencies and stomp out Inet neutrality.

Dear Commissioners-
You know that the internet should be kept free, accessible and democratic for all users. Please do not give away this last bastion of Free Speech. The Communications act in the 30s gave away our public airways and was a mistake an unfair. It should be turned over. Please don’t make the same mistake again.

What is it about ‘government for the people by the people’ you don’t understand? Yes, America is a mercantile nation, but that doesn’t mean the government and it’s agencies need to guarantee that private interests are enabled to have sanctioned monopolies over the entire populace. Besides - this is a fool’s game, the United States is not the only nation with telecommunications satellites in orbit. We are not the only nation now practicing open market trading. If you are corrupt enough to sell this free nation’s public airwaves to private industry, you will eventually need to become a Soviet-style police force to "crack-down” on free citizens using foreign Internet Service Providers for free use. Can’t you see where you are blindly leading yourselves, and the rest of us? There is nothing about what you are doing that is right or just. You are betraying the peoples of this nation and selling us off for money. Judas, at least, kissed his victim, but you will just claim you are practicing ‘counter-terrorism.’ Please Stop. Do The Right Thing.

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution—bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They’ve spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks. PLEASE DON’T LET THIS HAPPEN

Please put the public good first. Freedom of Speech doesn’t simply refer to a person’s right to express his or her opinion; it should be understood as encompassing VENUES for expression of those opinions. If corporate enterprises gobble up the venues, then money becomes the only key to accessing an essential part of “Freedom of Speech.”

There are fewer newspapers than there were 10 years ago, and the remaining papers are owned by fewer owners than 10 years ago. You have no right to just turn over the public’s airwaves to these large for-profit corporations when they could be used for the public good. You cannot squander the public wealth on George's billionaire friends. Let's try to retain a grain of reason in the administration if at all possible.

Please do not allow corporations to have any more of the Public airwaves than is minimally necessary for the enhancement of their present projects (those projects they can show that they are actively working on). Then the majority of the airwaves up for grabs should be available and can be held in reserve for competitive groups that hopefully would provide competition to them. In the majority of the nation there is no competition when it comes to communications of any type. Some states are even outlawing public entities from providing services to some areas that the private sector is not serving and refuses to serve (EX. LA where there is a community that has never even had a land line installed (The telephone was invented in the 1800s when? And this is 2007.)). Even though I am a stock holder in all of the baby Bells and Comcast, I can not stand how they do business.

It’s time for the FCC to do the right thing for the public good. We need multiple voices in our airwaves, not a narrower and narrower band of beliefs, culture or information which result from reducing the variety of sources. The public airwaves should remain just that—public, we should not have to have special devices to use the airwaves and I've seen first hand what the SBC ATT merger did with 2 1/2 years worth of my business messages, I now have to use ATT and cannot access my old messages and ATT does not care, they are not trying to solve the problem, it's just we're sorry for the inconvenience. Well, it could eventually cost me plenty when I can't prove I made a phone call or someone called and left me a certain message. There is no competition, so they could care less, I'm at the point now it could cost me a suspension of my law license. Further, I had saved messages from my sister, she died last August from cancer, I won't be able to hear her voice again, they don't care. If they had warned me I wouldn't have opted to get their new domain name when they told me I had to, this is on my home/business line that I pay business rates for. Please keep the lines public and let them know they need to care!!!!

The access to public airwaves through broadcasting has been gradually reduced due to FCC favoritism for communications corporations. If there are truly going to be means of access for individuals and local communities, the FCC should be protecting the internet from corporate control. Look at what;s happened to costs for monthly cable, not to mention the lack of responsive customer service.

FCC regulations should reflect the mission of public good and not empower the large telecoms to rape the consumers on a monthly basis. The Internet should not be a vehicle for the rich and powerful to extract more riches from the masses. The only time our large corporations stay at home is when they can reap more largesse from our citizenry. This nation was founded on the principles of allowing people to use their ingenuity to get ahead. Let’s get objectivity back into the airwaves now!!

Do you remember the Bell Telephone System? It was the only show in town and it was efficient but, it stifled innovation. Then the court cases arose challenging the monopoly and the whole landscape changed. Now, we have cell phones and internet services in all varieties. Let’s not reinvent the wheel and have to break up the monopolies at a later date. Aren’t my taxes high enough to have paid for the airwaves? Some things should be public domain. The internet system has developed quickly and spread beyond anyone’s expectations. We are all hooked up to some service in order to utilize the airwaves. At the very least, we’ve bought the equipment with the technology installed. Please give us a break.

For once in your lives, do something that will benefit the public instead of large companies...please! As I watch neighborhood PUBLIC OWNED parks and beaches, in my area, where families once took their children to play for free, now being charged a day use fee, it saddens me. We pay taxes, camper registration fees and more to pay for these places, and now day use fees are added ON TOP of the other fees and taxes. Give us a break for a change!

Please do not sell these airwaves to corporations—
As a democracy, the country (and many other countries) are struggling to work toward a better society, but our individual freedom depends largely on our ability to innovate and to have acto diverse thoughts and ideas. Selling airwaves to corporations will mainly deprive the

I work at a college. We bill our students on-line. No more paper bills. We supply and accept applications on line or at our front counter (8-5). We are trying to cut costs and stretch funding. This does not help people who do not have easy internet access. If the internet gets more expensive who says free access will be available at libraries? I wouldn't want to trust my billing or crucial communications to hit or miss internet availability. Don't let Corporate Greed or Bias Politics get in the way of uncensored and open communication.

We cannot imagine how are need for these airwaves will expand in the future. Last thing we need is for the government to do another huge giveaway. The govenment needs to understand that we are entering a phase where everyone who does not have access will be a marginalized citizen. Instead the government should be looking at these airwaves like we look at the highways, as part of our country’s infrastructure.

I have a four month old son. If recent increases are any indication, in a few years I will not be able to afford high speed internet access or cable for our home. That's the bottom line, cut and dried, no frills.

The technology and initiative exists to make these advancements available to far more people and STILL turn a profit...yet once again, only the big, fat corporate players get to sit at the adult's table. And millions of creative, vibrant and potentially influential young minds—including my son, perhaps—are going to be denied this opportunity because some CEO somewhere needs ANOTHER boat or a FOURTH vacation house. It's a travesty. And you should all collectively be ashamed of yourselves for possibly ignoring the public good in favor of the usual greedy and soulless corporate suspects.

Please don't turn it over to big corporations! They are only in it for themselves and don't care about the average individual, other than how much more money they can squeeze out of us. We still have dial up at home and no possibility of getting anything faster because we live out in the middle of no where. We can not even get cable tv and are forced into satellite. With new technologies coming out, we are hoping against hope that we will eventually be able to get high speed access at an affordable price but that hope will disappear if you give these rich companies control. They are not willing to spend money to make it possible for the millions of us who are still stuck with dial up.

Dear Sirs,

Please stop and reflect for a moment. Not upon profits, not upon power, but on the concepts of Democracy, Freedom...the ideals upon which this country was founded - that were intended to set it apart from, and above all previous forms of social contract. You, gentlemen, are the guardians of these ideals. Please do your job. Protect the PUBLIC AIRWAVES for the PUBLIC. Do not sell them to the Corporate Fascists. (For your own education, look up the definition of ”fascism”, and you will see that I do not use this adjective as an empty slur, but as a real description of danger). Throughout history, those who were brave enough to ”hold the line” for Public Good, are the ones we consider to be Heroes. Show your Heroic side.

The guys at AT&T, Verizon, Comcast etcetera may be your pals, they may have offered you sweet deals, they may have threatened ostrification or worse...but this is an issue larger than them, larger than you, larger than any of us - for it effects ALL of us together, and not only us.... but also generations of Americans to come, as well. You are the front-line defenders of Democracy. Please don’t let us down.

American national competitiveness is dependent on broadening the base of technology use to include the entire population, not merely serve an elite of "haves" leaving a sea of "have nots" when it comes to information access.

I thought that commissions were to be in the public interest not corporate greed. When will the open season on the public domain be caged?

The airwaves belong to us, the public. Rates are already obscene. Give the working person a break, don't give away what belongs to us.
Look beyond the bottom line for once and do what is right for future generations!

Please don’t give AT&T, Verizon & Comcast our public airways. You know they would use them for company gain.

Please, let this be a free market in the truest sense. Once corporate entities become the dominion holders of the internet, all that makes the medium unique will disappear.

PUBLIC airwaves. PUBLIC airwaves.
The corporation in the U.S. already control too much & stifle compitition.

Please do not allow public airwaves to be subsumed by corporate conglomerates. The very nature of the Internet, with its boundless opportunities for creativity and innovation, will be irreperably harmed and we, the people, will end up with yet another system of mediocrity. You cannot and should not allow corporations to control the flow of information. By allowing corporations like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast to take the public airwaves you would help put more money into the already bloated pockets of these corporations and put the American public at a disadvantage. Please do not allow this to happen. We need to have an outlet that is free from corporate interest.

As a progressive citizen of faith. I oppose AT & T, Verizon, or Comcast having a monoploy on the internet. I believe that the internet needs to be free to the public. It is outrageous that FCC wants to give a free rein on corporations to control access to the internet. The public relies on the internet to get information and to communicate with people. The time has come for a paradigm shift away from the corporate interests which are impoverishing and destroying the future of our country. We need to reassess and reclaim the commonwealth for the common good of our citizenry. The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets. To restore America’s leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers. It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

The Internet was originally created as a free medium, where everyone had equal access and nobody had to pay fees. The public response to this concept was so overwhelmingly positive that the Internet became one of the most successful ventures in history. But that led the major communications companies to feel threatened by the new Internet and its technologies. And those communications companies are now responding in the same old way that big business has always dealt with potential competitors; by trying to buy them out and shut down their activities.

The unique aspect of this situation is that this is not just the struggle of one business against another business. Rather, it is a group of businesses struggling to overcome the rights and the will of the American public, by taking away public rights to free Internet access. The FCC was created to protect the interests of the public. To that end, it is your responsibility to insure that any dispensation you make of public airwaves is fully protected against those airwaves becoming limited or inaccessible to free public use; both now and in the future.

Let the public airwaves remain free.

Stop the Corruption!

Stop the crap! Let the people of the USA speak. Censorship is wrong in any format, especially in a monopoly run by our own government.

When will you accept that the general public owns the airwaves and wants to keep them open for a wide variety of information gathering and dispersing? Did we not reply in massive unity the last time there was a power grab? Media centers should be made much smaller with more local ownership. Say NO to big business this time and make it for once and for all.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kathryn Mary Stahl

The airwaves should only be rented - via auction either every year or every 2-5 yrs. If made available only in this way, ”bad actors” can be eliminated in future auctions, AND, as the value of the airwaves continues to increase, this will be a small but steady source of income to the Federal government.

Technology fosters creative solutions to business problems. Having public airwaves for wireless internet allows power users and businesses alike to freely design and adopt technologies that are the perfect solutions for business. This would not be possible if the airwaves were ‘owned’ by a company who decided this would not be in their best interest. Please do not auction the administrative rights for public airwaves to companies, it would ultimately harm businesses and consumers.

The airways must remain public. To let the cable and phone companies monopolize the airways is unfair to consumers. Are we no longer a government of the people, by the people and for the people? Trying to monopolize something as PUBLIC airwaves for the benefit and gain of a few corporations is noting but a greed and profit driven attempt to control almost every means of communication and is unacceptable. As far as we say we’ve "progressed" we still don’t think about others, just our greedy selves, and no amount of money can cover that up. There are enough bills to pay and they are all too expensive to begin with. I’m going to go back to pen and paper for correspondence. You must not sacrifice the tenets of our country by giving in to Big Business! Please! Keep the airwaves for the public good. We are tired of being nickled and dimed.

The airwaves belong to the people, not corporations! History shows they have not used the privilege of managing our airwaves in the best interest of the people. It is crucial the the democratic process that our airwaves are accessible to all and not controlled by a few corporate interests who have consistently squashed the peoples’ access to the airwaves in the interest of profit.

Corey Barnes

I strongly encourage the FCC to maintain as many airwaves as possible as a public good, and to show determination in their duty to preserve competition in various digital marketplaces by disallowing the monopolistic tendencies of the largest corporations. The products are what should compete in the public eye, not the business practices of the companies involved.

Dear FCC,
The public airwaves belong to the citizens. Please respect that fact and don't vote to give or sell them to corporations who would use them for their own gain.
Thank you very much.

Additionally, Congress must act to prevent further erosion of our democracy by making free air time available to politicians. Forcing those who run for office to purchase election air time in order to speak to the public forces them to deal with deep pocket lobbyists. It is time that the FCC speak for those for whom they work and who really own the nation's airwaves—the American public.

It was bad when the feds decided to let Microsoft dominate software. The proposed sale of airwaves to private companies is an equally bad extension of this policy: short term gain and long term loss of competitive advantage. Think long term, please do not do this.

Too often, the needs and desires of the general public are ignored. The oil companies are making record profits and disregard the fact that the consumer must pay very high prices. Now there is a chance that the public airwaves may be turned over to large companies, who again will look after their own profit. Will they care about the average American? Take a guess. Please vote to protect our rights and not those of the corporations.

The Internet was not intended for customers to only be consumers. I am an IT Manager at my company and I see the problems faced by monopolization of copper and re-selling to other companies. AT&T technicians are not as fast to fix issues for other telephone companies as they are for their own customers and I feel without competition this situation will only get worse and harm competition. Please allow innovation in this space and realize that open flow of ideas is a good thing and healthy competition will help spur innovation and growth.

The only way that these large companies should be given additional airwave rights is that they be required to extend high speed service across the areas they serve available on a no cost basis. The would have a motivation to accomplish this as the availability of a non-exclusive franchise for data transmission etc represents a truly outstanding opportunity. Further, any such extension of rights should be subject to periodic review to assure that their undertakings have been carried out.

Free communication is vital to a free society. For-profit companies cannot make the public good their first priority - they must make profitability, their first priority. That doesn’t make them evil, they’re just functioning the way they are supposed to function. Free competition is great - but it really isn’t ”free” competition unless one of the [major] competitors represents the public interest, rather than private interests.

It's not bad enough that the have and the have nots not only include money, but internet access. There are a lot of Americans that would be better able to take those high tech jobs that are being farmed out overseas if they had internet access. The government needs to take this into consideration above lobbyists with special interests.

Airwave bandwidth is like a natural resource, there by the virtue of physics. Having a few companies, especially ones with a track record of monopolistic tendencies, control such local bandwidth is counter to the principles of free enterprise and competition. The power of the internet was achieved by open access and this new resource should be open to everyone on an equal basis. FCC, Please leave the bandwidth you are planning to hand over to private telecom companies in public domain. Already you have dropped the ball in permitting wireless companies to have "captive" phones only for their full service usage! Now you want to give these companies even more?? I don't think so!

My son-in-law, Douglas Sicker, does understand you are already giving these telecom companies way more in profit taking than their services require.

Please allow our pubic airwaves to be used for the good of all. I believe that there are more and better ways to use these airwaves that are sensitive to our changing environment and the cost would be less. It is imperative that these remain in the free market to allow for innovation and competition in the wireless market.

Allowing the airwaves to be controlled by a few corporate giants is not a good thing for a freedom loving country. It means that information and communication can be controlled that that is a dangerous situation for any country that claims to be free.

This issue is so important to me that I feel it deserves a second comment from me. I can't tell you how much I feel that our government has lost it's desire to promote and protect the public interest. I understand the need to for more spectrum by the existing carriers but I do not feel that this should be done at the expense of fostering competition or foregoing the use those airwaves in the public interest. Those airwaves are a very valuable commodity and they can either promote an open and competitive environment or further entrench the power of a few corporations. There must be a balance. A corporations' first (and some say "only") duty is to it's shareholders. It is up to our government to ensure our the public interest is well served.

America may be the land of the free but we must all work together to keep it from being given away for free so that it can be sold back to us at a highly inflated cost. The public airwave must be used to serve the public. No licenses should be granted without the licensee submitting a plan that clearly states how & when the American public will benefit and how the licensee intends to serve the betterment of the country by gaining access to these licenses. The licenses shouldn’t be granted just because they exist. I think there should be a "contest" of sorts, including industry and academia and the public, to determine the most creative and best way that these airwave can be used to improve life for everyone prior to letting licenses.

Recently local legislation in my area stopped an effort for city-area free wireless internet access, fought by SBC, which would have given broadband access to low income people. Consider also that such access may enable entirely new kinds of devices/applications, such as wifi phones/PDAs. This represents fertile ground for new businesses, and that's why the communication giants are worried, but it's not a threat to the economy. Consider also that ubiquitous access could transform the meaning of democracy, allowing people to be much more connected to government issues. There is a huge potential for positive change, both economic and social, please do not stop it in favor of a wealthy status quo.

Please keep the public airwaves open to competition. Doing this would improve the quality of the product and increase jobs in smaller companies.
Of course we know this is what giant corporations want to stop. I think we all learned about it in American History class in grade school. I also remember being led to beleive that it's NOT RIGHT. That this is not what the majority of the people want, but a select few of our country members.
I hope you have a choice to be able to do the right thing and not be led by greed.
Thank you.

Like libraries, the airwaves must be free and not corporate controlled. It is essential to a democracy.

We have seen plenty examples of what happens when competition is stifled and megacorporations are not held accountable for fleecing, then lying to the American public. The decision is a no-brainer for any representative not obviously beholden to lobbyists.

Corporate agendas squelch creativity, artistry, and community freedom of expression. The fastest way to get me to stop listening to the radio and to throw away my television is to restrict me to corporate mediocrity.

Jamie Simons
Philadelphia, PA 19147

The media in the United States is already consolidated in the hands to too few companies. The "public" has no entity other than the FCC to represent it's interest in access. The FCC is being lobbied by special interests/corporations to give them the remaining access which could be reserved for the public's/non-profit good. I would like to see the FCC work to provide broad "free" access to the public to communicate, and for "alternative" sources of news, music, etc. to enable true democracy. Television and radio are already providing a too narrow version of news, and newspapers are dropping overseas news bureaus. This consolidation of sources is leading to control by too few of too much information, which is highly destructive to the potential of democracy.

Our system of ownership is so far out of whack that there are almost no places where the average American can publicly express their opinion. Creating new airwaves is great, we are a growing population in need of expansion. Selling them is appauling, the highest bidders (the elite and in this case those who ALREADY own much of the media access available) will win out thus killing diversity of access as well as public programming, designed and funded to be free to the public.

The FCC should be looking after the interests of the citizens of this country, and especially the right and the importance of free speech and free dissemination of information. Don't let big businesses own the airwaves! Business magnates pretty nearly "own" our votes already, because they "buy" the candidates of both parties before they are ever elected, and the candidates don't realize that "We the People" can't operate without free information that's real - and which doesn't "owe" anything to the pockets of the super-rich. Ask any European: they'll tell you that "American Democracy is dying."

Private companies continue to produce trash and downplay good products for public use and public advancement in affairs for social, scientific and moral good. Countries like China and India are using these newest methods of high speed communication for learning and public development. It is important that we have a choice in which provider we use for these services. If you allow the Big corporation to be the only providers then that causes hardship for the "little" companies to compete. These big corporations don't want any more competition then they can up their rates and who will be there to put a cap on the rate hikes? I vote "NO" Keep the public airways just that "PUBLIC"

At times when I have been feeling particularly cynical, I used to joke that big business would cut up the air and sell it if they could. The sarcasm was aimed at breathing for the little guy. Now I see that my joke has a way of becoming true, just not in the way I had imagined. Please do not allow them to block the airwaves. It seems that the potential for innovation, technology advancement, and benefit for the common people is what is at stake here. Please don't stifle creativity.

As a Federal Agency, it is the FCC's responsibility to promote interstate commerce. Without anti-competition laws, these auctions will result in the suppression of the competition that has made this country the global economic leader it is. Let's not be so shortsighted that we protect the future profits of a few giant companies while sacrificing unforeseen technological advances that serve everyone.

It is absolutely essential that communication and access to it are free for a democracy to survive. Any time a minory gains control of comuni- cation avenues of the masses ...very bad things happen. This has been true throughout history and is especially true here and now in America. Remember how we started this sad war? It wasn't sadam, it was the media(or lack thereof) that made it possible and SEEM justifiable.

I am already unable to get high speed Internet service in my area due to Cablevision’s company policy not to allow two different accounts to the same “household”. I live in NYC Supportive Housing. I was placed in an apartment that I must share with another Supportive Housing recipient. WE EACH COMPRIZE A ONE MEMBER HOUSEHOLD BY IRS AND OTHER FEDERAL AGENCY STANDARDS. The Supportive Housing recipient that I share this apartment with has an account with Cablevision’s subsidiary, Optimum. He has refused to allow me to have high speed Internet service on his bill. He has also refused to allow his account to be transferred into my name.

My home telephone company, Verizon, currently has no DSL service available in my neighborhood. Verizon has prioritized upgrading their fiber optic infrastructure in high income (predominantly white) areas above low income areas. These low income (predominantly comprising the African-American and Latino) areas are lagging behind this digital divide causing fewer opportunities for businesses to be competitive and causing educational opportunities to be unfairly denied.

Huge corporate companies having a monopoly on services is not in the best public interest. The more competition there is in the wireless network industry, the more options consumers will have and services will be available to consumers at lower prices.

How rich do a select number of ISP providers need to be? How long will consumers, like me, have to suffer unequal availability of services?

Christopher Lanoue, Md
Brookline, MA 02446

Our freedoms in this country are gradually being taken away from us. Allowing Corporate Companies to take over the internet, control, stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet Market is just one more example of our losses. The Public Airwaves must be used for the public good. Not for a few companies to control and make more money on having the control. It is time that we Americans stand up and let the federal government know that we do not approve of turning over this huge portion of OUR public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verison and Comcast. It is obvious that the use will be for private enrichment and NOT public good. This is definitely not the democracy on which our country was founded. I have really had it with how this country is being manipulated. We spend 500 billion dollars so fat to bring democracy to Iraq and here at home it is being taken away from Americans. Companies are becoming to big with too much control over our lives without offering anything to those who have to use their services.

There is no compelling reason for a company that bid for the rights to provide wireless Internet on a mass scale to do so. It is much more profitable to make it extremely expensive and allow access to only the few who have the resources to pay for it. It would have a much greater impact on the economy in a positive way if the Internet is truly democratic, to be available to anyone at a reasonable price at a reasonable speed. Intentional stifling of technology is the inventor's prerogative... but the Internet was not invented by any one company. It was designed to be free and open. Please strongly consider keeping it that way. There have been enough blows to our public airwaves as it is. Has the corruption of the radio industry through payola taught us nothing? What is one role of the government in the end but to keep such monopolies from occurring?

We have enough corporate companies giving us their views on what we should know, and not what is really happening in the world we live in. Please don’t give up our freedoms for profit. If it wasn’t for NPR and public television we wouldn’t hear or see the truth, as it is I think that there should be more truth coming to us as Americans. I would like to see the congress voting on key issues, hear the debates, not just on TV but on the internet. We are in the computer age when we should be able to find out what our elected and paid men and women are doing on our behalf, at any time during the day or night. I understand that a spectrum will be auctioned off with the good possibility that this huge portion could be completely auctioned to ATT, Verizon and Comcast. This will amount to monopoly control of the internet which otherwise could be used for public good. These companies do not want competition and could very well sit on a broad spectrum that alternately could allow better and cheaper access to the internet by the public through other competitive public sources.

Monopolistic practices by these big companies such as AT&T, Verizon and Comcast must be stopped in order to be more competitive in this global economy.

Walter E Griffin

We have witnessed the almost total dominance of Clear Channel over the radio industry, due to the telecommunications act of 96. That act was ostensibly passed to promote competition. Isn't that what economic conservatives state as their chief aim? Obviously letting one company own all the properties on the board doesn't allow that competition to occur. My kids understand that idea. The airwaves are needed to restore democracy, not to put more money in the coffers of the handful of telecom industries that haven't yet merged into one another.

The airwaves should be a public resource, not sold to business for profit.

The Republican party says no new taxes. This will be a form of new taxes. It can not continue.

Stop! Do NOT give AT&T, Verizon, etc. more to stifle innovation, competition, and public good. They already have more money than 75% of the nations in the world. Stop feeding big corporations with more access to hurt the public for their own greed! ! ! ! ! ! !

The major telecommunications companies have repeatedly reneged on their promises and commitments. They have betrayed the public trust already invested in them through the assignment of licenses for publicly owned spectrum. They have consistently, effectively, and illegally squelched any and all competitive efforts. They deserve no further trust, no further rights and assignments. I demand you maintain public control and oversight of these airwaves and use them to foster true competition, including from public, community led efforts, in the telecommunications markets. Our country ranks appallingly low in telecommunications options and performance compared with other advanced economies. Our future as an advanced society depends upon a truly competitive telecommunications environment, one that directly reflects the public interest, being fostered in order to ensure the highest quality, highest capacity, and most open services possible. To my elected representatives: I am watching your votes, and I will vote accordingly during upcoming elections.

Without having background information on this issue, at the time of this writing, my only comment is that privatization has gotten out of control, and not to the betterment of society and the quality of the lives of most citizens. I do understand that the FCC is a government agency, and that licenses for broadcast are government sanctioned. I also understand that the Internet is already owned by corporations. If this proposed move means that most citizens will be crushed by cost, and freedom of publicly expressed thought supervised and directed by penalties, then I ask that moral integrity be used in whatever decisions are made going forward.

It is clear that only ownership of an access network allows a company to provide viable competition to existing service providers. All other alternatives have failed. If you do not truly protect the last frontier of access from existing industry power bases, true competition & the enormous public benefits it promises will never happen. This is your last chance: Do the right thing.

To see what poor use of the air waves would be under for profit companies, examine the history of "in-depth" news coverage. Today is there no decent in-depth coverage except for 60 minutes and it seems to be getting phased out.

Don't let a few large companies have total control of our airwaves. Public airwaves should be just that – public! These companies have too much power now and no controls. I believe there is collusion between them now. I live in the middle of a large city and my old analog TV sets with built in rabbit ears antennas came in just fine, but as soon as I bought a new digital TV I could no longer get any reception with any kind of antenna and was eventually forced to get cable just for reception. When Comcast replaced Time-Warner for the Minneapolis area they promptly raised the monthly fee $4 while simultaneously removing at least 6 stations from its standard cable package, with more coming. If I want my old channels back, I can pay another $15 a month. In the 5 or 6 years I have had cable the cost has already gone up from about $40 to $57 per month. I will soon have to give up cable if this continues as we are nearing retirement and won't be able to afford it. Please don't let this happen with the internet, too. These companies need some anti-trust laws not more monopolies.

I am a wireless engineer; I work for Foundry Networks. What you are trying to do is the same as giving Yosemite Park to Disney corporation and trusting them to "do the right thing". New frequency bands are to be opened. I believe these should not be given to the firms that have failed time after time to provide consumers with advanced networking at reasonable prices. These corporations have done everything they can to stifle competition and not invest in improved infrastructure. Other countries have faster wired internet, faster and more highly featured wireless offerings, and lower prices. It is a disgrace that America, the home of these technologies should be relegated to the backwaters.

Make this spectrum available in such a way that it will be used for high-speed internet access, and that it won’t be the property of an oligopoly. If you have to, charge royalties large enough so that it can’t be allowed to sit idle and MUST be used for its best purpose. Make the market work, don’t give major telecoms a free ”land grant”.

IM TIRED TIRED TIRED of seeing the public airwaves go to big corporations who THINK they know what we want. They should REMAIN OPEN to the public to IMPROVE communication. WHILE you’re at it, do the same thing to the rates for music on INTERNET radio so we can have the ability to listen to what we want! I’m tired of having only one venue. MY town USED to have MANY radio stations that played a VARIETY of music. NOW it is limited to a bunch of crap that Big music thinks we want to hear. LEAVE THE airwaves OPEN to competition.

The airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless market. Enough of our country and government is under the control of, or stolen from the American public by corporations. We pay, and they make money. We lose jobs and pensions plans and they get richer. They move out of the country and contribute nothing to the country that made them rich. ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

I do not agree with the auctioning of airwaves nor with any policies that create monopolies over services or block competitive enterprise, to the detriment of technological progress. The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets. To restore America’s leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Please do not sell the new airwaves to AT&T, Verizon, Comcast or other huge corporation! I have just spent 30 days and over 12 phone calls trying to get AT&T to lift the PIC Freeze from the phone numbers for my family (910-686-8003) and that of my 90 year Mother in Greensboro (336-545-8725). AT&T raised the cost at the long distance plan from $4.95 to $5.95, causing the few calls my Mother makes average $.10 per minute when all the fees are added. Pioneer Telephone charges only $.029 per minute. It took me many calls and many requests and many follow up calls to get the picfreeze removed at the new codes applied to our numbers. This is disgusting and totally motivated to greedily force us to pay AT&T’s higher prices for as long as possible. They fought my everyway they could to prevent a smooth and quick switch to a lower rate. This is only an isolated example of how the big corporations will cheat the common man. Big Banks, Big corporations, credit card companies, and many more profit hungry institutions threaten the interests of the common man. The new airwaves are desperately needed as a conduit of information for the public/by the public. Too much of the information channels in this country are already in the hand of large corporations and therefor biased and unethical. If television news were a public-owned media, we not have the global warming that we have now – because the news programs would not have been lying to us all along about how bad things were getting. Selling off the public airwaves is a blasphemous idea and a moral insult to all of this nation and the freedom we’ve fought so bloody hard to retain. Please have the integrity to vote against this preposterous idea and preserve the good of all not the selected few.

it is immoral to give the public's airwaves to these companies with so little provision to keep local media alive. besides lack of diversity and the potention for corruption in programming this brings, the communities will be unprepared for disaster if it strikes (only the local radio was able to give realtime news during katrina! the clear channel stations were on a national loop and were useless)

I am very concerned about public access to the internet. I fear that short-term financial gain for business/"the economy" will dominate the long-term need for everyone in our country to be computer connected and literate in global economy of the future. If we continue with so much short-sighted, pro-business (keep in mind I'm generally pro-business) strategy that our country's ability to innovate and compete will be seriously compromised.

We’re urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

I remember the promise of high speed Internet for the rural areas of the U.S. about six years ago and I keep hearing people ask what happened. I've often heard the argument that giving money and power to the rich and powerful helps to stimulate growth in a society, since they will then invest in their companies and lower the unemployment rate. This philosophy, however, only works in an enlightened society whose guiding principles are generosity and compassion. This is not America, and it is surely not corporate America. I don’t know much about the FCC, but if it is anything like the FDA then we are all in trouble. It takes great courage and integrity to stand against the tide of the wealthy as they start to apply the pressure and dangle golden carrots in front of your faces, but I pray that you have the true patriotic spirit and decide to give these "new" airwaves to the people.

By turning over public access to the Internet and other advancing methods of communication the FCC would, in essence, be undermining the very nature of democracy and a free enterprise society – all of which have proven to be the best man-made constructs available. Please keep our internet as diverse as possible by allowing free access and competitive shares of the market divided over many many companies, not the usual few big name companies such as AT&T, Verizon. It is important that the net is protected from biases and thus affecting the information the public can access. Also, it's important that although any website can be assessed at the moment and some websites have higher traffic simply due to content and public interest and rightly so and they may in turn attract sponsorship. However, please ensure for the future generation that the sponsorship doesn't preclude increased likelihood for the website to be always at the top of the search result/query. I want my internet the way it is... open and diverse.

Dont give the major companies these airwaves. Look what has happened with the consolidation thus far. We the people do not get information. Stories on TV about lost dogs - dont do this. Are democracy is at stake. Giving more of the airwaves away really puts us in jeopardy. If we had been giving the information or investigative work by our major news media and content providers we would not be in this situation. Standup and defend our democracy, your childs democracy and your childs child democracy. Stop the quest for total information and information shaping control.

I volunteer for a public radio station in Salt Lake City. We have an arduous time raising enough money every year to continue to operate and inform the public about services, information, and knowledge that they can not find anywhere else. The public is already at a severe disadvantage when it comes to access to news, views, information and differing opinions at reasonable prices. Public airwaves were intended for the public, to best serve the public by providing wide and varied media to all the public and large scale access to information. Airwaves ARE NOT INTENDED AND WERE NOT CREATED TO INCREASE THE PROFITS OF HUGE CORPORATIONS OR ALLOW THEM TO ELIMINATE COMPETITION. Allowing mega corporations to control and or own but not use airwaves TO STIFLE COMPETITION AND REDUCE PUBLIC ACCESS TO INFORMATION AND FAIR MARKET PRICES IS UNAMERICAN, anti-capitalistic and not a function that the FCC or any other government entity should allow or in any way participate in. Please do the right thing and do not allow corporations to purchase the available airspace to stifle competition and build monopolies.

I remember a day when the internet was as open as the airwaves. I remember when broadcast television towers were as viable a source of reception as cable tv is today; now those signals are worthless w/o cable. Government, academic, and public access to internet services were free, easy, and open for everyone to post to, develop for, or speak upon. I also remember AT&T was broken for its monopoly; now it is re-congregating and it sickens me to my stomach that these monopolies dominate over communications like airwaves, cable, internet, and phones keep devolving for their own corporate wealth.

Please keep the airwaves public.

Public Airwaves for Public Access, not private gain - The FCC doesn't have a good record for enforcing public access, e.g. the original telephone access (universal access) in the age of the internet & other communications tech - please, make sure that these airwaves are not sold for private gain or that they require a HUGE % of Operating Income or something on that order to return to the govt. for specific uses like universal access through libraries & building dept's & other govt. access points regardless of community size.

Ken Miller

We have the opportunity to transform our nation and return the United States to the very top of technological innovation. All this is required is providing low-to-no cost access to the Internet in public spaces. Computer literacy would then spread like wildfire and our native know how would take care of the rest. What if, in settling the West, the US had first sold the land in advance to land barons? That's the analogy here: the frontier of the digital age should be a wide open space. This is the only tangible, meaningful peace dividend to come out of the Cold War, the only meaningful public good to come from the massive spending on defense. The FCC protects listeners from offensive material on the airways; a transformative gesture would be to protect citizens from this impoverishing digital landgrab.

Governments exist to protect their citizens. Right now, we the citizens of the U.S. need our government to protect us from corporate greed interests. The Internet and the public airwaves must remain free and fair for all. Allowing the airwaves to be designated for private corporate interests will benefit only the CEOs of the companies who own them, resulting in thwarted innovation and a permanent detriment to the average American. I urge the FCC to mandate that the winner of the upcoming auction must allow competition and innovation.

Thank you in advance for your time and consideration in this important matter.

Formerly an AT&T customer, I have to purchase at a very high price cable internet service and cable tv (also extremely high priced) We need public airwaves to remain just that. Everything should not be for sale to the highest bidder to force customers such as I am to pay for their overly high priced services which get higher all the time (instead of lower as they add customers)

It's a scary proposition to allow OUR airwaves to (once again) be in the hands of monopolies. Please consider the long-term ramifications! ATT is once again becoming the goliath that, for decades, had total control over all communications in America. Until the company was "broken up", consumers were at their mercy. Today, with robust competition, we enjoy telecommunication innovations that were unimaginable in past decades. Please don't disallow healthy competition. It's good for the consumer and good for America.

Dear FCC
I am writing to encourage you to create public access to airwaves rather than selling them to the highest bidder.
i am a teacher residing in Josephine County, Oregon. Our libraries stopped funding internet access several months ago, and are about to close their doors indefinitely. Our neighboring Jackson County, lost their libraries in the largest mass library closings in U.S. history. This is an impoverished rural area where many households do not have computers or internet access in their homes. Creating accessible internet access would be a great blessing for those of us in this area with students unable to gain any access to information in any way(no libraries, no free internet access, etc.)Thank You

Air space for internet access should not be corralled by any large corporations at the expense of the public access. I use a local internet provider and already I cannot send messages in other parts of the country because Comcast, AT & T and other large companies block my access for outgoing messages when I am in a coffee shop or library in another part of the country. Even at my elderly parents’ house, where my siblings have installed wireless through Comcast, I cannot use my computer to send out e-mail messages to anyone because I don’t have a comcast account.

We wouldn’t block the public parks and allow one brand of hiking equipment, nor would we block the public highways and allow one or two major car manufacturers to prohibit the other car brands from using the roads.

Please vote NO and do not allow any one company to have auction rights or exclusive access to the airwaves. This truly prohibits small companies and innovative newcomers from doing business.

sincerely,
Joannah Merriman

As a victim of Verizon’s mismanagement, indifference, and price gouging I beg you not to let it and its equally awful competitors gets their hands on more of the available bandwidth!! It will just mean that the innovation goes on elsewhere, and we’ll be left falling further behind, just as we are in many of the new uses for technology. These are our, The People’s, assets. As a member thereof, I my my permission to sell my portion to these companies at ANY price. Enough is more than enough! there has been too much of a transfer of the People’s assets into corporate hands these last few years, and it is clear that these corporations never represent the interests of the People or the Nation. The FCC has done an abysmal job of upholding its duty to the People. If the FCC votes for this, I will be demanding Congressional hearings to call the FCC to accounts for yet one more betrayal of its trust to the People.

Preventing newly available frequency bands from being bought up exclusively by large companies, which have the market power and financial incentive to stifle their competition, would allow enormous growth in the range of wireless products and services available to Americans. Wireless communication can do much more for us than it does now, and breaking the current oligopoly would encourage rapid development of wireless's full potential.

Public airwaves should remain the domain of the public of the United States, and not the property of companies that could be bought out by foreign investors. What is next? Perhaps the powers that be may try to convince the public that we should sell the White House to a private firm and leasing back what we already own so some connected person or group of investors can make a profit.

The public airwaves could benefit the American public if used properly, or they could just become another part of the continuation of increased costs to the American public for services that are becoming more and more necessary for the carrying out of daily tasks. Internet is necessary for most of my college classes, for my job, and for the registration process at the school I attend. As this becomes the case for more and more of us, access to the internet is going to become an imperative that will make or break a person’s ability to succeed in the world. It is the government’s responsibility to protect the rights of the American people, and in this case the right to have increased public access to a resource that is more and more necessary for success and survival is part of that protection. Handing these airwaves over to a few corporations so that they can increase their profits while the majority of Americans have to pay higher and higher prices for services which are still labeled as "luxuries" even though they are increasingly necessary for almost every facet of life would be unconscionable.

When decisions are made to usurp the authority of and redistribute property which has been the domain of the public and has, historically, been maintained, developed, and in some instances, processed and distributed, using public funds, where is there ever any justice or equity in delivering this property to private entities without an equitable remuneration to the public? It’s particularly immoral when such entities are the recipients of various subsidies, entitlements, or tax breaks at the expense of the public who is being infringed upon.

The general public needs more opportunities to communicate, and more opportunities to enter into small business via the internet, etc. Companies like VERIZON & COMCAST should not be allowed to monopolize the internet by any means. This is not in the best interest of anyone except certain BIG CORPORATIONS. It smacks of FASCISM, and does not fit in with the philosophy of the free trade economy in the democratic country our forefathers envisioned. Microsoft was sued for monopolizing their industry, but at least Microsoft was granted a monopoly by our government.

I plan to have my own blog in the near future, and may be more active in my use of the airways. I would hate to see my use restricted by FAT CORPORATIONS LIKE VERIZON WHO HAVE A HISTORY OF QUESTIONABLE BUSINESS PRACTICES. I plan to discontinue some of my Verizon services at the end of my current contract. John Patterson

We must protect our freedom of speech and freedom to information. We must leave the internet for open and free exchange. Letting the profit driven mega monopolistic corporations gain control of this incredible asset to all people in all nations is an abomination of what this country used to stand for! Is there no place were we can be in control of what information we have access to and with whom we share it? You have given away the airways to the highest bidder, leaving Americans more in the dark than ever about what is actually happening in the world. I'm perfectly satisfied with the way MoveOn has phrased it: the public airways should be used for the public good.

The public airwaves should not be sold but should be available for free public use because commercial users have more than enough airwave space to do them with the technologies they have at hand.

Isn't it enough that you have a strangle hold on TV and Radio? That our News is filtered and puked through the Bush informercial networks like FOX? Common--killing PBS isn't enough? Bad enough we have to watch news on BBC to get something besides crap now.

Public airwaves are obviously PUBLIC. What part of that is not clear?

I AM NAUSEATED AT THE CORRUPTION BEING PERFORMED ON THE AMERICAN PEOPLE AND THEIR PUBLIC AIRWAVES BY YOU - THE FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION. WHAT HAVE YOU BECOME - FASCISTS? I AM SO ASHAMED OF YOU AND A NUMBER OF OTHER SO-CALLED PUBLIC LEADER-CRIMINALS! THIS ISN’T AMERICA ANYMORE - IT’S A THIRD WORLD COUNTRY, THANKS TO GARBAGE LIKE YOU! YOUR JOB IS SUPPOSED TO PROTECT OUR AIRWAVES FROM CORPORATE GATEKEEPERS THAT SHOULD STIFLE INNOVATION AND COMPETITION IN THE WIRELESS INTERNET MARKET! SHAME ON YOU FOR FAILING TO DO THAT!

Ernest Kight
COLLEGE PARK, GA 30349-6437

Dear FCC Commissioners:
Since you have decided to auction off wireless frequencies, I urge you in the strongest possible terms to include as a part of the sale agreement with any and all purchasers of these airwaves that the purchaser is required to refrain from any and all anti-competitive and anti-innovative activities, including simply holding those airwaves unused (thus effectively eliminating their use entirely).

Such regulations must be backed by regulations ensuring sure, swift and economically significant penalties for violations.

The Internet must be readily available at an affordable price to all U.S. residents, not simply to those who can afford to pay huge sums.

In the 21st Century, the right to Internet access at a reasonable price is as fundamental as the right to reasonably priced land-line telephone service.

Thanks you for your attention.

The United States is at a turning point. Soon we will be faced with the burning question, will such things as patents and monopoly status, that have served us well in the past, continue to be in our best interest? The on-ramp to new innovations has shortened from decades to months, and the constraints of old-world laws and regulations are keeping us from advancing into our rightful position as the leader in technology and innovation. The auction of public airwaves is a major step in that innovation. Please do the right thing and keep those frequencies open to public access: in five years we will see the exponential benefits that risk will have brought. Thank you.

Keep the airwaves democratic and open to individual innovation and available to broadcasters who are bringing us both information and unheard of but struggling voice trying to overcome the strangle hold that corporate giants in communication and production hold in the communications field. This is an exciting time in internet history. I believe the first amendment grants all Americans the freedom of speech. If the federal government continues with its plan to turn over a huge portion of our public airwaves over to multinational corporations who look at the bottom line rather than constitutional rights, I fear the media will become censured and there will be little freedom of expression outside of the corporate mandated program. I urge you to seriously reconsider your stance on this issue. Thank you.

I've made my living on the Internet since 1995, and I have a good understanding of this bandwidth issue. It is absurd and irresponsible to allow corporations to purchase transmission bands. It goes against the whole idea of "public good." Isn't the point of large companies to provide innovative services to the public, spurred on by competition? This will stifle competition and the public will be served far more poorly so that a few people can make large profits. It is, at bottom, immoral.

Please be aware of the ongoing divide between the corporate world and that of regular citizens. Your role as the FCC is to protect the rights and access of regular citizens to communication. Allowing corporate America to buy up the airwaves is like selling off the rights to the air we breathe. These communication channels belong to everyone, not just those with unlimited resources. Regular citizens need to know that the FCC is cognizant of their rights and not solely at the beck and call of big business.

Since once these airwaves are in the possession of large companies we can never take them back, I feel you have an obligation to protect these for the general good of the common citizen.

I spent six years as a broadcast news anchor and reporter at a local radio station. Over the course of time, I have witnessed the deterioration of the local airwaves at the hands of corporate business mergers. The lack of alternative media outlets is the end result of the corporate desire for bottom line profit over quality broadcast news and programs.

I'm a Spanish (Barcelona, Spain) listener of several stream-broadcast radio stations over there. They are small ones and I'm afraid I cannot understand why should they be penalised for being and anting to be small. Besides they're offering me what I was looking for and only by open communications networks could have been achieved.

Families would no longer be forced to choose solely between high-priced phone and cable Internet. A new wireless market including lots of competition within that market would mean more affordable Internet access for families. Poor and rural communities which phone and cable companies never bothered to wire with high-speed Internet access could now have high-speed Internet signals beamed directly into their homes.

Blackberry and other handheld wireless users are currently blocked by phone companies from accessing Internet-based phone service and other innovative services. The FCC could stop these anti-competitive, anti-consumer practices by mandating wireless Net Neutrality.

Socially responsible buyers could someday go to a store, scan the bar codes of products with an Internet-equipped cell phone, and find out which items are socially responsible. Phone companies can currently block such innovations from working with their devices (they often try to shake down innovators into giving them a massive cut of their profits) but the FCC can prohibit such practices on these newly available airwaves.

Technology consumers in America are currently denied all sorts of cutting-edge technology that people in other countries have like using Internet-equipped cell phones to buy products, transfer money, or give to charity. By opening the doors to competition and innovation, the FCC can change that.
please keep the public airwaves open for public use. allowing the public airwaves to be controlled by private companies will only serve to enrich these companies and not benefit the public.

Comcast? they don’t deserve even the slight hint of consideration this Company is really a piece of work example here in my home town Sacramento, California the Cable comm. does not even regulate the Cable firm when it comes to the Internet service portion /dept. of the Cable firm? Comcast has a ONE modem per house RULE if you want an extra modem or put a new modem on even an EXISTING line/network in your home or apt it’s an EXTRA 53. bucks!! three years ago they tried doing that to me settled the issue for an extra six bucks a month for the extra modem MY modem I bought to just access the comcast internet network it was six bucks three years later my mom had to get hers replaced it was a comcast modem so comcast sends out a techie and replaces it then tells me they CUT OFF my modem service I asked why? the techie says one too many violates their RULE if I want to access it it’s 53. bucks they revived an issue resolved three years ago! my mistake was not having the resolution in writing because as a customer they did escalate the matter I was told a return call no later than 72 hours later they NEVER called me back and I called them to only find out they had KILLED the ticket number work order of escalation because ”they” see no issue and No problem simply put they told me on the phone one modem or else PAY higher fees and this was regardless of my mother being an on-time paying customer for 16 yrs and another three with internet and PAYING top of the line fees for top of the line premium packages and this is the service we get in return? they kept her modem off !! but mine on !! and I have interruptions of service at night to make things interesting 15 mins AFTER I call the Cable comm. they CUT OFF my internet /voip phone service then later in the day turn it back on!! the complaints filed with Sacramento Cable Comm with the awareness the way things are regulating wise we were warned that comcast can and could ignore the commission complaint but who knows they told us. SO NO WAY should we even consider for example give comcast such a lovely reward for it’s crappy behavior.

The internet has become Main Street USA. There must be open and public access to the internet for everyone. Cable companies began by offering low cost service - now for tv and internet we pay $150+ per month. There is no reason prices should be going up. Use of airwaves should be for the benefit of the public not the enrichment of a few corporations. Do not let this happen or we can add one more nail to the coffin of our democracy.

The public airwaves are one of the last available resources for free speech which will in fact, based upon current reality, be curtailed, censored by corporate interests. Do not let this happen or we can add one more nail to the coffin of our democracy.

Signed petition should be sufficient.
For once please don’t sell us out to big business.
Congress should use the existing airways for the common good of the American Public. Do not give away our airspace for monetary gain.
There are times when a monopoly can be beneficial but usually they become established and then fight to increase profitability to the detriment of the consumer. Whereas leaving the market open to all keeps the competitors innovative and affordable.
I do not want the FCC to allow corporate “gatekeepers” to block airwaves from innovation and new technology. This is anti-American.

<td>I need open airwaves for a very selfish reason: I have an illness that makes it impossible for me to work a regular office 8-5 job. As a result, I rely on the internet as an outlet for myself to earn a living for my family. However, I live in a very rural area with virtually NO access to hi-speed internet. Therefore, I am handicapped even further by trying to earn a living with battling very slow internet speed. The public deserves the benefits and fair and open market can bring. It does not deserve more and more corporate control over it's life. American used to be the land of the free. Now it is the land of corporate free reign. What did I do to deserve so low class treatment from my government?</td>

Prices for Internet Services are skyrocketing, yet the FCC does nothing to protect the public from corporate gougers - this must end, and preventing corporations from stifling competition should be stopped. Free our airwaves!

Karen Kieffer
Boston, MA 02130

Oddly enough, I believe the government is better able to manage access to the airwaves than are private companies. I live in a very poorly served rural area, and it is very clear that private industry’s interest is limited to areas where they can achieve maximum profit for minimum investment. There is a place for private industry, but they must not be ceded control over the airwaves.

Why don’t you Bozo’s in the federal government just focus on destroying our economy by shipping jobs overseas for your corporate buddies. Keep your power hungry hands off the Internet. This truly came from the private sector and in that those individuals that would presume to purchase it now had nothing to do with it, it is a very bad idea.

Please prevent these mammoth corporations from taking over the airwaves. Whatever happened to the idea of public works? If you don't stop this from happening there will be no stopping them from artificially raising prices, stifling innovation, and providing good service. There must be an innovator on the public's side here.

Please keep the airways public.

big corporations already have control of the media, don't let them have the airwaves as well.

Do not give away airwaves to the big companies warehousing instead of public use.

For once put the people ahead of BIG BUSINESS.
Please use the powers entrusted to you by and for the public to stop this from happening. Public airwaves should continue to be used for the public good—NOT for more corporate privatization and greed-driven competition-squashing profits.

The airwaves that American citizens pay for with their taxes should NOT be given away to large corporations that will control content and offer usage at high rates. I am a Verizon customer and I've been told that there is no way a DSL line will ever be run to where I live. So, it’s obvious that only some of the public will even be able to access these airwaves. The anti-trust laws written many years ago to protect democracy are already being ignored and broken. The majority of the media in this country is owned by 4 huge corporations, and their monopoly shows in the pathetic "news" coverage we get. I am poor, but internet is a necessary part of my life. However, as it is now I pay for internet but cant afford health insurance. Please keep these airwaves working for public good, help people like me, or you, or your children by creating cheap or free government access to a wireless system. Its a priceless tool, why give it away to these large corporations, when it can be given to the people you represent. One final thought and note, this could be a great opportunity to create a piece of infrastructure as valuable, important, and legendary as the interstate highway system. Please think what a benefit an investment like that has been for our country and what this project could be and do for the health and wealth of our nation.

Can you for a minute believe that we would tolerate a car company that disabled the CD player and provided a radio with which you could only listen to the auto makers subscription radio service? "I paid for a CD Player, why cant I use it?" Or if HBO produced a TV that could only receive HBO? Or how about a light bulb that you purchased from the power company that would only run on their power?

I already have technology available on my PDA device that is blocked by Verizon. I would prefer, actually demand, that this never be allowed to be the case again. I paid full price for a device that has the functionality in it, that is literally disabled by Verizon. (I know it's there because I was a Palm developer, way before it became fashionable.)

My laptop can connect to my PDA via Bluetooth and my PDA can connect to the internet. Ergo, I should be able to connect my laptop to the internet via my PDA using the Bluetooth connection. This is nothing new. Now, Sprint and Verizon have PDA products with this functionality built in from the PDA manufacturer, but the cell carriers disable this functionality. Instead, you must buy a second device, with a second monthly fee, that uses the very same signals as their PDA's do. Don't take my word for it, Google the words Verizon, bluetooth, blocked, and see for yourself.

They even block some of the most basic Bluetooth functionality so you can't even get your photo's off the camera. You either need their ridiculously over priced cable, or worse, their insanely priced photo service, which actually costs more to use than a regular camera and film processing. Wasn't it supposed to be better, easier and cheaper?

In a nutshell (for the non-techie types), rather than having one device with one bill you need two, even though the technology is there and already in place. Oh and by the way, they bill you for your access in both cases. It's not as if I'm talking about stealing service or just getting something for free. You pay for the access you use on both devices. I don't mind paying for the access, it's getting stuck with the second monthly service fee along with the cost of the second device.

Perhaps here's the best analogy of all: Imaging having paid for a phone, phone line install and Do a little good.

Please protect the rights of the citizens. Please don't turn the airways to the whims of big business. Everything in this world should not be determined by how best to make a buck!

Please use the public airwaves for the public good, don't sell them to any for profit entity.

Please do not opt for anti-competitive behaviour in this country of free enterprise.

I don't care for Big Business getting bigger, then "Out sourcing" for their own good. Without competiveness, I will be stuck, like I am now with Comcast, with low quality and 93% increase in fees and no other cable company can afford to come to my area.

Don't sell the public out!

Dear FCC,

It is extremely important that you support the public airwaves to be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporations who want to stifle innovation and competition in the wireless internet market. Thank you for your smart choice to support the public good.

Unless we want a class war of have and have-nots and a total loss of civil liberties, OUR FCC MUST ACT FOR THE GOOD OF ALL. These companies already have participated in sharing our private information with secret government investigations. The Internet was not created for the profit of big corporations at the expense of the individual. If the FCC allows this, the USA is no better than the USSR or Venezuela!

The major Internet providers have used their power to stifle competition and will continue to do so. Here in Pennsylvania, the city of Philadelphia wanted to create a public wireless network for use by everyone in the city. Verizon and Comcast lobbied the state legislature, which ultimately passed a law stating that any public network must use Verizon or Comcast. This kind of abuse of power will only continue if they and their ilk are allowed to purchase the new frequencies. Please stop them, and provide these frequencies for the public good rather than financial gain for a few.

my husband is a severely disabled combat vet. he cannot walk & his only REAL contact with the outside world is thru internet service which in our area is very expensive 80.00 a month it’s sad when someone who gave years of their life for this country is expected to pay outrageous fees to continue to be a fully functional participating member of the society they gave so much for to line the pocket of a few members of that same society. There are many others like him-please keep the public airwaves public. Thank you.

The FCC has pirated the publicly owned airwaves for no other purpose than to auction rights to them, to the highest corporate bidder, for the sole purpose of revenue generation that is used to perpetuate the agenda of the FCC. Please don't put a price on our air! We pay enough for basic necessities controlled by huge corporations - it would not be fair to place our airwaves in their hands too. Let the airwaves be used for the public good rather than to line the pockets of the greedy wealthy corporations who only think of their own bottom lines and executive salary packages. They have shown NO concern for the public good in general, and would undoubtedly use these airwaves to increase their profits rather than for the public good. The "trickle down" theory has been proven to be a fallacy, the corporations will try to convince you that their new products and profits will trickle down to us normal folk, but that is usually not the case historically. I used to work for "the" communications giant, you know, the one that "deregulated" in the 80s to provide "competitive options", the one that is now back to being almost exactly the same as it was 20 years ago! Can't you see the writing on the wall? Their only interest is in making things better for the company – specifically for the COOs., CEOs., CFOs and the board members with huge stock options and compensation package. The internet is the greatest opportunity for communication this planet has ever had, the tool that can truly help everyone to be given opportunity to learn, to get information to help themselves and others and to make the world a better place for us all. Don't put a lock on that door to opportunity by granting restrictive power to a few huge conglomerates.

Many communications companies are suppressing innovation: comcast (as an ISP) interferes with certain internet applications; most cell providers try (successfully) to control what applications are run on your mobile devices and cell phones by controlling internet traffic or locking the phones outright. This is all okay so long as there’s competition, but if they gobble up all the available medium, there will be no alternative for consumers but to accept these shoddy services. All innovation must then stem from companies that are actively suppressing it today. Please keep the world safe for innovators like (today’s) Clearwire.

The Internet has not only made incredible leaps in communication for all, but has allowed small business (most of our economic backbone, employing most people), schools, universities, and other educational institutions, to have a fair share of the market, and remain viable and up to date. In addition, access to health care in rural areas would enormously benefit our families and children if high speed internet is affordable and accessible. We need to support and continue to have free access to our airwaves. Please DO NOT turn this vital resource over to companies that would hinder or limit access. Whoever wins that auction cannot be allowed to stifle competition and innovation on our public airwaves. Thank you.

Hi,
I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.
These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.
You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

There can be no clearer mandate for the very existence of the FCC than to protect the interests of the public in this matter. The resources at our disposal - whether the physical resources of our planet, or the more intangible resources of our airwaves - should be utilized for the enrichment of humanity and society in general, and not merely to provide more avenues to corporate profit. The airwaves belong to the public, not corporations like Verizon and AT&T whose anti-competitive practices have resulted in the U.S. falling to 16th in the world in high-speed Internet rankings.

To restore America’s leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

We think we are safe from political takeovers because we are such a large country with lots of independent caring people and yet we have sat still while this Administration has changed the Constitution. It has made laws for the forests, so the big companies can cut down the trees and make more money. It has made many conservation rules and laws. The medical system is in trouble because fewer people can get adequate help so the pharmaceutical corporations make more money. Many important parts of education have been taken out so we cant teach our children properly. It is very short on the History and the Arts - two extremely important subjects for keeping people thinking and creating instead of being robots and doing as they are told. Many, many changes that to me all spell Keep the peasants ignorant so they wont be able to figure out what we are heading for. They have controlled a great deal of the media for a long time and this is just another attempt to close us off from what is happening.

The PUBLIC airwaves used to be regulated and patrolled for a balance of point of view and type of presenter. It is time to bring back more regulation, more diversity of viewpoint, and more range of citizen input. It is no surprise to me that the networks have lost market share. They belong to the right wing. Keep the Internet Free For All.

The sale of Public airwaves to private enterprise will stifle competition by allowing business to "sit-on" the airwaves rather than utilize them for public good. Public airwaves are not the personal fiefdom of the FCC. Please work in the public interest and not in the interest of corporate robber barons. Democracy can’t survive without the free exchange of ideas. This is promoted by low cost access to internet, phone and broadcast media. I would encourage all officials to act in the public interest. The FCC is in a unique position to protect the interests of our citizenry. Thank you for your time and attention in this matter.

The airwaves are public property. Let us remain a democracy and leave it that way.

Please don't take away more of our freedoms. Stop working for big business instead of your constituents.

I do not want a few copanies monopolizing the remaining airwaves!

Thank you for considering the impact of your decision. This country has a shameful record of selling this public property to monopolistic concerns, but enough is enough. Don't turn the wireless internet bandwidth into the next "Ma Bell." America deserves better.

I urge you to ensure that this valuable national asset is used for the public good and ban current internet providers from buying the airwaves in order to prevent competition.
For those of us who are disabled, this is the only way we have of being in touch and to rob us of this freedom is indeed highly insulting and utterly unacceptable. Could you please surprise all of us by doing the right thing and keeping public airways for the good of the public and not bow to the corporate god of greed? The FCC made mistakes in how it dealt with low power FM broadcasting. Mistakes that it has had to reverse, with only partial success. Please learn from that experience. Do the right thing in the first place. Support the public's right to an open, democratic communications system.

Neil Maclean

Dear FCC Staff:
There is no reason to have our communication systems go out to the highest bidder seeing the whole objective business in the communication field is competition but on a fair ground with equal representation for the public's good not the corporation getting more air time or more profits from its various financial contributors. Access to communication should be to inform the public not to be used for commercial gain.
To take away the whole purpose of communications is to shut off all means of which we as a society communicate via tv, radio, short wave radio, cell phone, telephone. Communication companies have a responsibility to act in accordance with the public good.

Is it possible that the Internet could remain a public good, and not be constantly threatened by the FCC and the special interests who are always out to wall off certain pieces of the pie for themselves? I'd really like it if the FCC would notice that the Internet is public space, and should remain that way, without gatekeepers or guards on the ramps to the Information Superhighway. Please!

The airwaves are as public as the oceans and the air we breathe—they are not for sale nor should they be. At some point, the FCC has to assume its duties to act, not for corporations, but for the American people. The notion the FCC could see the internet off is completely contrary to the entire premise of the internet. Please keep the internet free—these corporations can make money elsewhere, but not in my backyard. Thank you.

Keeping the airwaves truly public would take the money out of seeking political office. Every licensee should be required to provide a given number of hours (say 10) of free access to every political candidate for office. These hours must be provided during regular viewing hours (say, from 6 a.m. to midnight). Candidates could use this time for promoting their candidacy, providing their views, outlining their plans – whatever they chose. This would take the most of the demand for money out of political campaigns and leave those elected to office free from "debts" to their donors. They are OUR public airwaves and they should be used to promote PUBLIC good.

I have personally experienced the hardball tactics of Verizon, AT&T and Comcast, and Verizon is not slowed by class action lawsuit they lost in New Jersey. This alone is grounds to advocate airwave protection. You have in your hands the single most democratizing, innovative tool for the coming century and I cannot emphasize enough the far ranging influence of such and egregious decision as public endorsement of these private companies. Allowing such unprecedented concentration of media power is a heartbeat away from monopoly, leaves us more shamefully vulnerable to international competition precisely when we should be leading the charge, and the sounds the taps to the funeral of communications'small business autonomy. I urge stalwart protection of diversity in the wireless internet market, lest government, electoral politics, and an informed populace become the puppets of megacorporations any more than they already are. Look to your children's futures! As a single parent of three, I have seen no issue remotely as important for its long term consequences. So far corporate America hasn't shown it can be entrusted to look out for the best interests of the digital communications consumer. The best example of this is the cable industry which has stifled competition at every step and has resisted a pick and choose option for selecting cable stations. The cable companies use their monopolistic pricing power to drive up rates annually at way over any cost of living or other inflationary benchmarks. The improvement in services delivered is not commensurate with the monthly fees charged.

I worry that the Internet will go the way of cable tv - its early promise to deliver ad free content for a reasonable fee has moved in precisely the opposite direction. Please don’t permit that same greedy behavior to stifle Internet access.

As a Montanan, I especially value public broadcasting because our small market doesn’t allow for much competition among the for-profit entities. Auctioning off rights to more of our airwaves will only further limit the diversity of opinions in our area, which runs counter to the principles of democracy and free speech upon which our nation is founded.
Please do not sell or auction off new frequencies. Radioastronomers need many of these frequencies to study the early universe. If new bands are opened up, they should be carefully studied AND very strict limits placed on the emission generated by the electronics at other (higher harmonics, in general) frequencies.

Furthermore, there may be legitimate health concerns like for cell phones (at least for children) which have not been fully studied yet. Thank you.

Please allow the end users more control over the services they are provided and strongly question the actions of these large cable and wireless providers. The ability to pick a provider, which is denied in most areas, forces the provider market so that they must be competitive and innovative in their technologies. However, with soft governance over the airwaves we risk that the market dominance of these companies will moreover punish the end user in prices, content, quality of services, and ability to use what should be a rich space—public airwaves—for public use and purposes NOT corporate control. One need only to look at the poor deal won with the weather channel, CSPANs, and community access channels to understand how soft rules on the part of the FCC allow for big providers to skirt public obligations!

Please keep the airwaves public, without turning them over to corporations. America’s success is based on competition, and limiting competition to the larger corporations means fewer options and higher prices to consumers. Many of us have our budgets stretched to the max already, in part because of limited competition. (For example, in my area, the only high-speed internet access I can get is through Comcast.) More and more, access to the internet is a necessity, whether for work or for school, and the high prices of access are a burden to middle-class families. Please help us maintain the American way.

As a broadcast engineer I would much prefer to have more affordable prices than current Internet service. This could be done by using the the bandwidth that is set to be auctioned off. Let's free the airwaves for the public good! Big companies like ATT don't have to worry, we'll still always use them for our phone service, but free airwaves will be great for getting people out of their homes and working out in the open, for example at a cafe, where they will directly impact the local economy by purchasing services and goods. Not to mention, we need our freedom of speech, something that seems to be disappearing from our constitution.

The American economy has grown fastest when competition was fiercest. We must not allow large companies to stifle innovation.

The FCC, as guardian of the PUBLIC airways should have our best interest in mind. And while I am sending you this message, I would also like to strongly protest the use of more and more air-time for tv commercials. The amount of time for commercials should be drastically reduced.

Dear FCC,
Please do not turn over the public airwaves to huge corporations like AT&T; they will only stifle competition, and worse, inhibit the exercise of free speech on a heretofore public medium, as well as possibly inhibit interstate trade via the internet; I think we all agree that such things would run counter to the American ethos and experience.

In my opinion, the Internet is a public good. As such, it should be available to everyone at some reasonable cost. Competition and commercialization have done nothing to improve the resources and the cost of high speed access has been skyrocketing. Competition is usually supposed to bring prices down. Dear Members of Congress;

Over the past twenty-five years, the ownership of the American media has become controlled by fewer and fewer corporations. This has limited the competition among the corporate media to the extent that the news, the music and the "soap operas" provided by one media corporation are no better than another. Thus these mergers and acquisitions have proven to be not in the best interests of the American people.

The use of the internet has proven itself to be an American lifeline for open news, music, special reports and a host of other uses. The upcoming issue of who will control the internet and how it will be controlled is of vital importance to America and Americans.

Will you support America and Americans or will you support the corporations who have proven that they will limit the media to whatever the corporations want the American people to hear, see, read and have free access?

Sincerely,

Since the airwaves belong to the public, never sell them to anyone. Instead, require commercial users to lease the public airwaves indefinitely. Only Amateur, Citizens Band, and other 'public', non-commercial uses should be free (for not-commercial uses), financed if necessary by the commercial leases of airspace.

as a designer that creates interactive applications and experiences for both companies and individual people my livelihood is directly affected by this act, and i see the potential benefit to the public if these airwaves could be made to service them directly. i can see real benefits emerging in the way people go about their day-to-day business if only there was a way to promote always on free wireless access in large areas (zones) and if so it would revolutionize many various industries and open doors to new services that can only work if wireless access to the net was possible. again this would help businesses and people because the internet will become the medium the ether that allows people to enrich their lives and has applications beyond simple web browsing, etc. thank you.

I would really like to see an open standard (like TCP/IP) for the airwaves, where there is a general method of sending and recieving information from peer to peer, regardless of the type of information that is being transmitted. There should be rules and policies designed for this, so that their is not mass amounts of noise. This idea should not be sold to just one company, but it should be available for everyone to use, and not just corporations to sell. We have the ability to organize beyond just corporations today, and we should start using that ability and create an open standard. Are we going to stay ahead of over sea nations or are we going to surpass them? For us to surpass them we have to vote for open standard, that any company can utilize. I say no to auctioning off our airwaves, and yes to open standards for their use!

I support, in no uncertain terms, this petition to protect our airwaves from ANY KIND of interference from corporations. For years we have seen the results of the take-overs that have occurred already. Information has been married to entertainment to the point where, as in the recent past our very own Government! has created their own “news stories” and run them on prpgrams as if they were just part of the evening line-up. It was government propaganda! Solid information takes more work to ferret out and this is where the internet has been so valuable (also made the job of finding the truth more difficult). We Cannot Have Our roads to information dammed off by Corporations. The government must do it’s job upholding this part of the Constitution for the people!

The United States is supposed to be the bastion of freedom around the world. Isn’t that supposedly one of the reasons why we are currently at war in Iraq...to further the cause of freedom? One of the only ways to guarantee our freedoms here in the U.S. is protect our public airwaves. I personally believe that one of the most important issues of our time is the the consolidation of media organizations into large megacorporations who control public news information. Handing over public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon and Comcast is not in the public interest. The FCC has been abdicating its responsibility to the citizenry of this great country. You need to protect the wireless internet revolution going on right now which one day soon may be the only way for citizens to obtain truly unbiased news.

To the Honorable FCC;
Do not permit monopoly ownership of the Public airways by big business. Our global society of nations is screaming to see business leadership protect Public rights. Vibrant Public technologies must remain available to all entrepreneurs so to secure the greatest level of competition which leads to the highest level of innovation. In the Federal Government the GSA mandates all government procurements under $100,000 be set aside for small business. It is this ideology that nurtures small business commerce and advances innovation. Do not allow the telecommunication industry to strip from small business America this tremendous opportunity for commerce in the Public airwaves.

FOR GOD'S SAKE HOW MUCH MORE OF AMERICA IS GOING TO GO TO CORPORATIONS WHO PAY VERY LITTLE OR NO TAXES WHILE THEY RIDE THE BACKS OF TAX PAYING CITIZENS? PERHAPS WE ARE NO LONGER THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ... I PLEDGE ALLEGIANCE TO THE ALMIGHTY DOLLAR INSTEAD OF GOD IN THE UNITED CORPORATIONS IN AMERICA ... AMEN, I MEAN AHEM. WHY IS THIS EVEN A CONSIDERATION? THE INTERNET SERVICE WE GET FROM QWEST, AT & T, COMCAST ALREADY SUCKS. THE AIRWAVES ARE FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD AND NOT FOR CORPORATE WELLFARE. Public airwaves are public. They do not belong to any administration to give away to the private sector. Privatization of public resources, which includes airwaves is direct theft. The new age in which we live is entirely driven and dependent upon internet access. To allow these airwaves to be bought up large corporations inhibits the ability of the average American to utilize the capabilities offered by unfettered internet access effectively. Specifically, this affects the millions who seek employment at, or around the minimum wage; for many companies exclusively hire via the internet. Some offer access to the applications in their stores, but many do not. Indeed, there are methods to obtain free internet access, but this is usually through institutions such as libraries, which may or may not be open when the use of the internet is needed. If the sale of these airwaves is allowed to proceed, it would be a travesty to the average American, and further proof that we have entered the golden age of American corptocracy.

If the United States of America is truly a free country then it should not allow large private companies to restrict US citizens from accessing the same technology that is available to people in other countries. This would be a very ironic situation if the citizens of other countries had more freedom to technology than Americans in the once "Land of the Free."

Gordon Zimmerman

If big companies take control of public airwaves it would be a very sad day for every citizen in the US. The advancement of the availability of information would be exponentially slowed down—only in the interest of the benefit of corporations. Please do not let this happen.

You were charged with protecting the public airwaves for the public. The bandwidth is not yours to turnover to greedy businesses who are pricing ordinary citizens out of access. How much longer will the Commissioners kow-tow to the rich and the gluttonous? Why are my tax dollars paying your salary and yet you are considering biting the hand that feeds all of you? Maybe it’s time for a congressional hearing into the FCC and its ties to the phone and cable titans.

You cannot let corporations dictate to the FCC and thus the public how the PUBLIC airways can be used. These airways belong to the people and should remain untethered and available. Foster competition by NOT giving in to AT&T, Verizon, Comcast and other cable companies.

On a related note all television/video (TV) providers should have to provide PEG channels. If there are already PEG channels set up in a community than any other TV providers who come in to that community should have to make those channels available and should also provide support to the communities for these channels. It shouldn’t just be mandated to Cable companies, with the new FIOS TV, there should be PEG channels and support to the community for these channels.

Let's keep these airwaves for the public's use. Major communications giants will only charge us for their use (or monopolize them to prevent the people from exercising their lawful use). I say NO!!! This belongs to the citizens.

The economic power of the internet is the fact that ideas can bubble up and be shared at the grassroots level. If large corporations mediate the process, it will cause a dampening of this activity among people who cannot afford it. Politically, democracy depends upon open discourse among a reasoned, educated populace. The means of communication are too concentrated in too few hands, bringing us to the brink of dictatorship. The internet needs to remain free. We are demanding that China allow its citizens free access to the internet without government interference. Americans should be afforded this same open access without exorbitant charges by corporations.

No convincing argument can support the sale of these airwaves. The government should not only hold onto these for public use, but also for use in times of emergency. Private companies would have no reason to give free access to these in times of emergency, whereas if the government retained them, they would be able to easily use them in the interest of public safety.

The internet offers, and promises to offer even more in the future, opportunities for all citizens to participate in a true democracy. In a time where our system of checks-and-balances is being manipulated for the benefit of a few for profit and not the many for society’s overall progress, it is important as ever to recognize the use of public airwaves for the public good. As we are on the verge of great changes and progress in our time, it is necessary to have an internet that can bring us all together in order to address the most serious issues of the day. Please consider these facts as you make one of the most important decisions regarding the internet to date. Thank you for your time.

Douglas Minnis

We’re urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks. The opportunity to revolutionize the Internet and wireless world is at our fingertips. The only question is whether our government will embrace it, and whether regular people will fight for it.

I am in the process of retiring, and expanding my use of the internet is a large part of my plan for my years of retirement. I will look unkindly and suspiciously at any government action, legislative or executive, which curtails my internet usage by making it unavailable or more expensive. Because of the positioning of the house my wife and I have built, I may have to pay $1000 or more just to initiate internet service, and I will willingly do it because of the possibilities that an easily available internet offers. I will work very hard to expose and to try to reverse any decisions not in the best interests of internet users. Don’t sell the internet out to corporate greed.

Dear FCC Representative,

It's important in a democracy for there to be media and public airwaves available purely for the interest of the public good and not for biased profit, which would be the case if you turn over these public airwaves to big companies who will only hold them to stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution instead of using them with the BEST interest of the public in mind. This cannot be allowed to happen if we are to preserve our true democracy.

sometimes "big" companies don't care about people, they're more interested in making money than providing affordable services or plans. these companies don't always let consumers know about their low cost internet plans, phone plans, etc. with more companies and advertising, there should be more affordable and better services for everybody, students, employers, employees, self employed, and people on budgets.

If the airwaves are given to the corporations we might as well kiss the rest of democracy goodbye. We all know that the corporations put the congress and the president into power...and are behind much of the legislation that protects the rich and limits the middle and lower classes. This would be the last INSULT this current administration could hurl at us. Let it also be the final WAKE UP CALL for Americans to stop being apathetic and take our country back from these corporate giants, raiders and crooks! These are the same corporations who are behing the Rush Limbaugh's and Bill O'Reilly's who claim they are the TRUE patriots and those who either question the powers that be or oppse them are not true Americans. Well, this is one of the times we need to pull together and be patriotic and SAVE America. Look at Venezuela. We blame Chavez for his pro communist stance....as we watch him take over the airwaves. And what shall we do as this happens here? Nothing? Let's unite on the very important patriotic issue!

"What's needed to spur innovation is a simple requirement: that any winner of the auction respect a rule that gives consumers the right to attach any safe device (meaning it does no harm) to the wireless network that uses that spectrum. It's called the Cellular Carterfone rule, after a 1968 decision by the FCC in a case brought by a company called Carter Electronics that wanted to attach a shortwave radio to AT&T's network. That decision resulted in the creation of the standard phone jack."

The corpratization of the publics airways is appalling to me personally and is a violation of the trust that ”we the people” have in our politicians. That the government would even consider giving corporate interests more bandwidth with which to consumerize the nation speaks volumes for what has happened to this once great nation.

Keep up the great work politicians and bureaucrats. You have crossed the boundry of capitalism to fascism. The evidence is clear. You have managed to fool the people into falling for something against their best interests again. You should be very proud of yourselves. Should God actually exist and there is a judgement day may this decision reserve you a fireside seat in eternity!

I oppose the public airwaves being auctioned to companies who will significantly profit by them and further consolidate the media.

Unfortunately, the text is not fully legible. It appears to include a number of names and addresses, possibly signatures on a petition. The text is focused on the concern about the auctioning of public airwaves to companies that will significantly profit from them, leading to a consolidation of media. The text emphasizes the importance of the public interest in the media and calls for a different approach.

The text also mentions the need to keep the internet for the public good and highlights the importance of serving the public interest rather than corporate greed.

Additionally, the text advocates for the airwaves being a communal resource, not to be put under privatized corporations, which would be allowed to decide the availability, cost, and content allowed on the airwaves, which is not what an open society should approve or allow.

The text is collected by MoveOn.org Civic Action and is page 2103.
The FCC is mandated to serve the best interests of the public, NOT the corporate bottom line. The consolidation of major forms of mass media has worked against the necessity to hear, read, and see a full range of perspectives on the public airwaves, and through high-speed telecommunications. This appalling lack of diversity cannot be continued to serve the interests of the telecommunication giants such as AT&T, Comcast, and Verizon. We need Diversity, and Competition, NOT the same players dominating our mass media landscape. The FCC must not continue to ignore the necessity for affordable high-speed internet that can only be achieved by competition and innovation in the media landscape.

Please keep the public airways open for the public good! There is already far too little competition on the parts of these big companies, and we, the end users, are the ones who are left to suffer for it in the form of HORRIBLE customer service. These companies know they have no competition so they therefore have no incentive to treat their customers with respect.

Granting such rights to companies like these would be an unforgivable act of evil on your part. These companies should and must be broken, as their anti-competitive/anti-consumer practices have done nothing but further the oppression of the poor working man. They exist only to dominate their markets, allowing them to expand will only serve to undermine yet another aspect of the free market. America without competitive free markets is not the America that I grew up in, nor the country that I wish to live in.

Furthermore, any corporation or other entity which is leased the right to use public airspace for any form of communication such as radio, TV, internet, etc. should be required to provide equal free airtime to all legitimate (over 5% support as determined by scientific polling) political campaigns during the three months prior to any election. Not that it will do any good to note the fundamental moral flaws, not to mention actual corruption of the neocon privatization mantra, but, the airwaves are a "commons" entity, like air and water that should never be privatized. If you want to further blacken the names of the neocon cabal in the history books, go ahead and screw over the public yet again by not including the public good in the leases of "commons" entities. The FCC has already done enough damage with its rules on private use of the public airwaves. We spend millions buying back space for political debate that should be provided for free. Don't loose this opportunity for some public good!!!

Alexander Hartray
Chicago, IL 60614-4716
Airwave space is inherently the property of that which occupies the space, including the public. To give over airwave rights to corporate gatekeepers who are guided by maximizing their profits at the expense of the public, would be taking away from the public that which is inherently theirs, and given over to those who do not have the maximization of the public functionality as their guide. The public also inherently owns the right to choose which websites and resources to individually access; thus to give over gate-keeping privileges to anyone else would be a destruction of American freedom which would invite restrictions forcing paths to special interest purveyors; corporate functions need to remain in the advertising role, not the gatekeeper role; otherwise, innovation and opportunity is stifled for all. Corporate success needs to be based only on benefit to the customer. Thus the government, charged with responsibly delegating the rights to natural resources of which the airwaves are one kind, must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless market, and very likely would be in a position to force the public toward web resources of very questionable purposes, thus become a major risk to America.

In many of the articles I read it seems as if the FCC is not doing what it should to protect the average citizen/user. Please consider your legacy. Do you want to be seen as having been a toadie for big business or do you want to be remembered as a commission who was constantly aware of the impact your decisions would have on citizens now and far into the future. This country does not benefit when it is controlled by a few large companies, whether it is the internet or the media. This is the way to narrow what we are allowed to see and hear and it benefits only a few or the wealthy and privileged. Do you want this legacy for your grandchildren?

The public airways are just that PUBLIC! Over my lifetime I have seen less and less public service provided by the corporations that now use them. To sell off more wavelengths to corporations has the potential of further restricting people knowledge of situations and would add further barriers to points of view opposed to those of the corporate community.
