Free flow of information is critical to a democracy. Large corporations already have too much of an advantage with conventional media. Don't give them the same advantage over the internet. For democracy to work all people must have free access to all information.

This appears to me to be a no-brainer. What good can come from having our air waves privately owned? The only thing I can guess is more corporate greed!

Please save the best broadband frequencies for the public good - we need those frequencies to enable first responders to talk to each other on secure lines, we need more channels for public and community broadcasting, we need broadband internet access available to all citizens, and this bandwidth is critical for those issues.

Don't turn over public airways to big business.

There is no reason to add to corporate gain when we can provide access to the public, many of whom are disadvantaged, and encourage our youth, especially, to become better informed about the world we live in.

Time to really put an end to the Michael Powell era of corporate give-aways and continuing consolidation of the telecom and news industries that undermines our only chances at preserving democracy and freedom. The way in which these telecom firms failed to put up a defense of their subscribers’ privacy rights in the face of an overreaching DOJ tells us how seriously they take their obligations as licensees to the people of this country. Logical End result: No privacy, no freedom of choice, no political dissent or free press, collusion and price fixing. Turn this trend around now by increasing the chances for commercial and technical diversity.

Greed. That's what it's all about and the major telecommunication companies want to ride that band wagon as long as they "legally" can. I used to own a cell phone until the cost of that convience got more than I could afford. I use a dail-up modem to get on the Internet because my phone service company, Verizon, continues to try to seduce me to their DSL side with a low "introductory" monthly charge; stated in LARGE print and the "possible" monthly charge on month 13 printed in tiny, tiny, tiny fine print... I guess billions and billions of profit dollars in the telecommunications pockets reaped from the public airways is not enough for them...? Picture a very BIG pig at the feeding trough while you make the decision to give away the public airways to companies who ONLY HAVE THEIR SELF INTER-EST AT HEART - not the public's... And, while you're at it, try not to feel too bad as the lobbyist from these powerful companies shake your hand while stabbing us, the public, in the back...

Please ensure that the public airwaves remain "public" and not controlled by "big-business" America.

Please do not let corporations take over yet another facet of American life. You can do this by allowing everyone to have equal access to information and technology without the high prices. America wasn't always about greed. It used to be about freedom, especially of the press. The internet is our new press. Let us all have it.

The public airwaves, including the land-based internet, are the legal property of the general public and should be use for the public good. Our past and present history with Media proliferation and use, has PROVEN to us that there are serious and obvious dangers to Democracy for the privatizing of these resources.

The potential of a Free Internet is now unlimited. The attraction of the idea that there is a short term profit for cashing in now, is a an obvious danger to us all.

Given a present political climate that has moved to compromise the basic rights to privacy that we all should enjoy - and the further threat to the so-call/economic stratification of society, should offer points of wisdom enough to stay the hands of those who would kidnap and rape our precious internet freedoms.

This property belongs to the public commons and interferrace with it should be considered a criminal act.

The very foundation of our democracy will be in jeopardy with the public airwaves in the hands of a few private corporations. Is this country that short-sighted? This country needs to hear information from all sources (pro and con, public and private, etc) to make informed decisions. That is becoming a more difficult, if not impossible, task. Where is the voice for the people, by the people to be heard? To turn over public airwaves to companies, shows that our government agencies really do not want to work for the people or hear from the people. Our democracy, and in my opinion, what makes this country great will be lost.

The submergence of the public’s right to know beneath the interests of large communication will be catastrophic: they will be buried for good.

Keep it free. Keep it free of corporate control.

Free people in a Democratic society need free access to the public airwaves. Public = people not corporations.

Please don’t let the big corporations do to wireless what they did to fiber-optic technology, suppressing a less expensive and better option to the ones they already controlled and profited from. Keep the public airwaves public.
Please keep public airwaves for public use to benefit many, NOT corporate use to benefit a few.

We are depending on our government to protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market! AT&T & Verizon & Comcast, etc. don’t need government to hand over the public airways to them! Comcast charges so much that I can’t afford to have cable and get the news stations I love so much as with many other seniors who live where I live. They are only out to make more & more money! That would really stink if you turn over public airwaves to them! I can hardly afford my Verizon phone either.

Dear Sir(s)/Madame(s),
To compete in a global economy it is necessary to ensure we do not stifle innovation in new information technology or the ways in which it may be used. To allow the potential for a few large organizations to solely control the access to airwaves and/or internet and deal it out piecemeal as they seem fit to suit their own economic purposes would be to shoot this country in the foot. The speed and methods by which we transfer information must more open to competition than any other technology. It will take nothing less to ensure we maintain competitive equity with the rest of the world in information technology.

FCC what the @#$#@ do you think you’re doing now? You’ve sold off our whole country to the corporations, which are totally unamerican and should have been banned long ago. You are insane with greed and power, and further alienate the patriots and the good folks out here with your Machiavellian tactics. GET A CLUE and STOP selling out our country to money. Monopoly is not simply a board game, it is becoming a way of life in America. Don’t let a select few companies play games with our future.

Dylan Parrotta
Philadelphia, PA 19147

Due increasing limited control of media, the diminishing public access to information that is important to our lives makes it essential to keep the Internet and access to it open and equal to all citizens and out of the hands of corporate monopolies. Limiting access to the internet and public airwaves will compromise the basis of our democracy. We should be a shining example of how information access and communications creates a free society. Corporations are not citizens and do not vote. Their control of information to pursue their own selfish aims has already corrupted the democratic process. Do not allow this trend to continue at the risk of your children's future.

In 1961 the Chairman of the FCC was quoted as saying: The power of instantaneous sight and sound is without precedent in mankind’s history. This is an awesome power. It has limitless capabilities for good and for evil. -Newton Minow’s (1961).

It is now 46 years later and can we honestly say we have used this "Power" for good. Over the past 46 years there’s been a much research on the impact that TV has had on our children and unfortunately most of it is not good. Obesity and Type 2 diabetes have become major health problem. The art of reading and writing is slowing being eroded and the development of social skills is also taking a backseat. As more and more violence is broadcasted children are becoming more desensitized to real-life violence. Has this awesome power that -Minows speaks of been abused?

Do we not have a responsibility to the youth of this country to secure for them a media that is for the good of all its citizens?

As our trusted representatives we are relying on you to secure the future for the next generation by keeping the airwaves "FREE" and insuring that they are kept for the "Public Good".

George Podowski
Frankfort, IL 60423
The attempt by large corporations to control all air waves is yet another move to convert our Republic into a Fascist regime. I respect private enterprise and free markets, but YOU the FCC have created a system of bureaucratically entrenched, corporate monopolists who systematically suffocate American innovators and entrepreneurs. For the sake of reason, (and to avoid your impending obsolescence) I strongly suggest you take immediate steps to satisfy the ENTIRE private sector. The only way to create a truly 'free' market is to correct the damage you've already done.

Dishing out what rightfully belongs to all of Americans to private companies should be dealt with the same way terrorists are dealt with in Guantanamo. The FCC's value is questionable at BEST. The other day while traveling, I realized that Comcast had blocked my ability to access wireless networks. I had to uninstall their software. People are not going to fall for either these big corporate schemes or their little corporate dirty tricks anymore. As people become more and more e-literate, it’s all going to be badly obvious and turn people away from the big corporate telecom carriers. I know what I’d do if I had better choices, or what I would NOT do if I had better service from my existing carriers. It seriously is blazingly obvious.

Interbet access us raoidkty becoming the access of the rich-only. I will not be able to pay the high rates for access when I retire in 2 years. And I have a retirement plan! At current rates of increases, the Internet will become another division of the rich and the poor, of the haves and the have nots. Internet access should be as accessible as TV and radio.

By allowing companies to purchase airwaves, you’re opening the gate for even more outrageous claims of ownership that could extend far beyond our atmosphere. There is no question about where the line should be drawn for overzealous corporate deals.

The internet is possibly the last great level playing field for all forms of communication and information. It is of the utmost importance that we keep this fledgling medium accessible, affordable and above all FAIR for everyone. We are in an age where the average citizen can be easily and thoroughly informed at the click of a button and even start a business with limitless possibilities from his or her own home. In the spirit of free enterprise and an informed populous, and thus in the spirit of democracy itself, we must keep the internet free from any such restrictions, monopolies and other potential hindering of progress for the public good. This is something not to be treated as another product but as a revolutionary means of communication, information and bettering the local, national and global community with all it's potential. Keep these ideas alive. Keep them from being owned by anyone, and let them be owned by everyone!

The Giant Cable & Telecos, have more than enough of our public airways, & do not use them for the public good. Stop giving them more so that they can stifle any and all competition, allow independent media and the internet to use them instead. That way innovation will become stronger and better for the nation as a whole, plus it would begin to break the strangle hold that huge media Corps have, thus ultimately lowering prices while delivering new ideas to flourish.

To Members of Congress’
I strongly feel that the airwaves are far too commercialized already. One of the key reasons that political campaigns are so expensive is the cost of television and radio advertising. In stead of giving big business more control, we should be taking some away, for example, by making most of political ads for candidates from major parties FREE.

I will be watching carefully to see how this vote goes.

Keep the airwaves open for progress and competition!

The airways are a public trust. They are not to be off for private gain. You, as the FCC must protect the public interest to continue the democratic idea of free and open exchange.

Please do not give away any more handouts to the rich. The people have thwe right to the airwaves at least. Sincerely, S. Paheton

You've got to be kidding. The fact that I even have to write you to convince you to set aside a portion of the public's airwaves for the actual public is a sign of how removed from political and social reality this move is. Verizon, ATT and the rest own enough. Give something to the people or pay the price.

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets. To restore America’s leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers. It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Air waves are a public good and should never be sold. They should however be rented for a decent fee as long as the user abides by the rules and uses at least some of the air time to serve the public. The commercialisation of news has had a horrible effect on public information in the U.S.. Please do not allow a further erosion of the use of public airwaves.

It’s totally absurd that this should ever be a debate in the first place. This so-called Capitalism we live under is nothing more than a parasite and the next thing to corporate totalitarianism: I.E. public utilities. This argument about ‘public’ meaning ‘socialism’ is nothing more than a smoke screen and simply feeds CEO million dollar compensation packages. This isn’t about the public, it’s about corporate profit and the ‘control of information.’ History warns about these maneuvers and the consequences therewith associated. . . . You’re courting the ‘dark side.’

I whole heartedly support the use of these opening airwaves for the development of broadband internet access, particularly in rural areas. I live in an area where cable is not available. Verizon has been unresponsive to my inquiries of getting DSL, even though they promote the fact that I live well within access to a remote access terminal. Satellite is too expensive. We need diversity in the delivery of service to level the playing field for those of us living in rural areas. Broadband is not just for the wealthy, the suburbanites and urbanites.

The corporate communication industry profits by mergers and acquisitions and selling custom products to consumers who can afford premium services. The public interest is best served by insuring that all people have a free and equal access to public airwaves. Like oceans of water with free, mandated public coastal access, we must protect the public interest. Like education and communication and freedom of speech and the written word, the internet should remain fairly and equitably accessible to all. The airwaves are a gift of nature and the rightful property of we the people, not something to be auctioned off to corporations so that they can reap huge profits at the expense of the rest of us. Corporations talk free market but constantly lobby for special privileges, subsidies, and what are essentially government giveaways masquerading as auctions. It’s a scandal. The FCC must recognize that it is honor bound to act in the best interests of the entire country and not the personal interests of the powerful few. Today’s digital technology makes signal interference a thing of the past. The airwaves could be an open access commons with no capacity limits. Don’t give away our heritage.

Additional bandwidth should be made available to the public first before making it available to corporations. The public airwaves should be used for the public good. Free competition has been the backbone of free enterprise and free enterprise is one of the pillars of American Society that has made it great and singled it out among other nations. Don’t underwrite Big Corporations – many of which are not even predominately American owned. Uphold free enterprise and competition for the public good. Government organizations like the FDA and the FCC have a tremendous responsibility to look out for the needs of the "little guy" who has no corporate jet, no high paid lobbyist, no three martini lunches. It is time once again for such organizations to step up to the plate and do the right thing for America! I hope I can count on you.

I am sure that radio broadcasters and manufacturers were against the idea of television because it would ruin their profits. I am equally sure that record companies were against the idea of radio because it would ruin their profits. And the publishers of sheet music were against phonograph records because it would ruin their profits. Just as the makers of buggy whips were against automobiles, and so on. If we allow progress to be suppressed and stifled because someone is afraid it is going to cut into his profits, we might just as well go back to the stone age and star communicating by banging rocks together.

Too much of the PUBLIC PROPERTY has been given to private industry. Soon, in the near future, the public will own nothing and be beholden to Corporate America. Corporate America cares only for its own bottom line. Sometimes the bottom line is not in the best interest of the society. Therefore, I would hope that this Public Property "grab" is stopped. Small time designers, tinkerers, hackers, and inventors are where all of our best new ideas have started. By limiting access through economic means, we are limiting our nation's ability to create and invent. It is those small and often marginalized groups that new ideas begin and move to the mainstream. It is our duty to promote economic growth by allowing this kind of access and providing a new venue for the American dream.

I am aware that the FCC's role in protecting the public interest when it comes to bandwidth allocation and public interest content, has been compromised since before its inception. However, the time has come to get serious, as our press is as unfree under a small private oligarchy as it could have been under a king. This trend needs to be interrupted, since it is unconstitutional in spirit, and since a democracy can only pick proper leaders if the populace has ready access to relevant, complete, and responsibly presented information. Any entity looking for permanent bandwidth allocation should be able to make a case that their immediate and specific plans will serve the common good.

If this is the land of Liberty, then so be it! The internet has allowed the small business and individual to launch successful businesses, some huge, who all pay $$$ in taxes. What are we getting for our taxes? You also should be thinking of constructive ways to use your power over the television industry to reform the American national election campaign system by invoking regulations demanding free and real debates consecutively over nine 90 minute different national channels on substantive issues in Presidential campaigns. Dear FCC, these airwaves should, with no exception and unconditionally, be open to public use, and only public use. For the grave potential for misuse, manipulation, dissemination of false information and the total suppression of free ideas and The Truth will be very great indeed. This cannot be allowed to happen, for in many ways the 1rst Amendment could be at stake along with fair competition in the marketplace of ideas and various political ideologies. If I had the option to drop Comcast, I would in the next heart beat. There is no other option available to me that allows the same high speed. The price is outrageous for the quality of service that I receive from them. They always want their money but, when the service goes out (for long periods of time, 3 weeks was longest) Do I get reimbursed for this no, I do not though they claim they will credit my bill I will say something about it, but it never happens. To give these companies this kind of control will put the USA further behind. They don't care about the customers who they serve and are suppose to provide a service for the fee they collect. I have also used AT&T in the past for phone and dial up service and I dropped them for the same kind of problems I have with Comcast. To let any company have total control over this type of service is not in the best interest of Americans.

We need to increase competition, not stifle it, and increase access to broadband communications if we are to compete with the industrial powers. Our national security militates in favor of redundancy in communications, and our economic health absolutely requires making it easy and inexpensive for businesses and individuals to have the widest possible access to both transmission and reception of information. We are behind the global curve on all of this already; locking us into a few big companies is a very bad plan.

Enough is enough. Corporate America has gotten way too far out of hand, why is it that in order to maintain our freedom you have to pay some corporation for that privilege? We have so little freedom left that is not paid for on a month to month or year to year contract all for the sake of corporate profits. We already paid for our freedom with blood and sufferings from our forefathers, wouldn't you say that was the MAXIMUM payment you could make paid in FULL?

The existing broadband Internet providers in the U.S. have demonstrated that they are horribly inept at providing one of the most essential parts of our democracy. The U.S. lags behind 3rd world countries in Internet availability and U.S. citizens usually have only one option for broadband Internet access where they live. The only way to create competition in this market is to open the airwaves to new companies that aren't already party of the monopolies.

Don't let our spectrum be wasted by allowing it to fall into the hands of AT&T, Comcast, Verizon, or Quest! If they're not good at providing wired access they most certainly won't be good at providing wireless access!

If this occurs the idea of this country being a “democracy” has become an even bigger joke then it currently is. Your position on a commission is to listen to what the people want and they would NOT sign over their voice. If you sign over OUR VOICE then it is clear where you as an individual stands. Dear Folks, as a partner with rural telecoms, I can directly attest to AT&T’s tactics in regards to stifling competition. In fact, AT&T along with Quest, Sprint and Comcast are suing dozens of small rural telecoms, under frivolous lawsuits while the FCC stays mum. AT&T is blocking access and not paying the tens of millions of dollars in bills they owe. Suing small companies, not paying bills, while denying access, all add up to destruction of the rural telecoms. We see this pattern all over America, with the blessing of the FCC. Imagine if you did not pay your bills with AT&T? You need to reach out to the 50% of us who live in the rural United States and ask our elected officials why they are not upholding the law.

The airwaves belong to Americans not corporations. You will be held accountable for your actions. It is time to publicize your photos and your family photos for all in the USA to know who has screwed them and pay them back for their unethical actions.

I find that public access to resources is part of what maintains the integrity of our country. In the long run, it benefits us to maintain these public goods, this is part of why we pay taxes. I prefer my tax dollars to go to things such as public airwaves and playground equipment rather than to corporations who will charge us larger sums of money and restrict access. Rights should be sold more frequently, such as monthly. Usage should be monitored and unter-utilized rights can be made unavailable to the company attempting to monopolize the airwaves (and subsequently the regional cable/internet market) upon the complete petition by an entity that agrees to better utilize the airwaves in question. I live in a rural area and the large telecommunications companies thus far have not provided this area with high speed internet service nor have the phone lines been upgraded to allow for the higher end of dial-up. As I write this, my modem speed is 28.8. Rural communities need to be served but these companies seem to only want to serve densely populated areas. Please act to foster development and competition. "The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.”

Kathy Huber
Milwaukie, OR 97222
I believe that the Internet has become such a divider between the haves and have-nots in the world that a baseline access to the internet should be provided to every individual in our nation. I do not believe however that companies do not need access to broadcast bands. I rely heavily on being able to access the internet wherever I am to do my job, and so I believe that the government should be in control of who gets what bandwidth, I do not believe in an auction of a national resource to corporations. The airwaves belong to the people, we live in them, we walk through them. No corporation should own that.

Knowledge is power. Right now the majority of the world’s knowledge and information is transferred digitally. By allowing companies to monopolize and profit, we are furthering the divide between the rich and power. It is getting to the point where the middle class cannot afford a monthly $160 or more telecommunications bill. Please do not allow telecommunication monopolies to price gouge what was once free.

We’re urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.
They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

How far does greed go? Federal Government and Corporate America are stifling us. How much control do they need to get before they are satisfied? We, the blue collar workers, otherwise known as the ‘public’ still have rights. Well, I THINK we still do. And, I raise my voice to you, ”STOP TAKING FROM US, WITHOUT GIVING ANYTHING BACK IN RETURN.” Competition used to be what America was about, not the big conglomerates that are eating us up. The promises of airwaves ”beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, workplace and home in America,” makes me wonder if this isn’t just another attempt of ‘Big Brother.’ At more affordable prices. The consolidation of the major carriers has led to poorer service and less price competition. Cellphone rate structures are kept intentionally complex and carrier policies make it intentionally difficult for even the most conscientious consumer to keep track of usage and avoid extortionate overage charges. Text message pricing schemes are particularly egregious because the actual cost to the carrier is virtually nothing while a one character message sent and a one character message response costs the user $.20. For a simple, try calling for technical assistance when you cannot place a call and you have received a cryptic message with a code number that means nothing.

Please do give more control over the airwaves to these carriers without adequate safeguards of the public good through regulation and the absolute assurance of REAL competition among the carriers.

Whenever there is a decrease in service providers, the same thing happens, decrease in customer service, decrease in consumer satisfaction and lack of competition to encourage the big corporations to do so. Economies of scale simply does not always mean increase in savings and satisfaction to the consumer. What is good for the huge corporations is simply usually not good for the American public. How is it Western European countries have better service, faster internet connections and it costs less????

Please consider what is best for the public. In my opinion, the private telco's have not done what they should to improve communications in the rural areas of the USA. Public agencies, public municipalities and public power are all interested in serving rural america with the broadband connectivity that it takes to be one with amERICA. Don't sell us out to private telco's who will not guarantee any benefit from these airwaves to rural america's citizens.

I was taught in school that one of the FCC's responsibilities to taxpayers was to protect us from monopolies and secure the PUBLIC airwaves for the good of the people. I pay $50 a month just for the use of a cell phone to Verizon. Almost everybody has a cell phone these days. These companies are making more money than they need already. It is obscene to think that technology that would benefit everyone but a few people from these greedy corporations would be allowed to be suppressed. That is not true capitalism where companies compete for your business. That is the shady side of politics where all too often heartless corporations bribe their way through the laws to continue or increase their abuse of the public.

I have lived with the inadequate (and very expensive) service of traditional communications companies for too long. Please DO NOT give them more opportunity to control communications. My home phone costs $55 a month and I can’t call anywhere that is not an additional long distance charge! My internet is $25 a month for direct dial that loads at 25,000 baud! My cell phone costs $60 a month and I can’t get service until I get into the city. I don’t fault them for not having coverage in rural areas but look at the prices they charge for the little service they provide!

There is less and less competition in cable and satellite. I live in Chicago and can choose between three where I live in the city. That is not much and is very expensive.

As a student of journalism and political science I find resources like C-Span very valuable but right now I have to pay close to $100 for bundled services. These need to be available to the public and publicly accessible. The airwaves belong to the American people, not large corporations who will charge us for their use!

Stop this blatant greed and corruption!!!

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

You all have been asleep at the wheel since the Telecommunications Act of 1996. Wake up and do your job!

Do what is best for low cost and greater internet access and speed.

The legalized misappropriation, otherwise known as theft, of the assets belonging to the citizens of this nation must stop!

This is another monopolization of services and it should not be allowed.

I agree with this idea... even though I don’t agree with all moveon.org opinions.
Please do not turn over these public airwaves to private firms like what happened with TV. Let us use them to make high-speed internet available to all Americans so that we may all enjoy access to more information, news, and entertainment.

It is the duty of the FCC to protect the public interest in regulating communications. In this case, private enterprise is directly at odds with the mass of individuals that not only desire, but require net neutrality for their livelihoods. Wireless net neutrality is not merely a public service, but a requirement in a society that wishes to promote freedom of speech and of the press; more fundamentally, freedom of information.

The idea of a governmental body, charged with regulating the communications industry FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD, simply auctioning off what belongs to the public they are meant to serve, is staggering. While I understand that the present administration is desperate for money—because its "leader" is too dim to understand that "spend-and-spend" is actually worse than "tax-and-spend”—that does not obviate the FCC’s Regulatory responsibilities.

The issue of the purchase of broadcast frequencies by corporate or private entities was long ago decided; the corporation or individual may apply for an FCC License to use a designated frequency, but it may not charge the public for its use (thus the creation of advertising on radio and TV). If a unique service is provided to the public as a choice, the corporation or individual legally providing that service may charge a fee to those who elect to receive that service (e.g., "cable TV").

I urge you to follow the precedent established and reinforced by usage from the inception of broadcast technologies (radio, and then television). Do not abrogate your responsibilities as a regulatory board for short-term fiscal gain, or private post-service gain. The massive corporations will find a way to make money on broadcast internet access, even if you do not sell it outright to them (so they can bury it).

Why is it that the "free market" is only "free" when big corporations own it all? Isn’t this—freedom of access—one of the fundamental freedoms upon which all our rights and responsibilities as citizens rest?

The phone companies took us to the cleaners when we started our business because we were not savvy enough to see that there were many companies who could give us good service at a more competitive rate. If ATT&T is trying to control the internet access and cost by cutting and eliminating fair competition and fair public access, of course I would expect the FCC to consider the public interest and long term good and not handicap the American public from reasonable access to the wireless internet.

Friends at the FCC, please do not sell off the future of the air waves to corporations. Look what happened to the right of way when the government gave away land to the railroads in the 1800’s... now we can’t even have decent public rail transportation in Washington State because Burlington Northern is in charge of the tracks. What you sell today can’t be retrieved in the to-morrows when things change. Please respect the public’s need for access to information. At very least, postpone this decision for two years so the public can be informed and speak more its mind on this issue.

<td>Portioning off the public airwaves like a commodity will have a negative effect on the economy. By restricting their use, the free-flow of ideas and commerce will be constrained and restricted to a few private institutions. Consider what IBM has done with their new super computer. They have allowed access to all which encourages the free flow of information and new ideas and has expanded the opportunities for IBM while contributing to the growth and innovation that comes with a free flow of new ideas. This same source of opportunity and innovation could be tapped from public airwaves whereas innovation will be restricted if users have to pay everytime they wish to communicate.</td>

How can the FCC even consider such a travesty of "public" airwaves being auctioned off to major corporations? In case you have not noticed, these are the same companies that will NOT provide access to anyone that will not pay their fees, regardless of ability to pay or how disadvantaged the proposed user. We expect that an agency funded "of the people, by the people, and for the people" will uphold those "people" that gave them their authority.

I believe that the public airwaves need to remain available for public use, for minimal cost or free, and not given away to corporations. If these radio bands were open for general use with applications such as IPTV and WiMAX, this would be a greater stimulus to the American economy while providing greater services for the public.

Allowing the telecommunications companies the opportunity to increase their business but provide absolutely no public service to those who cannot afford their outrageous rates is unconscionable. My name is John Strader and I am the Producer and Host of a weekly radio program called Southwest Stages. Southwest Stages is produced in the heart of the Southwest, Albuquerque, New Mexico, and is now heard on twenty-eight stations in nine states, and internationally in Canada, and the Philippine Islands. It is the only radio program which delivers diverse original music and interviews from performances recorded live at venues and festivals around the Southwest. Southwest Stages is a non-profit corporation who is dedicated to giving our radio program free to public, community and internet radio stations around the US and beyond.

These huge media corporatations already have too big a grip on the available airwaves and if you give them any more they will squash me and many others small programs and radio stations and put us all out of business.

The FCC is supposed to work for the people, not the giant corporations. Please keep the intrest of the American people at the fore-front of your thoughts and help to keep big business from gaining more of a Monopoly on what we see and hear than they already have. Please do what is right!

For sometime, it appears as if the United States of America is becoming more of an aristocracy and less the democracy and republic my ancestors (I am an eighth generation American) fought for. The last eight years have been especially painful for anyone on the side of ‘the people’—you know—as in ‘We, the PEOPLE of the United States of America.’ Stop selling this country to the highest bidder—ultimately, we all lose. Keep the public airwaves open to the public, for the good of the public and republic—and for the Democracy of America. The fact that this issue has even come up sickens me—that we all have to continually plead to maintain rights our ancestors gave their blood for.

Airwaves are in the public interest and should be used for that purpose. Seems the 21st century application for "in the public interes" is a free internet system similar to that of free radio and broadcast TV. This is all possible with vision and leadership. As it is, "high-speed" wireless is getting slower via companies like AT&T as they have begun to provide different levels of "high-speed". What was once high-speed and somewhat affordable is now not too much faster than dial-up, and a previous faster version is getting more expensive. For those like myself who need internet access for work, school, etc. but who don't have the funds to keep up with these ever increasing costs, wireless access in coffee shops and other public venues is of great benefit and should be protected.

This shouldn't even be a problem. You should not have the authority to make this kind of decision, it should be decided by a popular vote. How do you think the American people would decide? Then you know what you should do, and you know if you've decided otherwise that you've decided against the interests of the American people.

Hi,
Just as people don't pay a fee to watch network and public television, they shouldn't have to pay additional fees, or high costs, to access the Internet. Make the "Internet highway" an open road for the public good, and don't give it away to corporate interests, greed, and profit-making.

The corporate media is medusa’s grandchildren, a plague like no other imaginable; it is a corrupt unmitigated disaster, and why we should be plagued with a propaganda infested mediocratic system of information is beyond me. True, this can also be said of the internet, but at least with the internet, there is a near-infinite range of choice, availability, and, barring this particular resolution, the freedom to find it.

I resent having to pay cable charges to access what should be public information eg. C-Span congressional debates. We watch public tv 90 percent of the time, since commercial tv is a wasteland. We listen to public radio 90 percent of the time for the same reason. I have taken courses in communications, and the ramifications of ending public airwaves is horific. We are retired, but finally had to get cable to have decent reception to view public programs. The cost is too high.

I'm not sure that corporate control of the airwaves is a good thing because, look what these co. have done with cable. I remember when cable was "commercial free" now we're paying for cable that's not much different than reg. t.v. If this happens it's going to be the people that can't afford to pay the high prices that are going to loose out. I can't afford cable or internet as it is. Why sell to a co. that only thinks about the bottom line and making money?

Dear ladies and gentlemen of the congress,
Please allow me to live in what's left of our ever waning democracy. Do not sell out the american people, your constituents, your own children and grandchildren to a minority of corporations whose loyalties lie only with their shareholders, not with the majority of american citizens. There are several institutions in this country that should not be privatized, that need to be protected via the federal government, the internet being one of them. Please let your constituents know that you still represent them and not the shareholders of Verizon or AT&T!

Please protect our PUBLIC airwaves. Some services SHOULD be public, and this is one of them!

How dare you to try and take one of the only, we already pay taxes on the air space we take, taxes for my cell phone, taxes on my cable, taxes on my phone. I will go without until an alternative arrangement can be met. I vote infatricly NO on this issue.

Please keep the airwaves and internet for public use and not the private domain of corporations!

What don't you understand about "PUBLIC"? They are ours and we want to keep them.

The airwaves should belong to the people not the major corporations. They should serve the public good not the profits of these companies.

At this moment I am in jeopardy of having to give up my cyber connection b/c of the high prices to maintain it. I not only want, but need public airwaves for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.”

Dear FCC members,
Open airwaves is the oxygen of our nation. If we cannot speak openly and freely, without intimidation, different opinions will not be heard, and we will have reverted back to the days of British rule. Keep America free by keeping the airwaves free and open.

Thank you,

Hey, MR. FCC.
You must be feeling pretty insignificant to allow yourself and our FCC to be used to facilitate a "NON Patriotic President" to sensor the Right to free speech for all of us and the the need to hear truth from the mouths of our "Elected Officials". If you do not respect and support the truth, we the people do not need your services. GW's lies of 2000 are still just as repulsive in 2007 and he should be made to be accountable for his actions to th American People. Please wake up and "LOOK AT AMERICA" not all of us can afford internet service. it should be available to everyone.

Evelyn Cover
Sherman Oaks, CA 91411

We are taxed by our local, state and federal governments. We pay $50 - $100 per month for telephone service, $50 per month wireless telephone, $40-50 per month for internet or cable DSL. There is no competition among local telephone service providers, and now this proposal will likewise choke off competition to the barons of the internet age. Give the public taxpayer something back for all we pay out already. Don’t give away for short-term gain what will inhibit communications henceforward. We can’t afford to live in this age when access to all communication portals has become an essential way of life for families and communities. Please keep access available and affordable.

It is the right of the people to control the airwaves. Turning over the airwaves to companies - especially these large corporations, will allow them to limit access and competition, or commercialize an otherwise free and public owned asset, the same way they have done with network television.

It is unacceptable for the airwaves to be monopolized by Big Business. The federal government needs to be aware that the public finds the possibility that a few corporations might be given control over something we consider important to our quality of life and important to true competition in the marketplace a crime.

I am going to be an idealist and sign this as if it matters. Unfortunately there isn't much of a difference between corporations and government these days. Pennsylvania Ave, K Street, it all smells the same to me. Smells like fat men getting fatter while the poor work their fingers to the bone as the faucet drips...and drips...and drips. Securing that grey area between anti-trust and fair competition is the status quo of big business these days. They will ride that fringe all the way to the bank in order to keep their product as overinflated as possible. It's the american way. Ask the middle class how it feels to be the biggest suckers on the planet. Toiling with educations to boot, only to be kept in debt by an economy that is made of paper and plastic. Slavery never went anywhere it was just coopted and diversified. Thank you big business, thank you for allowing me to live my life in a hamster wheel. Running like hell, breaking a sweat, only to go nowhere but my grave after I am worn out.

<td>I served in the U.S. Army, Signal Corps, for 20 years. At the peak of my military career, I briefed the Commanding General, U.S. Army Signal Command, daily, on the state of our communications capabilities world-wide, both military assets and civilian. I worked on several projects to analyze and recommend policy on the Army’s position on many commercial assets and changes to FCC frequency spectrum usage rules and designations. This would be a bad decision for Americans. Putting a large segment of the available spectrum into the hands of corporate entities would pose a threat, not only to the ability to provide more cost effective services, but also to emergency communications capabilities and other contingent requirements in the future. I strongly oppose the auction of these assets to commercial entities.</td>

I cannot believe that any federal agency would consider for one second selling off our nation’s airwaves! What will you auction off next? Public roads and bridges? Public schools? Public police and fire departments? And for what end? To destroy competition in the market place? To make rich monopolies even richer? To keep Americans in the wireless "Dark Ages”? Please do not precipitously change the public airwaves by transferring ownership to corporations who don't understand that the airwaves should be used for the commonweal. Dolores Delahanty

Dolores Delahanty
Louisville, KY 40214
There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution bringing high-speed wireless networks to the public from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They've spent billions laying wires, and they profit handsomely from having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can't enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks. FCC must act to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable companies should not be allowed to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn't be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can't tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

Please do not allow AT&T or any other corporate association get a foot in the door of the cable television service. As we see now once a corporation takes over or is allowed to be a part of a specific type of service they always leave out the middle and lower class of citizen. They do that either by raising the price of the service so that any normal citizen can no longer afford to subscribe, or they would only offer the services to citizens that are upper class or richer than the normal joe.

Back in history, when AM, FM and TV broadcasting came around, Congress simply gave away airwave rights to massive companies who control the flow of information and entertainment and charge well for it, the people who wind up paying eventually is the people, whether through direct rates for purchasing cable TV or indirectly for paying more for products who need to buy airtime for advertising. NO MORE CORPORATE GIVEAWAYS! the longer you refuse to represent the average American and the more you cater to corporate America, the closer we edge towards a complete revolution in who governs Congress.

The Public Airwaves exist to serve the public good, not as a medium for corporations to profit from the public. The radio and TV media is virtually the only way many people today get their news and the knowledge for casting their votes. The largest threat to our government today is that media consolidation will further pervert and control what the voting public knows. I am just short of my 80th birthday and each day I find more and more of my life dictated by companies and others whose decisions remove more of my freedom. It is frightening to contemplate the nature of the future as it is affected by the controls that are being instituted. You work for the public, the airways are not your possession to manipulate in favor of corporations. Please remember your responsibility to the citizens of this country.

As an attorney that works with people with disabilities, I know that affordable access to the Internet is necessary for my clients to live productive, independent lives. Granting large telecommunication companies almost unlimited access to public airways will make it impossible for non-profit companies and innovative state and local programs to create low-cost services for people with disabilities and those in low income brackets.

The FCC should insure that whoever wins the public airways auction give extensive airway access to organizations and government entities that provide low-cost internet services to individuals in need and the organizations that serve these individuals.

Keep the public airwaves for the public good!!!

Keep things open and free.

Keep the airwaves public. The internet has the potential to equalize the playing field for all people—particularly those in poverty and it would be boon to our economy to have all people connected. It is good for the US is good for the economy and you should keep them PUBLIC.

It is tragic that other countries not typically thought of as leading edge in use of technology have far greater access than many common Americans. Decades ago, when the transistor was invented, the United States bowed to pressure to protect vacuum tube manufacturers from the new technology. Japan wasted no time stepping into the breach created by this foolishness, and quickly ran away with transistor sales in every imaginable form. U.S. technology never really completely recovered from that protection. Rivers of U.S. dollars go to foreign countries to buy televisions, cameras, DVD players and the like. With decisions about auctioning public airwaves, the U.S. stands at the threshold of another opportunity in technology. These public domains are much more valuable to the U.S. as public property than they ever could be to private companies. Europe and other countries in the world have already surpassed the U.S. in internet technology on many fronts. Making these airwaves private will provide the same exclusivity that caused the fall of the U.S. in transistor technology. There will be no entrepreneurial opportunity for independent, nimble technology companies to build tomorrows America, and lag in U.S. innovation will punish our economy for decades. Please do not allow the sale of these public airwaves. Have faith in the our countrys spirit and grit to make us the unchallenged leader of the world in communications technology.

I am concerned about the increasing concentration of all forms of communication technologies in the hands of a very few corporations who have a long history of monopolistic and anti-competitive practices. I am also concerned that the FCC is abdicating its role of setting technological standards and allocating frequencies for the benefit of the public, and acting effectively as an agent of large corporations who are not acting in the public interest.

Please keep the airwaves open for the public good. DO NOT turn them over to corporate interests. Thank you. Nancy Carlson

Please mandate that whoever wins the auction cannot stifle competition and innovation.

I'm very cynical and assume that you will do what is best for large corporations. Please prove me wrong for a change. DO WHAT IS BEST FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE!!!

As an educator of artists - cultural entrepreneurs who will become the engines of culture and commerce in the near future, I am deeply concerned about access to public airwaves. Once this access is committed to the private control of specific corporations, there is no guarantee that

The tighter the corporate empire tries to squeeze us, the more power they will eventually lose.

Protect free access to the internet.

Big business already has so much of the country in a strangle hold; now is the time to take the common good under consideration. Why should some greedy company have a say in what’s available to people? Selling these public airwaves to big corporations like those who want to control them sounds too much like allowing trusts to dominate business during the Roosevelt/Taft years. Roosevelt and Taft were progressives who worked against this practice; why do we have to endure the same tawdry affair again? The majority of people (who aren’t wealthy) deserve better, and this is a golden opportunity to do those people a good turn.

Let's make the public airwaves available to the public again! The FCC has an obligation to the citizens of this country to do what is best for the country and for our democracy. The internet has become an invaluable tool for promoting democracy and free speech world-wide. The cable and telephone companies would obviously love to limit/eliminate any competition to their internet offerings, but this is of far greater importance than protecting the profits of giant telco and cable corporations. These are the public’s airwaves, and they should be reserved for public use. The rest of the world is already leading the way on this issue, by making wireless communication and internet access widespread. The United States can’t afford to fall any further behind just to keep these corporate giants appeased. America should stand for innovation and robust competition. We need to acknowledge that the airwaves are public property and that large companies have no automatic right to them. The FCC should be protecting this property and doing what is in the best interest of all the people of this country and not just a few companies. I am fed up and totally disgusted with our federal government protecting the interests of big corporations while the common citizen gets rewarded by these same corporations sending American jobs overseas, ignoring their obligation to invest in and safeguard our pension programs, polutes our environment, and ties up our justice system defending their inexcusable behaviors. The FCC must stand up for the public on this issue and protect the public airways from yet another corporate assault on our rights. Please exercise some integrity and do the right thing by standing up to corporate pressure and their short sighted policy to eliminate competition and ultimately public access to OUR free airways.

I do not subscribe to Verizon or anyone telling me what my obligations to contract and limitation of choices to them are. I don't subscribe to anyone putting a clamp on the market place that excludes the possible innovation of others solely to protect their investments or customer bases. Its understandable but not healthy to limit our choices nor allow monolithic entities monopolize the market or Americans choices.

Companies have a primary responsibility to their shareholders, not the public. The FCC's role is to protect the public's interest in matters like this precisely because when companies need to choose between the public good and their shareholders short-term returns, it is very difficult for them to choose the public good.

Corporations only interest is profits for shareholders which usually in direct conflict with the public good. As a citizen, I am so tired of seeing what belongs to all of us as a whole being auctioned off to the highest corporate bidder. Using these airwaves to directly benefit us instead of to sell us more services would be part of enabling future generations of Americans. Please be brave and take a stand!

I am a musician, and if I decide to produce my own videos, how can I put them out if I can't use free public waves when they are given to the fat-cats that only charge more and more and then they are the one's that decide who is to be listened to not the people that watch or listen to the music on the videos? More and more independent waves are being taken away from the public and used for profit. Just like freedoms of the American citizens. Take, take and take from us, and not give us anyway to express ourselves.

Why would you even consider doing something that makes powerful communication tools more available to those companies for profit and control, and less available to the public? Maybe you don’t realize how important this is, but for all of our sakes, please maintain your personal integrity by doing what you know is right, not what the powerful lobbies get you to swallow. Government should be by and for the people not the corporations.

Please keep the airways in the public domain. This is vital to our survival as a democracy.

Please respect the free market and not just give our airwave to the big boys so they can sit on them.

Airways should always be for the public Noncorporate communications are necessary if our country is to survive!!! The public, not just those who can afford access, need to have the ability to be informed-not be used as marketing tools for corporate gain.
Every household in America should have access to the same services. Rural neighborhoods should not be penalized for lack of population. Big business will not make services available to underserved areas. The American people should own the public airwaves.

The FCC has been asleep at the wheel and the american people are suffering for it.
We need free press, Free Airways, to remain a free country. The little guy needs to be able to speak.
WHAT ARE YOU DOING!
Do you remember the problems we had with newspapers becoming too powerful? Do your people study history at all or are they been bought out by big business at our expense?
Leave the internet alone. The FCC has done enough damage latley. I have gone from 25-27 free air TV stations in 2002 to 6. NBC, CBS, FOX and 3 PBS. THANKS FOR NOTHING! I can’t even see LOST unless I get satellite.

American corporate sharks have already consumed the country and with the help of G W Bush & Co. are trying to consume the rest of the world. This is where things will get ugly for any and all of us Americans. So, its about time to start thinking for our future and not for Americas corporate jungle greed.

No, no, no, this must not happen !!!!!!!!

Here you go... giving the old monopoly a new monopoly in order to prevent competition and freedom of speech via the internet.

Keep the airwaves free! The government should be ensuring freedom for all, instead of profiting from dishonest corporations!
Given that the worldwide bee population and the world’s food supply could be affected by airwaves’ usage, this is hardly the time to be giving up control to non-governmental entities.

Please let the airwaves be used for the Public good...let their be competition...and let their be the chance for any low costs coming to everyone...for the Public good.

I don’t want a few huge corporations to control public airwaves. We need and want cheap alternative high speed internet access everywhere.

Our public airwaves do not belong in the hands of for-profit companies who will use them for private gain instead of the public good.

The airwaves belong to the American people not AT&T or Verizon.

I have a duty to protect the PUBLIC’s interest in this matter and not give over what is public domain to a minority of corporate interests and thus eliminate this domain from public ownership. Protect the public interests not corporate interests.

Protect spirit of capitalism and our first amendment rights keep these airwaves available to the public.

I'm personally tired of the endless handing-over of public property (national forests, national waterways, national Research & Development discoveries, National airwaves) into private hands. If it is public property, let the public benefit, by at least low rates and good service. Just one of the too-many things deeply wrong with the way business and government are interacting nowadays.

Wireless access is the best opportunity to revive the fortunes of rural and suburban populations in the US. You don’t have to know how creating more access will create more opportunity for the entire US Business community. But please understand that cheaper and wider wireless access will spread opportunity and prosperity wider than anything else under consideration by the Congress. Open access gives the ingenuity and work ethic of the American people the chance to thrive. We need your help but it’s not handouts or social programs we need, it’s just one thing - a chance to succeed.

Limiting the public’s access to these airwaves by giving them to companies who will ration access according to our ability to pay instead of our ability attract customers will only restrict our chances of leading the world in the future the way we have in the past.

Vote for opportunity. Vote for the future. Vote for Open Access to wireless for all Americans!

I am a professional in the data networking industry, helping to design networks and information architectures. It is unthinkable that we would permit corporations to own a resource that has the potential to make access to information truly universal, helping to level the racial and economic playing fields. Nothing I have seen in the networking industry suggests to me that corporations will even consider the public good in making decisions about their use of the available bandwidth.

I know of no other time in history when democracy itself has been so threatened. When the people lose the power to communicate openly and freely outside of the personal selfish bottom line of huge corporations that care nothing for the planet, we are in BIG trouble. Protect the airways for the masses. To do otherwise may set into effect trends that will destroy our society in the long run.

We do not need to turn over our public airwaves to the large corporations so that they can make more money (and deposit in accounts that do not benefit the public but only themselves. Further, we need more broadcasting venues, not less. The control of these giant organizations on our sources of news is approaching close to a monopoly. If this continues, then the news (and the opinions it shapes) will be controlled by these organizations whose only priority is the bottom line. Let’s keep the public airways public!

I'm scandalized with the corporate monopolization of our media in general. If this measure goes through then it will be very difficult for the American public to ever get an objective idea of whether they are being reported the truth or not. My friends and I already do not go to mainstream news having found it criminally (using the word in its real sense) biased. If you allow this we will know that the FCC also is in the pocket of the corporations & America as we knew it has ceased to exist as a democracy.

The FCC should do everything it can to prevent corporations from merging and taking over the internet and the airwaves. Concentration of ownership undermines diversity of information and journalistic enterprise. These attempts are designed to prevent the public from getting the truth about corrupt political leaders and big corporation’s actions. The FCC is rapidly eroding the people’s rights and abilities to communicate with each other, and making sure we hear nothing but the slanted news and propaganda of the Rupert Murdochs of the world. It's long past time for the FCC to abandon the theory supporting increased concentration in media markets. It no longer fits the reality of the definitions of civic discourse in America. Stop this blatant violation of the people’s rights.

The cost of candidates' getting on the air is prohibitively expensive, and that fact is instrumental in explaining how lobbyists, and corporate/special interests often effectively "own" their candidates. Get the money out of politics—the easiest way to do that is allot a certain amount of time to every candidate to get some exposure instead of making them whore themselves out just to get on the air for 30 seconds. It's such a racket...

Next they will be looking for a way to hike the price of air!

- Keep public airwave free to communicate. So many freedoms have been taken away from us. Please protect our right to free speech.

- Living in Vermont, I am highly aware of the poor to no access many communities/people have to Internet access either at affordable prices or at all. To tie up public airways by allowing the huge communications corporations to buy them up to prevent competition is taking capitalism to another level of greed and control. Shame on you if you allow this to happen.

- The airwaves should be free for all of us to use and benefit from. They are not the province of Big Business and should never be.

- Please no more huge companies getting free reign. It's not like they have done such a good job with what they have already.
Please stop selling America to the highest bidder... (or lowest, for that matter).

Dear Sir/Madam:
American communication systems (public airways, FM, AM, microwave installations and high frequency cables with and without satellite interconnections) belong solidly in the control of the American citizens being impacted and not in the hands of huge, international, profit-oriented corporate entities whose singular interest is making a large profit and acquiring a great deal of "information" power over our citizens. If the FCC is still interested in the well being of a freedom-loving citizen, please curtail ASAP the any further enfringement of these technologies by the bottom-line, corporate groups. Finally, I appreciate your taking my brief expression of American citizenship to heart through this email.

I believe that wireless internet access should be available to the mass population and should not be controlled by one or two companies. They would be allowed to dictate prices, since they would be controlling the mass airwaves. This in turn would allow big companies to not have to be competitive in pricing, thus increasing the prices, and making services unavailable to lower income families.

Devin Mehta

Please don’t allow the big companies to obtain these public airwaves, only to sit on them. I’m all for the public good!

The Public Airwaves were created by the people for the people. Corporate interests are almost always against the public interest and are only to increase profits of a very few individuals, with no concern for any collateral costs. I think it is extremely important to put very clear limits on how far corporations can go to limit their competition and place unfair burdens on consumers.

<td>Americans have sacrificed enough for Corporate interests. We've lost pensions, affordable healthcare, and safe food and drugs. We have sacrificed wetlands and air and water quality so they can push their products through and bolster their bottom line. AT&amp;T was and is a terrible company that has taken advantage of consumers in the past. What makes you think this will be different? If I had my way, this whole corrupt system of &quot;network&quot; news and communication systems would done away with until they could prove they are in it for the American people. Shame on the FCC for even entertaining this idea. I am overwhelmed with disgust and will continue to speak out on this issue and I will urge my friends and colleagues to do the same. SHAME!!!</td>

Capitalism only works if there is competition. These companies comprise a government in their own right that will command the market while putting "the public good" at the bottom of their priority list. At the top of the list will be a degree of control over the market that is at odds with the "free market" that is supposed to guide capitalism.

I hope the FCC doesn't have any trouble understanding the word or the concept, "public." The airwaves belong to us, to you and to me, please, please don't sell them off to private corporations. For one thing, that would effectively stifle dissent...and you don't really want a dictatorship in America, do you? I know we have one starting, but if it gets strong you can kiss your own selves goodbye...that’s the way of dictatorships.

Public broadcasting in the United States is not bad as far as it goes, but it doesn't go nearly far enough. PBS is not really independent, just look at its nightly news program. We have enough diversions, what we need is some imagination here! With their system of underwriters, PBS is fundamentally the same as commercial television: they all have their sponsors to please. The U.S. has its fill of giant corporations who really only serve their bottom line. What we need is more small, independent stations who actually serve the people of a city or region. This seems to me to be obvious. The question is then, who is the FCC serving, corporate America or the American people? I'm afraid this is a case of either-or.

The freedom of the internet has been a blessing for teachers like me. I have a website full of links for my students to access for remedial work, getting missing assignments, other notes and examples and to do research. To put this under the FOR PROFIT companies will stifle my students' ability to learn. Currently cable companies force us to choose from packaged options - meaning that I pay for way more channels than I use. Limiting this research will stifle creativity and free speech. It is yet another attempt by the Bush Administration to limit our freedoms and you CANNOT allow this to happen. I realize big business runs this country but somewhere, someone has to do what’s right. Freedoms are always at risk of being taken away and in the case of cable TV it's all one voice with no contraversy in the news, history, or program- ming shows. How can this be in a society that says it is for freedoms? Now they want to take over the only free exchange of ideas left=the In- ternet. For shame you big corporation bullies-no wonder you trust and leadership is in question. What are exchanging free ideas so scary for you, intellectuals have never been listened to so why do you think any logic will be listened to at all?

I am a long-time radio amateur, ex N6EH. I know what spectrum space is and I know its worth. Spectrum is a part of the Commons, which is to say it belongs to the people. Your proposal to auction this piece of the Commons for money, handed to a dishonorable government from various Corporations is improper and violates the charter of the FCC. You should follow the intent of law, and rent this space one year at a time, and only as long as its use inures to the public good.

There is no real choice for the FCC. As stewards of our airwaves, you must choose the most democratic means of access and actively encourage innovation, digital equality and competition. Make your grandkids proud, do the right thing: make easy wireless access affordable for all Americans.

Keep the public airwaves for the public!

Please thwart yet another assault on what used to be a country that celebrated freedom and diversity. Do not let corporations take over yet more of our airwaves and our access to real information (not the swell that they peddle to keep Americans pacified).

Do not allow these companies to monopolize and capitalize on our airwaves. This is an opportunity to provide for our country and stand up to the businesses that do not have our best interests, rather their own pocketbooks, at heart.

I would like to see more progressive stations on the air and less control by the conservative corporations that bar such programing.

It is important that Corporations -which have limitless "lives" unlike humans- should not be given the right to these airwaves over humans. Why? Because humans are capable of something that corporations are not, and that is changing for the greater good.

A corporation has one goal, to make profit. If they are not making profit, they wither and die. Why ensure payment to these wretched companies rather than giving the citizens of the United States the power they can, should, and ought to wield?

Please, do not give into this greedy endeavors. Let We, the People, decide how these will be best used for US.

It would be an abherration to have public airwaves turned over to these monopolies. We're already harassed and our privacy invaded by telemarketers from the lists they purchase from these same corporations. The airwaves are public airwaves, let's keep them that way. In a democracy, the will of the people is what dictates policy, now let's see the will of the people be done for once, instead of ignored for private interest benefits.

Thank you for your time, consideration, and representation of the public's well being and good.

Please don't turn over another area of our lives to big corporations. Fuel cost is making it impossible for us and many people in the USA and worldwide to visit places we thought we would get to go; don’t totally lock us in our homes by making the airwaves also unaffordable so that we can’t even visit our country and the world over the airwaves. My family dreamed of places we planned on visiting but those dreams are being crushed as we now have to plan how to afford to get to work, afford housing, high medical cost, and ”our daily bread.” With these things increasingly getting out of reach of the pocket books of many Americans and our credit card debt growing to feed our families the failure of our current political (leadership?) has placed many families in the position of the criminal who is confined to their home; however, our only crime is not being born owning the the liquid black gold that some of our political leaders and their corporate buddies were nursed on and continue to drink of freely while most of us have dried up mothers. Please don’t let these PETRO breast suckers, who are willing to share with us less fortunate of their countrymen, at prices that should have them locked away as thieves, also get the right to steal the airwaves and sell them to us also.

Please keep the airwaves PUBLIC AIRWAVES as we can’t afford any more from their momma’s breast. What’s their momma going to try to feed us next?

This is one Proud American and one who is Proud To Be An American, but one who is tired of leadership that thinks we should have no choice but to drink form their momma’s breast whatever they’re wanting us to be nurished with. God, hard work, and our amazing country has fed my ancesters in the past and that’s the way I want my children and grandchildren to continue eating. Thanks for letting me use the airwaves to share my view and may they stay where we can afford to do this.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They've spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can't enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.

They also shouldn't be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can't tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

The federal government is considering turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast who will use them for private gain instead of the public good. The FCC is accepting public comment on this important issue for just a few more days. I'm writing to ask your support and efforts in preventing this mistake.

As I understand it, when cable TV was originally set up, cable companies were given local monopolies for cable service. Some communities resisted this paradigm and are seeing a benefit today. For example, As a resident of Shoreview, MN, I'm currently paying about $50 per month for my standard cable TV package to Comcast. Comcast is my only choice for cable TV. The city of Chaska, MN, instead of handing the uncompetitive market to a specific cable provider, opted to wire their own cable lines. As a result, cable TV subscribers in their city now pay less than half of my rate for cable TV service. I am an advocate of free markets. At least when those markets are both free and fair. The current model of local monopolies for telecommunication companies is far from free and fair. The proposal to turn over more monopolistic territories for wireless is anti-consumer. Please make sure all companies have access to every customer in every market, and that public airwaves are open to all citizens, not just a few companies.

A similar situation exists for cell phone companies. In much of Europe, cell phones work from all towers, regardless of the carrier. In Minnesota, my AT&T cell phone doesn’t work north of Two Harbors along the North Shore and in the Boundary Waters. If I had Verizon, I could use my cell phone in much of the same region with no problem. I spend much time in the wilds of Minnesota and would appreciate the ability to make an emergency phone call if necessary, regardless of the predominate cell phone company. Please use your efforts to work for the public good, by preventing this particular corporate welfare. Consider changing the existing laws governing cable / cell phone competition and access.

The airwaves are public. They must remain public and the tide of giving up the public's rights to corporations for private gain must stop. It is very curious that government agencies believe they have the right to sell natural occurring phenomena like airwaves. The degree of corporate greed accelerates with each decade. Americans pay taxes to have their well being protected, their interests represented. It is time that citizens are not exploited for the benefit of special interests and corporate dividends.

It seems in the time Bush has left that he wants to make sure his cronies have control on anything they can scalp the unaware public with. Will we ever get over being raped by the Corp. world and being either the laughing stock or the most hated country. They probably think we are all like Bush. What a shame.

VOIP FROM THE PARK! dont loose innovation to big buisness! you can see second world countries getting their first tv and they are all flat screens... meanwhile we are still allowing the mechanics of the market place keep us buying old untill the companies have maximised their priofits and are willing to release the new stuff at reasonable prices at home. this pattern will leave us behind in the global market. we are all paying too much for old technology. why? because big business is lining the pockets of short sighted polititans. THORSTIEN VEBLIN knew this 100 years ago... why dont the policy makers think for the future? dont you have children and want them to have a competitive place in the world of tomorrow?

My son produces videos and teaches others videography techniques. My husband designs the router chips for cell phones at his high tech firm. I also am involved with a number of nonprofit ventures and we use the internet to carry out the majority of our work. To not have free and easy access to the internet and all of its features would undermine the ability of these organizations to serve our local communities. Public airways should serve the public good, especially since our communities and citizens rely upon many of the services now mainly accessible only through the internet.

The airwaves must not be monopolized! Imagine how much knowledge and information will be unavailable to the people if major companies control the price and integrity of the wireless age. In Portland, Oregon, free wireless networks are flooding the city and the results are amazing. Great things could be done if the people of our country had the "information superhighway" on their side, instead of on the side of greed.

Kellen Asebroek
Portland, OR 97219

There are currently only a handful of companies that control the media within the United States minimizing competition and content of the airwaves. To continue this trend is irresponsible and makes controlling the media much easier for any ruling power within our democracy. Please help maintain fair competition and democracy by requiring more competition not less in the wireless age.

Not only is it your responsibility to protect us from monopolistic practices, you also stand for those of us who lack the money to pay for the increasingly elite (expensive) access to cable & internet services. I can afford only basic cable tv (which used to be free!), miss many movies & programs I used to enjoy; while my dial-up internet is the least expensive possible, as well as the least efficient, at the same time that it’s my only means of communication w/my daughter! For the poor, including children, elderly &/or disabled, staying connected to the world’s become very difficult, even impossible!

Why would the FCC take action to help assure profits for companies like AT&T. An FCC ruling already costs me 5 times the previous rate for in-state long distance. I am retired - fixed income and now my calls to my children and their families take far more of my income. Why are AT&T profits more important than my staying in touch with my family?

Dear Commission Members,
please consider how vital to the safety of our country it is to keep the airwaves open to use for general welfare. It is not simply a matter of promoting democratic exchange by letting the public use them for civic purposes–instead of allowing megacorporations to monopolize them for profit and for undemocratic purposes; it is also a matter of national security: in the immediate aftermath of 9/11 the vital work of police and firefighters was hampered by limited access to airwaves because of privatization. This would repeat itself, with perhaps even worse consequences, if for-profit corporations were to have sole, unencumbered access to the new, fastest airwaves. Put patriotism first!

I want the airwaves to be open for all to share ideas and viewpoints, not just a few companies to control the interests of the many.

Big Business has ruined enough lives & made enough money off the public. Leave our public airwaves alone.

We need more competition in this area. Prices are too high and getting higher. They are becoming unaffordable to the average person.

In the 1980s AT&T actually welcomed the breakup of the Baby Bells and AT&T because they had a whole bunch of technology sitting on the shelf that they wanted to bring out. Now we are faced with the same problem. Are you, the Federal Government, going to act in the public’s best interest, or big business’s best interests. I for one am tired of the same old payoffs in the back rooms of government that do nothing to help the people who pay your salaries with their hard earned tax dollars. So, you have a choice to make. Do you want to stiff us all once again, or do you want to do what’s right?

Keep public airways public. Too many companies are getting to greedy with things that can and will better our society. They would rather make a fast buck at the expence of the general public than do what is rite and for a greater good. This country is heading toward another civil war if we do not start helping the average citizen.

airwaves should not be owned by private corp. there should be more competition so that hopefully rates will decline for the consumer. We the consumer end up paying unnecessarily for commodities controlled by even pseudo-monopolies. One of Congress's topmost concerns should be how to keep the consumer[taxpayer] from paying exorbitant prices for things...the middle class is going out of business!!!!!!!!!!!!

When the choice comes to all of us, doing the right thing is the only way to make a democracy really. Is your agency working for the people? Please do your job. Do not give our power over to the companies that use the populace to line their own purses. It does not work. It will never work.
I do not use the internet as much as many people do, I do realize what an impact it has made for many others. I live simply and do honor choices to live by the standards that make me an efficacious citizen. So many people live complicated lives. Please help them to simplify and not to have to fight for the rights that are meant to be theirs. Corporations are getting in the way of the people. I do not wish to support them. Please support our wishes and not those of a fascist government. Be a part of the solution.

It is the responsibility of government to protect that which is commonly held by everyone, the public domain. Profit driven, multinational corporate organizations are not part of that public domain, and they are not citizens of the USA. Unregulated and free ownership (control) of the public domain by artificial entities in the past has lead to misdirected and userous exploitation of the commons, the public domain. Given the current deficit and debt problems that the US government has created for itself, it makes no sense to simply hand over the public's airways carte blanche to international communications giants and deprive the public of open access to these channels of communication. These private monopolies have had to have major litigation to control the userous practices before. I know, I worked for the largest corporation in the world in 1969. Dr Patrick H Herndon

The price of general entertainment is through the roof, price wise. It needs to stop. Competition will be welcome. I think the companies will make more money anyways once it becomes more affordable rather that holding it just above the reach of some working poor whom would appreciate some cheaper entertainment.

Currently the large companies are stifling progress by sitting on resources. Verizon is suing companies for infringing on patents that never should have been awarded, broadband isn’t reaching as many people as it should and the updates to the broadband networks are slow due to lack of competition. What we need is more companies, more innovation, and more ways for competition to thrive and let the market drive us forward.

We, the people have to communicate with each other. Public airwaves could reach most of us. If the day before and during the day of every election all the voters would be called and reminded to vote. We than might have 100% voters turn out and than we would have a real democratic Institution.

The government's regulation of public frequencies allows for the development of future wireless technologies by anyone, forcing the price of such technologies to reasonable consumer levels. However, handing these frequencies over to large corporations ensures certain monopolies over future wireless technologies, creating a supply far below consumer demand, forcing prices (of the very same technologies) to skyrocket. Please keep these frequency allocations public for the future good of the consumer and economy.

The airways should be available for serving the public. The proposal would severely limit this and would instead be given out for corporate profit. I am against selling the airways as proposed.

Among the public good areas that would be substantially impaired is on-line education to students in rural communities—where hi-speed can be essential for quality education in keeping with this country’s economic development plans. Water, air, space (radio frequencies), medical care, justice and teaching should not be for profit. All you need to do is look at the shocking state of health care, education, legal services, to see what I mean. Keep corporations out of our resources. This planet belongs to all people not just the rich. If you continue ignoring the masses you know what will happen. Your market will collapse and we'll have a serious depression. Do not stifle competition. Do not give more privileges to the already privileged. And do not do it in my name either. I object! David A Sanan Ph.d.

Dear Federal Communications Commission,

The very notion of selling-off our public airwaves is to violate that which your office is entrusted to protect and to forfeit your role of guardianship. Conversely, of late, you have made some egregious errors and absurdly ambivalent statements that only serve to further confuse the issue as to what may or may not be broadcast (content). In one instance "Saving Private Ryan" is awarded a multiplicity of Academy Awards and is shown on TV to enthusiastic response, and in the next instance a broadcaster self-censors itself (anticipatorily) because no one knows what is or is not any longer acceptable to this (YOUR) increasingly up-tight body. It's the 21st Century folks (and I'm 69 yrs old myself) for something-or-other's sake, Lighten-Up and stop issuing blanket fines and notices of violation. Enough already...save the airways, not your projections of other people's morality. Ethics trumps morals every time.

More-or-less, respectfully,

Modern life depends on communication and information. Turning extra bandwidth and airwaves over to private companies instead of preserving them under public ownership will continue to widen the gap in our society between haves and have-nots. It is absolutely essential for the freedom of our country that we have complete freedom of the press, including radio and TV.

Public communications should not be merged to benefit big corporate giants for their benefit. We all lose.

Please, please don’t allow the over-regulation and mass ownership of our public airwaves!!!! Money may talk, but allowing the public to retain control over what should be a public domain (much like the radio waves you already allowed mass consolidation of).

I recently purchased a high speed internet computer (iMac) and discovered that I do not have any high speed internet service in my area, nor is AT&T (the only phone service available in my area) planning on putting in DSL or any other type of internet service. There will also never be cable installed here. Therefore, I am forced to use dial-up so had to buy a cable to down rev my system. The only alternative is satellite which is too expensive ($400 to install and $100/mo). I am really upset with AT&T as they messed my phone service up when I asked for a local access #. It took 10 calls and people to get my phone service put back the way it was. They tried to take away my special long distance plan (there are no local calls here) and were going to charge me 10-cents a min. for all my calls. I wrote to them, and called them, and still got billed incorrectly ($85) when it should have been $50. I want to have high speed internet access as it is the only way I can hopefully get a p/t job telecommuting (I use to work at Apple) until I became ill. They are forming a monopoly and that is illegal. They are even being rude now because there is no competition. Please do not let these companies take over the airwaves and form a monopoly (remember it's illegal for a very good reason) that is already occurring. Please, please, please, do not let it happen! I'm ill and unable to live a normal life and my computer is all I've got to stay in touch with the world and I don't have any money to pay for expensive service. There are many people like me being shut out of the world (that is not an exaggeration

The FCC should be acting in the interest of American citizens and not in the interest of private corporations who profit from their free use of the public airwaves. Please act in the interest of "we, the people" instead of the cartels that threaten the free flow of information in this country. Since 1996 the FCC has a pathetic record of betraying the interests of the people. People like Michael Powell will be regarded by history as petty thieves who despised democracy. Freeing these airways for us is just one step for Americans. Asia has so much access it makes America look pathetic. It costs more here and we have lower bandwidth. Why can’t we live as well as Asia? I would really like to know why capitalism has to make it harder for the richest nation in the world to give “Less” to its citizens. Why does our government want us to have less than the Chinese government wants its citizens to have...seems a little backwards, doesn’t it.

Funding for public use may come from tax-levied dollars...rather than kill the opportunities for jobs, small businesses, entreprenureal ventures, assistance to public agencies and institutions by giving large businesses monopolies on internet services. I for one would like to have a voice via my elected officials or by exercising my rights of free speech. I fear that by not holding shares in private sector companies that my opinions for needed services would be abolished and deserving smaller companies would not be able to compete thus lessening opportunities that would diminish the gap between rich and poor in our country.

Please keep wireless airwaves rights out of the hands of the huge companies so people and smaller companies can continue to innovate and grow! Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. So the strategy of the HUGE companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition is fundamentally against the free market principles that made our economy great.

I strongly ask FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior.

Dear Federal Communications Commissioners:
I am writing to provide some input on a fast-approaching decision you will be making. I understand that there is a massive "airwave auction" to be happening soon. It is vital for your Commission to ensure that the rules attached to the use of the auctioned airwaves preserve the utilization of these public spaces for the good of the public.

There seems to be quite a bit of ambiguity surrounding how the purchaser will be able to use these new airwaves.

Most important on my list, as well as many others in my community, is that the public airwaves need to remain at the service of the public. You must create clear and strong rules if you venture to pair the airwaves as a public-private partnership.

There is to be no stifling of innovation in the field coming from small start-ups and there is to be no stifling of competition by the "big guys" gobbling up the available airspace.

And, my last request, is please publicize where all the revenue from this auction will be directed.

Thank you for your time and consideratin of these weighty issues in a delicate time, the internet is ours, established and built with OUR tax dollars. It is a national resource for us all, not just for large telecoms to suck even more money out of us. Internet neutrality is one of the last tools we have to maintain an American national community and the strength our country needs from an informed citizenry.

Catherine A Lamenzo

Telecoms don’t need yet greater profits. Certainly no where near as much as America needs democracy.

The internet started as a wonderful and exciting way to access information and stay connected to friends and family. Now, we have innovation that allows dialogue of the kind that feeds the soul. Please help us keep the human element of the internet alive. Do not allow the big companies to monopolize the airwaves for profit. Don't they have enough already? Public airwaves should be for the good of the public

Louis D. Ancrum
Durham, NC 27704
The Internet should be a public good from which individuals can receive and send unimpeded information without being tied to some corporate bottom line like newspapers and other public media have become. We have already lost our ability to have a free and open press due to corporate profit demands. We can’t tolerate our last open media being controlled by a market system that does not affect millions of people.

Federal Communications Commission...Your decision whether or not to turn over our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast will have a drastic effect on our nation’s freedoms. We must maintain an atmosphere of competition in the market place. The consumers cannot be denied the cutting-edge technology that people in other countries have. I am outraged with the state of our nation be it the Iraq War, Health care, immigration, pharmaceuticals, lack of energy conservation, etc., You have the opportunity to make a difference for which our nation stands...we need drastic changes towards to basic freedoms for which our country once stood for........

The FCC must keep the airways free from big business manipulation. The public airways cannot be corporatized. The government needs to rule in favor of the people, not the corporation!
I have a blog, a site, an online business that gets over two-thousand hits a day - I really like the company I'm with, but would be saddened to see such a venue as wireless be controlled by a few to the benefit of a few.

The information "lock-down" has already gone too far. Venezuela is moving in the same direction. PBS's funding was already cut and even CNN now covers celebrities more than deep issues in this country. The airwaves and the wireless internet is all that the American people have left to move towards a collective and inclusive democracy again.

As a citizen of San Jose, California, I am a user of computers in almost every part of my day. The ability to use the internet is extremely important to me, as it is easier to communicate with than a phone, and gives me more information than any other medium. In short, I depend on the Internet, as do most of my friends, relatives, and neighbors. I may live in Silicon Valley, but what is true in Silicon Valley eventually is true in all of California, and then America as a whole. America has lost endless amounts of legitimacy by squandering it in other areas. If you stand firm and secure your people these airwaves, you will - in this area at least - prove America a bastion of justice compared to China, Iran, and other companies, which so often censor and ”regulate” Internet data.

In closing, my desire on this matter has more merit than that of the opposing argument, regardless of how much they're likely to bribe you. The only question is: are you worth your salary or not?

Handing these airwaves over to ATT, Verizon, Comcast or any like concern, at any price, will constitute a huge breach of the citizens trust that our government will protect our interests. It will place the US government in the company of many other corrupt governments that operate to satisfy their cronies in the economic elite, which cronies effectively rule through the manipulation of weak, milquetoast officials or with the cooperation of criminal stooges. THERE ARE ENOUGH MONOPOLIES WHICH HAVE ALREADY MADE SKYROCKING RATES FOR THESE SERVICES. IT IS ALREADY OUT OF THE REACH OF MANY HARD WORKING CITIZENS AND PEOPLE ON FIXED INCOMES. AS A TEACHER OF TECHNOLOGY WITH A LIMITED INCOME, EVEN I CANNOT AFFORD THE SERVICES OF THE HIGHER END BROADBAND. DO NOT ALLOW THESE COMPANIES TO CONTINUE THIS PRACTICE. WE ARE A DEMOCRACY AND SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO CHOOSE WHO WE WANT TO DO BUSINESS WITH, AND THE COSTS SHOULD BE COMPETITIVE, NOT FIXED BY MEGA CORPORATIONS. WE NEED CHOICES!

Please don’t sell out to AT&T and corporations. It’s a said day when hour federal agencies sell out the American public to corporations and this is exactly what AT&T and other telecommunication companies want. This and other such so called Internet neutrality efforts are nothing more then efforts by large corporations to control more and more for personal greed.

Don’t let America become another Nazi Germany. Stop the "Power Brokers” from stifling ”FREE SPEECH”. Have the people of the world forgot the lessons of WWII.

Internet access costs are increasing with time and not decreasing, despite technology improvements. A small number of companies already have control of these markets, and I am an example of how only one company provides High Speed access in my area, and as a result, they ignore my complaints, and take my cash, knowing that I have no alternative. It is incredibly short sighted to think that auctioning off these resources, inevitably to these companies as they have the money for highest bid, is in the best interests of the people, much less the consumers. In the long run, the cash we collect will go nowhere. Instead, give it to the people who have the best ideas, regardless of how much money they have, and let them negotiate these ideas with the big companies and other investors. You can then tax them and get the same money to the treasury. The best innovations will come from smaller groups who cannot afford to bid.

Dear FCC:
Please don't give or sell away what these comm companies have neither earned or have any right to own. At what point does the working class of this nation have the right to access information, education, and communication without a price tag? Ultimately, we pay for everything anyway. Shouldn't we get something for our hard work and tax dollars that truly adds to our quality of life and that of our children, universally? I think so.

The public airwaves are clogged with music that is lewd, lascivious, and violent. The radio talk shows are super-heated shouting matches that dumb down our Republic’s political discourse. Please allow the public airwaves - my airwaves, our airwaves - to be used for something beyond glorifying our society’s lowest impulses. Please instead allow for greater use of this critical resource for the public good.

Our public airwaves are just that-PUBLIC-not for the private use of certain corporations. We need to stop this "bleeding" of our rights to "free" speech, which will be stifled by selling all to private corps.

Please let innovative companies have the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution. Bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. Do not let the old phone and cable companies block this progress. Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. Do not let companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. I’m urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

I was already mortified by the sales of information (cell phone date) and the distribution of such info by private companies to the government. <td>Without doubt private corporations will use their power to benefit themselves and not the public. The airwaves MUST be kept in the people’s hands! In fact, the public MUST regain control of many basic institutions like for example the MILITARY. If not, private entities such as Blackhawk will be in control of this country and we are doomed as a free nation. The public airways belong to the citizens and MUST NOT be given over to the likes of Verizon, Comcast, AT&amp;T, etc. Do your job and keep OUR airwaves in the PUBLIC’S HANDS for the PUBLIC’S INTEREST.</td>

Hi,
I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.
These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.
You can sign the petition I signed here—urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

Paula Pasic

"The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market."

I am against turning over public airwaves to immoral corporations who only care about profits and couldn't care less about the public good. But on the other hand, we have a federal government that is so disfunctional it is pathetic. A bunch of fifth graders could probably do a better job of governing than what we have seen during the past six years. Very sad!!

Jerry Hancook
Hot Springs Vlg., AR 71909

These airwaves are PUBLIC property - there is only ONE "airwaves" that we all share - and these companies must be prevented from monopolizing the airwaves, especially if there is even a risk that they will stifle rather than enhance competition and public access.

I believe it’s your job to protect our free market and the principles of capitalism, which should not promote a monopoly in the airwaves. This has already happened in the media. Whatever happened to free press? We should all be frightened when we see control of the many by the very few in this country since Ronald Reagan set out to destroy the middle class. We need more congressional hearings and more oversight of the FCC. This is an agency that appears to be in the pocket of special interests groups. Some way, some how FCC members must be getting some pay back from these special interest groups. So many of these agencies have gotten very clever at covering their misdeeds and putting on a front of appearing to be within the law or using loop holes placed in the law by these special interest groups by paying off our (?) representatives to congress. I have been a Republican but can’t tell you how much I am discussed with these bunch of idiots who claim to be doing their job for the good of our country but are serving their own good and the good of the special interest groups that own their souls.

I presently pay a premium for basic telecommunication connectivity. This is due to the fact that local municipalities have created legalized monopolies and large cable companies have taken advantage of the situation to the detriment of the public at large. The same coaxial cable comes into my home with the same content of 20 years ago, but incredibly I now pay five times as much. The plain truth is that American business does not establish itself to act in the public's best interest. That, in of itself, is not bad, but handing over bandwidth to these firms is more than reckless, it borders on criminal. If this goes through I'd be very interested to know whom within the FCC would stand to profit from such an arrangement. Personal enrichment or gain on behalf of elected or appointed officials would be the only reason for supporting such an egregious and damaging policy as this.

My greatest pleasure is listening to PBS and having PBS bring me thoughts that are not commercialized. I am very fearful of the quality of information I will be exposed to if we do not allow more diverse programming options. Please protect the public good by setting auction rules that won't allow big pocket corporations or their deeper pocketed lobbyist to set up anti-competitive and anti-public activities. I agree with the statement that it's harmful to the public good if the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep public companies off our airwaves at the expense of the public good.

The public airwaves must stay PUBLIC. Corporate greed is destroying the beauty, integrity, and COMMON GOOD of America. Do you sell America to the highest bidder? Or protect it and keep her safe from pirates? We must welcome innovation and creativity or we shall suffer dictatorship. Our fate as a free people rests in your hands. As representatives "OF THE PEOPLE" your duty is to uphold our Independence. Do so now. Honorable men and women in Government, stand up for a righteous FUTURE. Airwaves are a national resource which must be distributed in a way which allows for the best in competitive pricing and technological innovation. As corporate ownership of public services continues to grow, there is more and more danger of very localized control. Without trying to sound anti-capitalist, I do think at this point in our society, we ought to be very careful about handing over ownership of everything that can be sold to private hands that concentrate wealth. If there are ways to keep things like means for public access of information open, where profit, if there is profit, goes to the benefit of society on a larger scale, I think we have a social, and perhaps moral obligation to make that happen.

Look, it’s simple.
With all the air-wave pollution we are spewing out on a minute by minute basis, the animals who have directional sonar are being jammed. When they are jammed, they die, when they die we no longer have vegetable crops. protect our airwaves –they belong to the people!!!
I was a Cell Phone customer of Cingular Wireless until AT&T bought them out. I know how AT&T operates. They do NOTHING for PUBLIC GOOD, only THEMSELVES. Turning the public airwaves over to companies like AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, and yes even Cingular if they were still around would allow them to use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

I urge you to use the public airwaves for the public good.

Thanks Very Much

I believe it is a vital function of the federal government to protect communication systems for the common good of all. I believe the FCC has the same responsibility. I also believe the federal government, esp. the Bush administration, has deprived us, the USA citizens, of honest communication through their deceitful stories. Congress does not work hard enough to protect our rights, from the deceit of the Bush/Cheney administration who have already set a president of depriving USA citizens of their rights to freedom of speech and freedom of honest communication. This Bush/Cheney & their cohorts continually give big corporations and big money our rights for profits that go into Bush/Cheney pockets. This evil abuse of power must be stopped! Honest communication is for the common good of all—not the whim of a few—this would be an utter disaster—keep this from happening!!

I hope you will PLEASE take a second to read this. I am not a free loader. I work hard for my money, and am happy to pay for services rendered, and I pay my taxes. I have been paying for my own phone and bills for the last 15 years, and never before have I witnessed such a rampant and total disregard for to customers patronizing said utilities as I have in the last few years. I am shocked and frightened- how can this be happening? Something has got to change, and I am hoping it will start here.

So much of today's government policy is in favor of the corporation over the individual that I'm beginning to wonder if my life has any meaning or value beyond my ability to generate cash; and as an individual I will never generate enough to be worth much on that scale. We are each individuals, we have to matter. More and more we are being forced to accept sub-par services and are unable to do a thing about it because of the monopolizing way it is set up- these corporations are allowed to get away with just about anything with little or no regard to ethics or fairness in large part because we have no choice but to go along with their policies if we wish to have the services they provide. As an individual citizen, I am increasingly feeling not only unimportant and powerless, but disrespected, cheated, and used. Please please take the publics interest to heart on this mater and help to restore some faith in my vote and in our governments interest in the public it was put in place to serve.

Please give us, the people, some of our power back! Help to break the stronghold these corporations have over our right to chose freely what kind of wireless service we wish to choose from, and stop them from being able to treat us in any way they please, knowing full well we don't have any other options. Stop them from forcing us to pay unrealistically high prices, providing a very limited selection, making us suffer through disgracefully bad and non-helpful customer service and ALL SORTS OF UNETHICAL BUSINESS PRACTICES. Please help to bring back competition in the market place and with it the kind of quality that companies provide when they have to prove that they are worth our patronage RATHER THEN FORCE US TO PATRONIZE THEM BY WAY OF ERADICATING THE COMPETITION. And please, please help to make the

It appears that access to information and one another, is at peril even more credulously! GW Bush & Co. are relentless in deciding the fate of Americans they are supposed to represent. So far, the only Americans they represent have a might big checkbook!

Please help us with this great work. For once the greatest good for the greatest number!

This action is not fair or just. We need more of a public voice not less. We now have a government that wants us to communicate less and less with each other. The more one sided the conversation the less truth is told. It is because of this one sided conversation that we are now fighting a war that never should have started. What kind of a future are we going to leave for our children if we let them take away our voice?

<td>Public airwaves are held in trust by the federal government to guarantee their utilization for public benefit. This is the FCC's mandate. Therefore, any new portion of the electromagnetic spectrum that is considered by the FCC to be made available for public use must be underwritten to promulgate, if not guarantee, the most widespread public benefit. Any assignment, plan, or program that impedes or contradicts such intent is counter to it. And any notion of transferring the control of airwaves by whatever means to companies reflects a misguided interpretation of the FCC's mandate, if not outright disregard for it. Rather than safeguarding these portions of the electromagnetic spectrum as an impetus to promote present and future innovation that will benefit private and public interest by keeping these airwaves free, an auction will do little more than to guarantee the ulterior motives of the presently competing telecommunications giants. The FCC needs to do more to force broadcasters to provide public service air time. Also, commercial advertising has come to dominate the few news programs left on the air. Networks like Fox and CNN have adopted a hyped up mode of news presentation that is nothing short of disgusting. Why can’t they just present the news in normal American speech, as is done in on PBS and NPR? The FCC is failing to do its job.

I listen to National Public Radio everyday and so does my young son—for free unless we DECIDE we can afford to donate money to our local station. I am a dedicated human rights attorney and those I email may not be able to respond to me if the price of their connection goes up. As we use the computer more as access for banking, communication and education (to name a few) we are creating the modern postal/finance/school system. Since this is true it should be made available to the public, for the public good, free or at not-for-profit rates.

America has always been a country where competition was encouraged; It gave people the opportunity to make something out of their lives. To turn the internet over to large phone and cable companies denies the individual access to explore and develop skills that help make America a stronger nation. Furthermore stifling competition will stifle the economy. The public airwaves belong to the people. The last vestiges for creative innovations should not be given to those who have no interest in anything other than just profit. To survive in this day and age as a strong nation we need to keep the competition strong and innovation alive. It is the responsible thing to do.

And for America to be competitive on the world stage the American people must have the tools the internet provides. Otherwise new discoveries in cutting-edge technology will become a thing of the past as a consequence because it will be unaffordable for many. Don’t throw away America’s future.

"Most businessmen don’t like their competitors, or for that matter competition. They want to make as much money as possible and getting a monopoly is one way of making a lot of money. That is fine, however, so long as they do not use methods calculated to make consumers worse off in the long run... Every agreement concerning trade, every regulation of trade, restrains. To bind, to restrain, is of their very essence. The true test of legality is whether the restraint imposed is such as merely regulates and perhaps thereby promotes competition or whether it is such as may suppress or even destroy competition.” The internet and wireless technology have revolutionized our society in ways we probably can’t comprehend yet. These businesses, though, can easily comprehend that ownership of frequencies and “cyberspace” is becoming much more profitable than owning land or goods. I am all about capitalism and free trade, but I fear that the free-flow of information on the internet which we now enjoy could be stifled and dammed by a major play to take control of internet access. It is bad for consumers and bad for democracy in general.

Our country was built on competition in the market place, allowing creativity to flourish. The government needs to protect our rights as citizens to expect action that will benefit the larger good. There is an overabundance already of corporate control, stifling those of modest means from actively contributing to society unable to compete with the HUGE money interests of companies and corporations. Please act in the interest of keeping our airwaves out of corporate control. The FCC must not allow competition and innovation to be robbed from the citizenry of our country for the personal enrichment of a few, who have little interest in the good of the many.

Mr FAA Officials: I strongly object to auctioning off public airwaves to corporate cable companies. If it were to happen it would be yet one more example of how this administration has auctioned off and stifled public debate so critical for our democracy. We are already seeing the effects of corporate media concentration in broadcast media and how that has stifled news coverage in favor of opinionated journalism and infotainment. I fail to see how such an action would be good public policy. Good for corporate cronyism, YES. I strongly say to this initiative!

In the early 1900’s the government stepped in to stop Western Union from controlling the wire ways and charging separate prices for access. Our government said that was illegal. So here the FCC has the chance to continue this policy and keep the air ways open. The phone companies were given large tax credits from states and allowed to up their charges in the early 1990’s in return to put fiber optics into 86 million households. The phone companies took the credits, raised there fees and didn’t build any fiber optic networks. They are in default of that agreement. Now they are using their lobbyists to try and convince the FCC to give them control of the airways because Microsoft, Google, Yahoo, etc are looking at a way to give the American people an opportunity to increase their speed and access to the internet without having gate keepers, that never delivered. To give this control over the airways to the phone and cable companies would go to prove to the American people that the basic service of government and its organizations is not for the best interest of the american people but the wallets of corporate america at the expense of the american people. Stand up and do what is right and tell the phone companies and cable companies to go fulfill their previous obligations to the people of america and quit trying to spread their monopolistic greed to other aspects.

I agree that the public airwaves should be used for the public good. Innovation in regards to information and information access via the internet should be kept as free as possible so that competition can continue in terms of inventive design in information technologies as well as to real access to those technologies and the good that can come from them. Public airwaves are just that—public period. Private ownership or control by corporate entities of these airwaves is unacceptable because it will only benefit those interests and not the public. The phone and cable companies own too much infrastructure and are uncompetitive monopolies as it stands. These companies should not be given licensing rights to airwaves that can ultimately tip competition solely in their favor, to the exclusion of smaller and, or, more innovative competitors. Let’s not let what happened with energy deregulation and ENRON happen to these vital, burgeoning technologies that stand to benefit all and not just enrich the few who control them.

Thank you for your consideration on this matter.

These airwaves should be preserved for the public good and use by future generations for devices which have not yet been invented. Widespread use of technology by almost every segment of the public today, only foreshadows the desires and to some extent dependency of future generations on technology to live their everyday lives. These airwaves should be kept in the public domain so as to allow their use by all and not just those that are able to pay some middle man for use of something that once belonged to all the citizens of our great country. Think of these airwaves not as thing to be sold to the highest bidder, but rather a resource available for use by all for the good of all—much like libraries and public parks. As a citizen and fellow countryman I ask you to preserve these public resources for the public for today and tomorrow and not to sell off this national resource. Thank you

All of the information I have found points toward further corporate control of what should be everyone’s right to communicate, no matter their financial, political or religious positions. Corporations are not interested in freedom – only in profits, as has been evidenced recently by the oil companies, and previously by the utility companies. Please do not let this happen to the citizens of this country. Help keep our communication available to everyone.

If I could have found the FCC e-mail address and document number, I would have e-mailed directly to the FCC. Your website at the FCC makes it difficult (intentionally?) for non-technical citizens like me to give you input. This issue—the airwaves—is something that affects everybody living in the country. The big guys are already making a lot of money. Bush One talked about "leveling the playing field." Well, equal access to high-speed broadband wireless would be pretty level, indeed.

We can not allow this to happen. What ever happened to the land of oppurtunity for the free? Corporate America is too large. It has gotten to the point, like this issue that they get to say what is best for us, but really all their doing is looking out for themselves and stock holders to make more money, while the majority of the people are getting poorer and poorer. Why is this? The FCC is suppose to regulate and control for the people, meaning the tax paying citizens, not these big businesses. Please, I beg you to take a moment, look in your heart and make the right decision. We all need to start doing our part to make this country great again!

Dear FCC members:
Please do not make the same past mistakes and auction off additional airwaves. I want diversity and less expensive venues for our airwave based internet connections. Your past methods lead to less diversity and more expense to customers. Currently I pay $79 per month to Verizon for this privilege. That price is outrageous. Please do not auction the airwaves, but rather create a new system of offering the airwaves to the public and business. Thank you, Paul Catterton

Ask them, in return for this gift, to provide FREE Internet service to all communities in their area with 1-500 people. They need the help to summon police help and other emergencies. They can sell advertising on it. We must fight the Digital Divide. Don Kornreich
Laguna Woods, CA 92637

The amount of money spent on advertising by the major cable, wire line and wireless companies is a national disgrace (Comcast is by far the worst). This translates to much higher rates for all since the regulated companies pass the cost along as a business expense which local governments (franchise grantors) cannot contest. And the amounts spent on advertising cannot help but result in a compliant media. So let's level the playing field and open up the airwaves for the public good.

No one, not even the federal government should decide who or what corporation has the rights to my money by forming a monopoly with a select few internet providers. Radio has worked for years on the basis of free airwaves to listeners and recently given consumers the CHOICE to buy a broader spectrum of radio providers. That’s how it should be, but then again how it should be and how it is, becomes a very fine line when competing with millions poured into lobbying efforts provided by these companies wishing to form a monopoly on American freedom.

Last night we read the Declaration of Independence again and some other documents from the founders of our country. It was amazing to feel their inspiration again. They were people of vision and integrity who believed government was for the people and by the people. The people IS NOT big business no matter how anyone tries to rationalize it. The people is families, mothers, fathers, children, young adults trying to make a meaningful and valuable life for themselves. So many people are also trying to help others find their way in this complicated world.

I urge you to make decisions of value for ALL the people, the tired, the poor, the rural citizens, the working poor, and all the others.

The necessity to enable information access to all is becoming increasingly important. Information access has become a great divider in our country between the poor and the wealthy. To ensure any kind of equality and the hopes of our nation to not become what our founding fathers fled from it is essential that we don't privatize such an key resource.

The airwaves are a natural resource owned by the people of this country, as defined by the Constitution, and are ours alone. They are not intended to be 'privitized'. Nor should they be. This is not the USSR of old, where everything was privatized, which led to large scale gansterism. Lets not follow in their footsteps and destroy this country. Unless we, the people, have control over what is said, discussed, and debated, dissent will be silenced, strangleing democracy and ending this great experiment in freedom.

time and time again, the people of the world are being sold off to corporations.... STOP GREED!! instead there should be free internet service, wired or wireless, for people across the country and around the globe....
The public airwaves should remain freely available for the use of local governments to make available to their residents - and not for private corporations to control and restrict access to the Internet. With mergers and acquisitions, we have seen the control of Internet access diminish to only a few privately controlled entry points and this valuable public resource is increasingly at risk of being controlled by uncontrolled monopolies.

I live in an area poorly served by cell or internet service. I think that universal availability of internet service anywhere would greatly help this and similar regions across the country. The big companies will never provide good service with their traditional, high-cost infrastructure unless they make a lot of money, and the populations in such areas are too small to bring a big profit. We are seeing exactly that with problems getting cell phone service out here. Meanwhile, this location is only 70 miles for the Washington DC beltway. Imagine that in any other developed country, or even developing country. In China, cell phone service is essentially universal. I have received phone calls while in the middle of the Gobi Desert. In addition to universal service, terrorism is another major consideration. To help counter the possibility of a terrorist attack in the US, we need more choices and redundancy in Internet communications, not less. With only a few big providers, essentially monopolists, we are very vulnerable. We need a much more disaggregated Internet system and redundancy in our Internet communications. This would make our country much more resilient in the even of a terrorist attack.

I've been told that nothing's free anymore, but I have to ask is that the way it should be for everything? Keeping Wireless internet access in the public domain is a small step towards giving people a treasured bit of freedom. I know that private business could run public wireless, but would they run it in the interest of public access or in the interest of making a profit? Would they be generous enough to allow a customer of a different business to access their network, or will every city have to have overlapping and competing networks? While I would like to believe that private business would run public access at cost to make it as affordable as possible to the public, I know better. Business exists to make money. Publicly owned networks do not. If ATnT wishes to present a quality public access and offer it to the consumer as a choice, then so be it. I have to complaint then, so long as all citizens have access to the network if they choose not to go with a private network. Don't make things easier for private business and harder for the public. In the end, your obligation is to the people, not the corporations.
I hope you make the right decision.

Business and the public are getting the short end of the stick, when it comes to available internet bandwidth. Giving away the newly-available spectrum to big media who no longer need it (and will sit on it) is not good public policy. That spectrum can be much better used to help fill the severe broadband shortage that puts America far down the ranks of developed countries in connection speeds. In Japan, $30.00 per month will buy a 50 mbps connection. In the US, that amount will buy, at most, HALF a mbps. It's past time to remedy this broadening gap, and enable businesses and consumers to move into the broadband era.

please consider the growing divide that exists between those that can afford high speed internet access and those who can not as a decision is reached. I am a school media specialist serving many low income families. Those students seldom if ever have access to high speed internet in their homes. At school I have ten computers for over 600 students. These students are seriously disadvantaged when they try to complete assignments, apply for colleges, or just stay informed. You have the ability here to help take care of these students and contribute to their chance to learn. Also consider seniors on limited incomes. My parents can not afford high speed internet access and so use the cheapest dial up service they can find; which again limits their ability to use the internet effectively. Many pages won’t even load on the connection. Equal access to what high speed internet access offers is crucial to all. Please Use the public airways for the good of every one.

I want our airwaves BACK, I don't want my government giving more away. Open the air to our last hope of getting information to the people in the form of FACTS instead of corporate pabulum. Don't give it to people who have no interest in facts.
I am outraged that the media is not living up to the requirement to give "public service" in the first place. HOLD THEM TO THAT! Make the airwaves open to discourse. Open the air (TV) to political debate so we won't have as much corruption committed so politicians can get money to pay for air time. DO NOT GIVE IN.

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&amp;T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.</td>

The public airwaves should be used for the public – not simply for a few corporate giants who will overcharge users for poor services. Smaller companies and even individuals will innovate at a much more rapid pace than the corporate giants and will often be able to offer those innovations at lower prices than corporate giants.

So give everyone a chance at the air wave marketplace – not just corporate giants.

At this stage in the information revolution, it is only fair to make information easily accessible for all. We are all seeking answers, sharing is key in discovery.

The public airways are the property of the public. That private industry was amongst the only entity able to project signals of sufficient strength to make adequate use of them may once have been true - now it isn’t. Further, those that seek to buy them do so not for the public good, but for their own. Do not take from the public what is theirs.

I refuse to do business with AT&T, Comcast, or Verizon. The FCC needs to realize that they are based out of a democratic system and must represent the PEOPLE of the country. This is an outrageous attack on our freedom and its time to reject corporate monopolies from continuing. The people will have their revenge if you do not heed their warnings.

I pay AT&T for my normal telephone use and they also charge me for long distance calls and hook up I don’t use. Verizon I only use for emergency cell phone usage and pay their minimum. Never the less I pay both companies for minimum service and would really prefer that the public airways remain beneficial for the public. This in spite of the fact that I own stock in verizon.

Please do not permit corporate control of public airwaves. They belong to the people, we cannot afford to have them controlled by commercial interests.

Honorable Commissioners:
I am submitting comments as a concerned citizen of the United States. To avoid sabotaging America competitiveness in the global economy, we need open unrestricted access to the Internet without allocating airwaves to private companies. Information is the basis for an active democracy and limiting the Internet's critical technology to only those with money will lead to further domination of media giants in our communication channels. Your decision as commissioners will determine the future of our country's competitiveness and innovation in technology. Other countries will certainly not sabotage their citizens with this out-dated approach to allocating airwaves. As FCC Commissioners, you can design an allocation method for these new airwaves that is based upon fair access principles. This topic needs to be vetted in public debate in widely-publicized workshops across the country. Please use your authority to cancel this auction and solicit "best practices" for fair access solutions from all parties.
Thank you for your consideration of these issues.

We hear the term "public airwaves" used quite often when someone abuses the "privilege" of using them. Problem is, there's nothing "public" about the airwaves. "Corporate" would be a much more descriptive term, don't you think?

Keith B Martin

The public airwaves are just that...PUBLIC. They need to be used for the common good, such as providing free space for publicly financed political campaigns, not for the good of corporate stockholders and over-compensated CEOs. There are some actions that cannot be easily undone when it is later found to have been a bad idea. This is one of them. I urge you to act responsibly and in the public's interest, which is why the FCC exists.

Our founding fathers are rolling in their graves at the thought of auctioning off public airwaves to the highest bidder. This is one freedom that Americans must preserve in order to preserve our constitutional right to free speech.

Do the right thing instead of what you most likely are being illegally paid to try and do. These airways are NOT yours to give! Hands off. That's your job. Do it!

Don't let America get further behind the rest of the world! Forget "the bottom line" for a change!

We might have the opportunity here to offer free airtime to political candidates as a method supporting fair elections. As we insist that Iraq’s oil be given to all the people, we must stick to the program and offer this resource to The People.

Dear FCC,
I’ve never really been a big fan of you guys, but if you took the leadership role here by using the public airwaves for the public instead of the lucky few who would control who is allowed to enjoy and benefit from the technology then it would completely change my mind. This would be so unconstitutional to limit speech by tying up the airwaves in the proposed way. What more will be done to take away our ability to both get and give information. As a writer, I use the internet for crucial professional purposes. I belong to reader/writer forums; I conduct enormous amounts of research online, using not only Google but countless blogs and informative web sites; I will publicize my forthcoming novel largely through the internet; I have met countless other writers through the internet; I found my agent through these connections; I have found the best critical readers of my early drafts through them, as well. My professional life would be far less rich and successful without access to this limitless source of human contact and information. I am not alone in this, for I know musicians, dancers, and other artists who rely on the same wealth of creative influence and support.

The internet is perhaps the greatest hope for the arts in this country. Please do not restrict access and run up the costs of this vital resource by allowing corporate interests to buy up necessary airways.

The Federal Government Has NO business Interfering with what & how any material is broadcast. This is just another example of how the corporations in collusion or partnership w/the media corporations—all 4 of them—that control all media are trying to make money off of lower & middle income people and keep the rich Richer & the poor poorer—with less access to information that IS Definition FREE. The internet was Not designed to have toll bootes.

I just learned of this issue, and it strikes me as vitally important that the 'public airwaves' that are out there remain open to the public. Everyone deserves a fair hearing. Having only big corporate ownership of the airwaves is dangerous - too open to manipulation, coercion and corruption.

Carol L. Kibble
Seattle, WA 98115

Please don’t allow these big companies with terrible customer service to acquire any more power than they currently have. The big companies should not treat consumers like they don’t need us since we are the reason they are in business in the first place. The more competition there is, the better companies have to treat their customers in order to keep them. Competition is disappearing in this country and consumers are the big losers when this happens.

Thank you for voting to keep the public airwaves public and out of the hands of private owners. We will end up in the same position with the airwaves as we are in with the car companies and oil companies, trapped into doing things one way. We need to be more competitive as a nation in order to keep up to the rest of the world. These big companies are against competition.

Thank you

I strongly oppose giving control of frequencies (which are a public resource) to companies that may use their power to restrict access. If a company wins rights to a frequency at these upcoming auctions, it must not be granted the power to let the frequency be unused or to restrict use of the frequency by third parties. The airwaves should be accessible, like the Interstate highways. It will be bad for the country if they are not accessible. And if you don't get the idea, some other countries will, and would be glad to get a jump on the U.S.

This is absolutely insane. The airwaves were meant to bring us together and these greedy corporates want to turn it into something to make money from. Why can't they care about the poor? Why is it that they believe the less fortunate have to suffer? It's insanity, it's inhumanity, and it's downright immoral of them to do this.

The American public is getting fleeced from oil companies, insurance companies, utility companies, and government in general. Keep your greedy, money grubbing hands off of our air waves. God created them not ATT, Verizon or the freaking FCC. Enough interference from big government and big business.

Pamela Smith

Dear FCC Employees,
I would like the radio waves to be public property, controlled by the public, to serve the public. Allowing big business greater control over the airwaves does not serve the interests of the people of this nation in the least. You are employed by me and other Americans. It would be useful for the nation for you to remember this.

The government supposedly exists to protect the people (consumer) from the monopolistic intentions of large corporations. This is a perfect example of a very few large corporations in an industry, who are trying to prevent other companies from providing competition. This must be stopped. Competition must be allowed, according to the USA's anti-Trust laws. Stop the monopoly now.

I am disabled and depend heavily on the research I can do on the internet about my disease and its treatment. With the disability comes reduced income. Therefore, I am NOT able to afford cable, cell phone, etc. Add to this the high GAS prices, and the about 40 miles R/T to doctor's appointments, and you can see, why people like me HAVE TO USE THE INTERNET—at a REASONable price. PLEASE, PLEASE: Do NOT sell the PUBLIC airwaves to the few big communication giants—so they can gauche us like the oil companies do!!!

Dear FCC,
Do the right thing to protect the American People and our country. This is another chapter in what appears to be a long list of agendas to feed corporations and take from the people. We need balance, corporations and competition, without balance we all lose eventually, corporations included.

Hello, My name is Daniel Greer. I believe that selling the public airwaves to big business is detrimental to us as a nation. A healthy capitalistic economy is based on competition and free trade. The big companies that control internet services right now need to innovate to stay on top of the game, not be sheltered behind the skirts of government. If they are not capable of doing that, then they need to make room for another company who can.

If there is one thing we should have learned in the last five years, it is that corporate owned media are not adequate to the tremendous task of informing the ordinary citizen. Individuals with internet access have proven to be better at researching and finding the truth than paid reporters. Easy, low cost, unprejudiced access to all internet sites is essential to the American republic.

MPLS with VPN is about to make a global monopoly on the Internet for service providers by gouging for "quality of service". If any airwaves are opening up, it should be for municipalities and local governments to create their OWN VPNS and internet access to temper these monopolies. These are NOT costly propositions for our municipalities and much is at stake in avoiding the "digital divide". I was a very successful internet engineer (one of Cisco's earliest engineers) and have been in this industry for 20 years so I really do know what I am talking about)

Tyranny, whether by private companies or the government, must be opposed at all costs. Tyranny is any decrease in individual freedoms for the sake of the corrupt interests of a monopolistic or oligarchic minority. In this modern age, dependent on high-tech communication, it is vital that everyone—no matter how poor—can access these communications.

As a network administrator for a public library the airwaves must be kept open. Too many times the corporations play games with pricing, with access, with other features and options. Do not give in to their private agendas.

The FCC has no hesitation in "babysitting" the puritan americans that want the government to raise there children rather than take the responsibility of monitoring and denying them access to "unappropriate" information. The rest of the world has super fast internet service while the phone and cable companies continue to hamstring our services and charging outrageous fees to do it. AT&T is back to doing the same thing it was busted up for in the 80's and YOU are turning a blind eye. When it was convenient to attack Microsoft for trying to be a monopoly, AT&T should have been right there with them. Do not allow the phone and cable companies to hog our public airwaves so they can continue to offer substandard service at premium prices.

Privatizing our networks and airways is a step toward totalitarianism and oligarchy. Don't be totally stupid. Do not give our most important tool of democracy away to private corporations who can then have power over all of us. It can only further destroy our country. What do mass-insanity looks like? I'm in my 50's- too old to emmigrate after working and contributing to the wealth of this nation all of my life. Don't take it away from all of us.

Public airwaves are public property. Why does the FCC feel it is necessary to sell them to entrenched oligopolists just because they have the most to loose and therefore are willing to bid the highest amount. The ability of oligopolists to pay more DOES NOT mean putting this valuable asset in their hands produces the greatest value for our society.

Stephen Sonderegger

Please allow something to be still owned by the people, without having a restriction placed on it. Otherwise there is no checking of balances that these companies are using it for good or general knowledge.

Both the founding fathers and the framers of the 1927 Radio Act understood that a vibrant and PLURALISTIC media was crucial to the success of a continental-sized democracy and put policies in place to encourage small media enterprises and in the latter case prevent any media enterprise from capturing a great share of the market for media outlets. The FCC has already gone way too far in undermining these safeguards – by loosening restrictions on how many stations a media company can own for example or refusing to recognize the public’s common carrier interest in the internet. A monopolized media market is a danger to our country, our democratic government, and our way of life. Protecting the public interest in a pluralistic, competitive media public sphere need not rule out a market solution to allocating frequencies, but the rules for that market (and every market has rules) must be structured in such a way that the outcome favors or at least protects the public interest.

Wake up call to the FCC: As if you didn’t know, the open nature of the Internet has produced countless technological and social innovations. A byproduct has also been countless profit for many of the same corporations who would stifle it for short term gain. Need more evidence of the sterilization caused by wholesale control of what should be public airwaves? Look no further than the wastelands that are network TV, AM/FM radio, and in short, commercial media.

They will clean up all your talking in a manner such as this
They will make you take a tinkle when you wanna take a piss
They will make you call fellatio a trouser-friendly kiss
Here’s the plain situation
There’s no negotiation
With the fellas at the freakin’ FCC!
They’re as stuffy as the stuffiest of special interest groups
Make a joke about your bowels and they order in the troops
Any baby with a brain could tell them Everybody Poops
Take a tip, take a lesson
You’ll never win by messin’
With the fellas at the freakin’ FCC!
And if you find yourself with some young, sexy thing
You’re gonna have to do her with your ding-a-ling
(Cause you can’t say penis!)
So they sent this little warning; they’re prepared to do their worst
And they stuck it in your mailbox, hoping you could be coerced
I can think of quite another place they should’ve stuck it first
They may just be neurotic
Or possibly psychotic
They’re the fellas at the freakin’ FCC!

You really should make the right choice now. If you don't, you're poor decision will come back to haunt you. I don't know if you've noticed, but people are getting very nervous and frustrated. There's a limit to the type of abuse you're contemplating that people will put up with. Read a bit of world history. People are not going to take this much longer. I urge you in the strongest terms to oppose any attempt by corporate giants to monopolize the internet. Corporate conglomerates have already taken over all of the radio, television and news organizations and have turned them into mouthpieces for the monied interests they represent. One need only to look at what is reported and what is not reported to realize that freedom of information is on the verge of becoming a thing of the past. Our democracy is in danger. The internet is the only avenue left for true freedom of speech. It is crucial that the FCC use every means possible to prevent corporations from taking over this technology and gouge the consumer again and again, all the while controlling access in new and yet to be discovered ways. Please protect our democracy. Oppose Verizon, AT&T, Comcast and others from taking over the public airwaves.

Thank you

Let’s get some able leadership back in Government. The purpose of Government is to work for the common good, not solely for the large corporations for the purpose of increased profit margins at our expense. Public airwaves mean just that. I say NO to any corporation taking over what belongs to all of the citizens of this Country.

I am writing to request that the public airwaves that you intend to release soon be fairly distributed to many companies, large and small. I am concerned that the larger telephone and cable companies will monopolize the airwaves if they manage to purchase large quantities. Unfortunately, I feel we are already victims of over-priced cable and telephone services because of corporate greed. I would hope the FCC would try to reverse this trend.

Stop selling our air to Big Companies! The Wireless revolution is for the People! Big Companies do not have the best interest of the people in mind, They would rather make sure that their share holders are well taken care of. Less and Less these days is that one in the same. You Make the decision in the end, but the wireless air waves should be free for the People! that would promote growth and business!

I’ve had recent experience with the inadequate handling of communication services by companies that are too large to provide the best service possible- i.e. difficult to use automated phone support, lack of coordination among departments within a company. Allowing large companies to buy and stockpile bandwidth for their own benefit creates the potential for monopolies in the communications industry, which would result in higher rates for customers without the regulation that competition provides. Customer support services would also suffer with decreased opportunity for competition. Allowing a large company to buy new spectrum space will stifle technological potential and will not benefit anyone. Allow this new bandwidth to be put to work for the people.

High-speed internet costs WAY too much. So does cable. So does UNO HOO (The "V" word). We know that they want a monopoly - for crappy programming, dropped calls, lame features, and on and on and on...We have been through this before....and these bloodsuckers want us to have no alternatives but to use their archaic technology and let their bland and faceless cartels control content....Tell the FCC to prohibit anti-competitive behavior by these dinosaurs. In June, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) will make a major decision: Use the public airwaves for the public good, or turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution. I do not oppose leasing public resources to private entities. But in _far_ too many cases, elected and appointed officials sell or lease the public resources for far too long a term at far too low a price. Typically those officials, or their family members, then go to work for the same companies or industries they have treated so favorably by betraying the public trust. Such corruption is tantamount to treason, and should be so treated.

I'm always for open and free communication pathways, as possible. The federal laws governing monopolies seem to somehow magically, mystically exempt the telecommunications companies. The telecom companies have grown large enough, and have seized control of enough. Give some of this back to the people, and keep things public. A democracy owned by corporations is an oligarchy.

Public airwaves should remain public. We seem to be widdling away American citizens perks for paying taxes.

To recognize how stifling corporate America can be to the innovative and competitive-based internet, think back to the absence of innovation that existed under the monopolism that was AT&T prior to its breakup. The technological advances that occurred in the cellular industry are a direct result of the breakup of that huge and stifling organization. Let’s NOT do that with the internet....keep it open and available to the public good.

At&T, Verizon, et al, does not need to hold for ransom one more intangible. Air is free. (So far.) It should remain free! How can ANYone in good conscience do this? If the FCC allows this to happen, they join the ranks of other government agencies not of/for/by the people. This is a blot on the cincience of American government if it is allowed to happen. The FCC has long been a "protector". Let's not have it become a predator.

To the Federal Communications Commission, as well as all other government agencies...a reminder: Your duty (fiduciary relationship) is to work on behalf of the public sector of this great nation. Therefore, it stands to reason that what you propose to do with our(we, the people) public airwaves, by turning them over to BIG business, is clearly contrary to your obligation to the public...clearly NOT in OUR best interest. Since the FCC has been charged with working FOR the beneficial interests of the 'people' it was created to serve, it is, hereby, requested that your agency cease and desist from harboring any further notion of turning ANYTHING over to those who already have their HUGE hands in our pockets. The last thing corporate America needs is more money.....it is WE, THE PEOPLE who need more of OUR money to stay in OUR pockets. The 'bar' is high; preserve proper relations with the public, serve the public, as well as protect the public...it is WE who need your help, greedy big business does NOT!!

We used to have Beaches that we could enjoy without being harassed by Condo owners, fields to play in without being ran off by developers, rivers to swim in without all of the pollution caused by those developers. The Air has already been polluted to the point that it will not be cleaned in my lifetime. The only thing that has not been sold out, that we know of, are the Airwaves. If you want a good example of how Large Corporations will protect your interest, just look at the Oil Industry.

The commercial sector has plenty of opportunity to profit. It has always been critical to securing the democratic freedom of the american airwaves that a certain portion be allocated for free expression and public good. Just because technology and media continues to evolve and be capitalized on, we rely on the FCC to fairly regulate and secure our rights as a free country, with free expression. Please continue to do this!!!

With all due past and present respect, please leave some of this for our benefit, use and prosperity. What AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, and alike have done for you. They may have donated to your campaign, but the people is the reason you were put in the office. The people who buy what these companies sell I am aware that at the present general political atmosphere, giving back to the people, what the people own already is a strange concept. But, we the people expect to be represented and protected by you, from the companies you will be giving away the natural treasures to, if you make the decision if favor of these handful of companies. Public airways is for the public good.

Please, look out for the interests of the public. Please!

Please don't turn the public airwaves over to the corporate fat cats.

How do you get your information for these petitions?

Keep the public airways open to the public - Companies like AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, etc are once again trying to monopolize the communication industries - The airways should be accessible to everyone, everywhere, no matter of their locale, race, color, creed, or dollars in their pockets - The airways are there for our children to use for research and in helping to further education for everyone...A concerned consumer

Let us keep back from corporate America what should be apportioned not for gain but for the public good. Surely there are better uses of the remaining bands than to further increase the power in the market of corporate entities. I feel that this should be a cheaper service to Americans. It seems like every time we turn around we are getting charged more for things. BGE is now going up 50%, gas prices are still on the rise. Pretty soon people aren't going to be able to afford to live. Then what will the government think when they are driving around in their new cars or living the life in their mansions with their servants waiting on them hand and foot. What is this world coming to. I just don't understand it anymore.

The good ol’ American Way, eh? What happened to America? People used to be kind, courteous, helpful, now??? Big Liners of pockets will only be lining their pockets and their greed. I’m not sure anything we say is going to make any difference, so, greed begets greed and it will go higher. However, I’ve never seen a Brinks Truck go to the Cemetary, have you? Between the gas prices, outsourcing and now the greedy wireless systems (which will cause even bigger cancers), I’m not sure how long America will be the TOP country. However, I have to say, in my lifetime, I’ve seen the Good, the Bad and the Ugly and this is just another instance of Ugly. Good Luck, Ginny

It is through the efforts of organizations, such as MoveOn.org Civic Action that the American Public has an available opportunity to speak out on behalf (of all Americans) in fighting corporate greed.

It isn't enough that corporate America has sold its soul, in varying capacities, to international outsourcing, but their efforts in compromising, and again, lining their pocket books at the expense of all Americans must be defeated!

I hereby hope by my signing this petition that there will be a call-to-arms in denying this measure for the common good of all internet users. And, I will be forwarding the e-mail communication that I received to others, who I believe will be interested in responding to yet another atrocity that is beguiling all Americans.

I am very concerned, from a national security basis, that if the FCC allows the public airwaves to be owned almost exclusively by several large companies. If they control most of the bandwidth how will our first responders be able to communicate with one another? If we consolidate control of the airways to a small number of large companies how do we insure that there will be any incentive to improvise and develop new technologies that make our country internationally more competitive? Already our internet services lag behind such countries as Korea. Furthermore, the consolidation of internet/wireless services is antidemocratic as it leads to environment where original or alternative ideas can be restricted by several “gatekeeper” internet providers. Please insure that we maintain a diversified net neutrality environment.

Sincerely,

We spend billions of dollars to ”Leave No Child Behind”, yet we would deny those most in need of access to information by allowing prices that put it out of reach or entangling it in rules that only favor the large companies like AT&T, Verizon and others. Also, if we truly want to raise the standards of living and to achieve peace between different groups, we need to encourage the spread of information. Hatred is born of ignorance.

The only way a democracy can function is if the citizens have cheap, readily available, UNBIASED access to information so we can make intelligent choices. Corporations are NOT UNBIASED. They have to focus on their bottom line. We need so many more airwaves that have no bias, have no agenda, have no platform they must adhere to, or we are no better than Dictator countries where the people are told what to think.

I am a Political Scientist (not some wild radical) and wrote my dissertation on the need for greater media access to unbiased information. Please take this opportunity to do that, instead of allowing big corporations to grab these goods before they are gone.

Stifling competition is so a part of an already existing problem in the U.S. Over $50 a month to watch tv? That’s getting excessive. These few companies are price fixing. Look at the costs. They are the same. There is not enough competition and this affects the consumer. Does anyone care about the consumer anymore? Do not let big businesses buy airwaves in order to stifle competition.

I’m old enough to remember when television was available to the public for free. Then, cable became a necessity if you wanted to see more than 3 stations. But it was a good thing because it was paid for by the viewer, so there weren’t supposed to be commercials. Sure! But they crept in, little by little, and now we keep paying MORE & MORE and there are AT LEAST as many commercials as there were on the old system. AND, you can pay for a ”package” and find it changed whenever and however the cable company wants it. And now that the horrible threat of a monopoly by ”Ma Bell” has been overcome, we have AT&T that has taken over BOTH SBC and Comcast!! So who’s fooling who?? We are basically down to 3 now. So where are the competition and choices that benefit the public? My bills are all labeled AT&T now.

We must stay competitive with other nations and areas of the world in every aspect of American enterprise, business, and telecommunications. These airwaves may be useful to one company who wins this auction, but in the long run it would be prudent to allow innovation and competition. I am concerned that control will be given certain individuals or companies who can control every aspect of telecommunications and then keep raising fees just as our cable co has been doing for years. You control assets that must be managed for the country’s good, for the people’s good, not just for the profits of a few. Please give everybody interested an opportunity to participate by making parts of the spectrum off limits to the largest companies.

I am seriously concerned about the direction of business in this country. Often the good of the people who need to partake of this industry is not served including in the rural areas and also by the pricing mechanisms.

Stop selling off the PUBLIC! Aren't there enough monopolies already? Even thinly disguised Monopolies and giant corporations? What happened to Henry Ford's idea of making a product affordable enough to be in everyone's household? As it is now - cable internet and DSL service is NOT affordable to everyone, and with gas going sky high, those of us with cable are considering getting rid of it. The internet, like TV is here to stay and is a great way to transfer & share information, there have been many offshoot businesses enhanced and even developed as a result of the internet - don't price it out of reach for the general public, or soon you won't have a public to offer it to!

Our country has lost a lot in the last seven years – freedoms that we always took for granted. Americans have been put to sleep and have lost their ability to reason and think because just a couple of big corporations control the media and present the "news," which most of us know is contrived and false (the tail wagging the dog). The last vestige of disseminating information to the public is left with the free airwaves of internet. We are losing our military to the war in Iraq and Afghanistan, property taxes are out of control and gas prices are just plain ridiculous and nothing is being done about any of it. So I'm not surprised that some corporate giants are trying to take over the airwaves and sock it to the lower and middle class, again! Equal Access to the publically owned electromagnetic spectrum should be a condition of any sale or licensed use of any segment of the spectrum. Any exclusionary privatization of the public airwaves is fundamentally undemocratic. Please do not sell the rights to a communication connecting the whole Earth to a corporation. Our thoughts and communication cannot be tempered by corporate limitations and lack of creativity. Especially since congressional investigations have repeatedly found that when any form of cubic power is given to corporations with golden parachutes and huge salaries, the everyday people are economically abused and treated with indifference.

<td>Dear FCC Commission Members: First let me say that I would condemn any sale of the airwaves used for internet and other public good. Someone in the commission must stand up for the public good and stop this catering to AT&amp;T, Verizon, and Comcast at the expense of the public good and the advancement of the technological benefits to all the public. Let me say this in stronger terms. How dare you consider the possibility of selling that which does not belong to the government in the first place. Who is paying you. Perhaps when we see how you act in this regard we will know who is paying you and we can then pursue you as corrupt public officials who have gotten into bed with corporate thieves. Do the right thing. Whatever you do will be scrutinized and your ethics will become a matter of public record. I promise.</td>

If the airwaves really do belong to the public; i.e., citizens/tax payers, do not turn them over to corporate "owners" who will use them to maximize their profits. Comcast cable company and dish network are taking an unfair advantage of the lack of competition in my area of Michigan (49418, 49505, and 49426 etc...) They are able to charge inflated rates for television with little or no competition and seemingly no regulation or objections from our local government. The ability to communicate via the internet and to learn about our world through a select few cable TV channels should not be a luxury that is easily affordable to only middle and upper class American citizens. I feel that Comcasts domination over internet and television rates and services furthers the marginalization of the lower classes in my state. I do not believe that this is intended by Comcast in anyway; their intent is to make money (which they are making hand over fist). However, the poor are going to purchase cable and desire to be connected to the internet regardless of their ability to afford it. I've obtained my last three jobs through the internet. In order to stay afloat in our rapidly growing global economy you must be able to harness the technology that is so crucial to being successful in that arena. Even if it simply means checking jobs.com for a carpet cleaning job. Access to this technology is an absolute necessity for advancement out of generational poverty. Comcast and other monopolizing service providers have capital gains as their primary motive and this absolute control puts the poorest sectors of society at even more of a disadvantage and the minority/wealthy sectors of society walk away with even more money in their pockets and self righteous grin. As though they have earned that money fair and square! I feel that my views are representative of many of those in my age group (late 20’s). I’m sick of big business, the US’s empirical tendencies and a false democracy run by special interest groups that are hoarding their profits and turning America into a corporately run state. Maybe it’s always been this way and I was too young to see it. But I can see it now and it makes me sick to my stomach. Why is this a complicated issue? I’m not asking the government to give out BMW’s and Mercedes Benzs’ to the poor to make life more fair. I’m simply pointing out that we do enough to marginalize the lower class and it would be to our benefit as an entire nation to give even our poorest citizens access to technology.

The prices for high speed internet and even basic phone service are too high for the service you receive. As a single working mom I'm limited to dial-up because of the cost constraints, which makes working from home when my child is ill very challenging. Aside from that, this country is a technology leader today because of the innovation of small businesses. Please do not hamper their ability see their new products to market by allowing big corporations to use anti-competitive practices at auction. Barring anti-competitive practices now will help the economy (since it is driven by small business) and save tax payers money by potentially driving down the prices of high-speed internet, and also by preventing future litigation. You guys had to bust up Ma Bell back in the day. This circumstance is a bit different, but the principals at play - and I believe the eventual outcome - are the same.

I beleive cable charges like everything else are far too high compared to the quality of content. Further when cable originated it was supposed to have certain stations set aside for public access. This seems to be a far gone conclusion as opposed to reality at this time. Healthy competition is the American way. This monopoly of cable,phone and internet access is illegal and effects to subtle price gouging of the consumer.

I definitely agree with public airwaves being used for the public good. This country has turned itself around. It's all about competition, money...NOT freedom, NOT happiness. What happened to the good days? Remember way back when? We are not UNITED any longer...and the government has grown more selfish and greedy than I've ever seen! IM SICK OF IT!!!

Dear FCC,
Is there no allegiance to the United States populous anymore? Or has our entire value system that countless men and women have died in multiple conflicts for, in our ever changing society of freeness a wasted sacrifice. I am tired of big business pulling the strings of our politicians and federal bureaucracy. There is no allegiance to us the people anymore. The only thing that seems to matter anymore is money. We have sold this country out to foreign interests already because of weak legislators, and a disconnected senate, and congress. The sovereignty of the United States depends on keeping monopolies, and conglomerates actions like this not manifesting into reality.

What would a true leader like Thomas Jefferson done? Or JFK. I believe they would have made a stand and kept communication channels open for the us We The People to have open communication unhindered by lobbyists, politicians, and federal bureaucracies. If open communication is hindered, or altered you have the rise of a totalitarian regime on the horizon. Have backbone and allegiance to YOUR country. Make the right choice your grandchildren depend on and open free society!

The great thing about America is freedom of speech and not only that, but the cultural idea that your opinion, your vote, your ideas are important to everyone in the nation. If you pass this we will certainly lose that constitutional right, as many of us will have no method or access to express our views. I like small radio stations where college kids play what they want to hear, even if it isn’t what I want to hear I like that it’s there. I like that there is public access television where anyone can have their own show, stupid or brilliant. This is a crucial part of America. Let’s not take the good things away from our culture, not to mention our rights away.

<td>Subject: You say you want a revolution... Hi, I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&amp;T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service–they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them. In June, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) will make a major decision: Use the public airwaves for the public good, or turn them over to these big companies who will block competition and innovation.</td>

Once upon a time we had laws enforcing conglomerations. Remember Ma Bell? If big business gets a hold on the airwaves, who is to say how they will use it, at what costs to the consumer and how will this effect the current internet facets currently in existence? Holding back the technology just because big business can is wrong! Look at the auto industry and the effects now playing out due to the lack of implementing change in a timely fashion. Let democracy reign!

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must and should protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless internet market.

I strongly believe that this invaluable spectrum is something that should not be sold to private companies, any more than I would advocate selling control of my water source to private companies. This is something that every citizen has some level of ownership in, since in some sense it’s a part of the natural bounty of our nation. Please, I implore you not to sacrifice this once in a lifetime opportunity to put the US back in the forefront of citizen technology.

The airways are public property. I should not have to pay for the use of what my tax dollars already ensure is mine and the public.
Corporations now have a stranglehold which is choking the life out of our democracy. Stop the corporate take over of the public airwaves. This is the ‘stadium general’ of free speech; the commons that belong to all Americas citizens - not the corporate gatekeepers.

Listen, is is, and has been obvious to those of us who are aware, that this government, as well as most others in the past, are not representing US-WE THE PEOPLE, as is your charge; but instead are co-opted(bought and paid for) by your corporations, PAC’S, etc. Much like one would buy a dog, a candy bar or sexual favors. I understand the reality of the market place. I am asking YOUR ORGANIZATION to put MORALITY and CHRISTIAN VALUES before the god’s of GREED, POWER, EGO, SUCCESS that are seldom talked about, but daily worshiped at the altar of MONEY(in god you trust). PUBLIC airways for PUBLIC good; not for your corporate god’s.

Sadly, maintaining free airways for the "public good", arguably is a myth. Democracy = capitalism and in fact we have the best government that money can buy (i.e., some 2.5 billion+ will be spent on the 2008 elections...with little chance for public financing in the future). We, in fact, live in a fascist-type state RIGHT NOW (i.e. the marriage of government and BIG BUSINESS where monolithic corporations are controlling global commerce with the paid-for help (i.e., campaign contributions+) of politicians regardless of party affiliation. There is no hope for the survival of life on the planet, including humanity itself, unless we can somehow PROTECT THE SANCTITY AND FREEDOM OF THE INTERNET AIRWAYS to allow for the free communication of ideas. And, without China and India "going GREEN" also, the future looks bleak.

I think that big business gets enough of our wealth at this point in our lives. The 1920s and stock market crashes showed us more than anything that some things should be left in the hands of the people and not large multi-million dollar monopolies. Let the people be. It costs more and more to live these days and we should dare well be able to have the freedom over our own airwaves and the internet AT ALL TIMES.

Enough already, private industry concerns own enough of our media outlets. Why is it necessary for these companies to have more control. It's almost as if we don't have a democracy here in America. I can recall as a child trying to understand the difference between us and the Soviet Union. I recall coming to the conclusion that state ownership of industrial and commercial elements was the clincher for me. I have come to the conclusion that its not just ownership, but also the manipulation which determines ownership. Put more of these cable airwaves into the hands of average citizens so that we can uphold the principles of our democracy.

I use Alltel Wireless for my cell phone usage. I remember the days when AT&T (Ma Bell) was broken up back in the old days (1980's) for being basically a monopoly due to lack of competition, now here we go again - back to only a few large companies for our communication needs. It hasn't worked for the cost of our telephone costs nor has it worked to keep the cost of our cable, or satellite systems competitive. Everything has just continued raise in price and hasn't reduced the cost of our services. I object to turning over a large portion of our airwaves to the "large" companies AGAIN!! | Lissa L. I believe in freedom of choice, and by handing over control to only three major corporations this will affect future companies from being able to compete in the market. I do not agree to this. I believe in free enterprise. As you can see I do not use any of these options listed below—so if this were to pass that would mean that I would be forced against my will to choose between one of the three companies listed below. This is not right. This is not what America stands for.

Subject: You say you want a revolution...

Hi,

I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

Thanks!

Greg Deaton

Not only do I believe that selling the airways to high profile companies like AT&T or Comcast would be detrimental to the public good, but I also feel it would be in direct violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. These companies will use their monetary power to block small competitors. Our public airways should continue to be regulated by the government and not privatized. Please rule in favor of the people so we can keep our voice on the airways. Thank You.

In Buffalo, NY where I live, the internet prices are outrageous. And unless you want phone-line internet or slow as a turtle internet, you have no other choice but to go through Time Warner Cable. They have a monopoly here, and are really the only people to get it from. If for anything, lets put an end to that. For the people who are sick of not having a choice but to pay a TON of money for mediocre internet service, know that public airwaves are for the public good!

As if the American public can afford to be gouged in yet another manner. With all the advancements in internet technology, it is now possible to make service available to more people and less expensive. But yet and still, the wireless phone companies would rather selfishly use it for their own financial gain instead of sharing technology which costs far less to provide now than it did in the beginning. As if they were not already making a fortune with their service fees and penalty charges. They have an obligation to help society advance yet they choose to be greedy. Since they can't make the right decision, Congress needs to force them to do the right thing.

Shouldn't the airwaves be public just like the waterways? Sometimes I wonder if the federal government holds anything as sacred! After that they are going to start charging us a breathing tax!!! Selling airwaves, what's next selling our waters to other countries or businesses? Boulderdash!!! I am in high hopes that our federal agencies have better sense than to squander a few dollars from big business for airwaves just so they can keep their profit margins up at a premium ... at our expense! I think this is a very good point. If we do not take the time to speak out then it's the same result as not voting. Isn't it about time we as a people start setting an example in this life we live. It's no wonder there is so much indifference, crime, and distruction in out country. If it's all about making a buck then we don't stand a chance. Look at what this type of mind set has done to us already. Let's move this country past it's self-centered greed and make it a place worth living in. This could be done and there would still be plenty of money to serve the purpose. The oil industry is a perfect example of what happens when all we see is making a buck. Have a good day cause at this rate there aren't many left. Gary Tackett.

Forcing people to pay for internet access is tantamount to charging for information at a public library (for example). Internet is how our children will get information. Assigning a fee will just create an even larger gap between the haves & have nots. Unacceptable.

The description, enablement and maintenance of "public" entities is prime territory for consumerist interests. The $ motivation is and will always affect us, either in profit and loss or a residue of technological advance for some and loss for others. This is, or should be very important to the regular person and the FCC ought to leave a lasting decision that secures competition and innovation long into the future.

When the government continues to allow corporate america to destroy the opportunities for free enterprise and entrepreneurship it has failed the people it serves. The fact is that we are already feeling the noose around our necks as it relates to the oil industry in this country. don't allow another enterprise to like at&t to provide bad service by gobbling up the airwaves at the expense of economic competitiveness.

Television has worked wonderfully using the free airwaves! Public Broadcast is more efficient using the free airwaves. Computer technology is advancing so fast free airwaves for computers, Blackberries, etc will be begging and demanding it. Just as the WWW has caught on and become enormous, free airwaves can help wireless become incredibly unlimited. Please let it happen! I presently use Bellsouth, which is great, but I travel for a living and it sure much more efficient when WiFi is free. Thanks for listening! Clayton Reid, Atlanta, GA

This is just another example of big business ruining america through political favors and corruption. The airwaves should be considered public property, available to all who have the initiative, creativity and ability to develop them. The use of this public property for private gain (corporate profit) will only stifle innovation and opportunities for growth and limit competition. The internet was not developed by corporations nor do they need have the opportunity control it. There will be a few who profit (as it the oil companies....) and many who lose. Let's not have than happen again!

Dear Members of the FCC: Please exercise courage and foresight by standing up to the corporations and doing what is best for the future of America. That is your mission and your pledge. Do not allow companies to buy the airwaves, restrict open usage, and prevent America from competing in the global economy. We are already behind. Please don’t be the reason why we fail to benefit from American intelligence and ingenuity to expand the use of the internet to more people. Do the right thing. We’re counting on you. Thank you.

Too many of the media is owned by large companies that only spreads lies to the public. The ruined 4 white college boys lives with lie that anyone could see through because the accuser was a black woman, but where is the story from Knoxville about the white couple brutally raped, sodomized, and murdered by blacke? Liberal media will not tell of these stories. that is why we need to keep the public airwaves here for the people, not politics!!

To get high speed internet is a fortune, the common people are having a hard time just paying their bills, and too many places have no competition. You have one company to deal with and they charge you what they want to. Someone needs to help the little people who just plod along, trying to survive and pay their bills. My tax dollars seem to help everyone but me.

There is plenty of wavelength in the hands of private industry. Save some for posterities sake. There is not enough control by the public and once sold it will be gone forever. Let's look at the broadband speeds in Europe and East Asia (ex. S. Korea, Japan). Please compare speed and price to what we have here. This research won't even take you 1 hr to complete. Providing broadband access on open airwaves not only will bring power to the people, but Infrastructure is built, which can attract many businesses and incentives to build in the said region.

Public airwaves are and should remain just that - PUBLIC - not owned by any entity for their own enrichment. We have very little left that is not regulated or owned by a major company; making major $$; let's think about keeping Public Airwaves free - not owned (and charged for) by any company. Thank you

I firmly believe that these new available airwaves should be for the public good not only for very local uses but also for new developing uses of the wireless being developed by private citizens for the benefit of all and also because they are free to us. I do not believe that these newly accessible airwaves should be held for an auction for only those who have a highly profitable business and then keep raising fees as Comcast and other cable companies have done. Or another extreme example are the oil companies charging high fees for their gasoline because they have a monopoly as does some cable companies.

It is just another move by major corporations to corner the market they are in. I have no merit for complaining for I use AT&T, but in no way do I like the idea of taking our airwaves. Either by choice or ignorance these companies are suppressing our right of speech and by doing so, it adds another brick to the injustice of our natural born freedoms. We are all slaves to money and will continue to be such if the corporations that we support continue to tighten their grip just to make a profit.

The internet is now the only outlet for freedom of speech. Please keep public access to Wi-Fi and the Internet in the hands of the people, not major companies. The internet is like a public library or a non commercial radio or tv station. Keep the airwaves free!

Oscar Negret

Competition and innovation are American tradition, and have produced many of the wonderful assets we Americans enjoy today. Large corporations should be part of the process, not preventing progress through control of airwaves. They have the money to buy many things, but freedom of the airwaves should not be among them!

This country was founded on principles of equality for all, and numerous conflicts arose to clarify the meaning of "equality" and "all". In its wisdom nearly a century ago, the "then" government recognized and determined that new technologies could bring information equally to the "all". The current government with its manifold agencies, has capitulated to the unbridled greed of its leaders and has, since its beginning, stolen public assets to dole out to its minions - those other greedy "creatures" who put it in power! ENOUGH ALREADY !!!! Cable and satellite transmission is available to those who want to purchase, develop and subscribe to it. FINE. Let them pay for those services, but DON'T GIVE THEM THE BROADCAST AIRWAYS!

I believe that the public airwaves should be preserved for public use, and should not be sold to private interests. The public airwaves are analogous to public parks and open space lands, which should never be sold to private interests for development. While there may not appear to be an immediate need for what seems to be "excess" park land, the population will grow, and the land will eventually be needed. So it is with the airwaves. We may not now be able to envision a public need for available airwave capacity. However, with technology advancing exponentially, we need to preserve our options.

Inexpensive communication should be encouraged and promoted and not suppressed. If we truly want a diverse world with a collaborative spirit we need to support inexpensive communication rather than suppress camaraderie. Expensive communication promotes preconceived notions, partiality and prejudice, is this something our highly developed society wishes to leave as a legacy?

I worked in management for a radio station from 1976-1983. In the beginning we had to renew our license every three years. We had to PROVE to the FCC that we were serving the community. We had to give both sides of an issue. The FCC was not a government entity to be blown off; the FCC had some teeth. Administrations changed; the FCC was basically gutted and now look at the mess we have. Radio is no longer an informative, truthful medium. It is now strictly entertainment except for possibly PBS and even they have been restrained in the past several years. Are the current stations on radio REALLY what the public wants or has it just been foisted upon us? Yes, I know we can't go back to "the good old days". But surely we can put programming on radio that really does serve the community. The minute large corporations take over any media, look out. All service, truth and good go out the window. What's the difference in programming, whether large corporations or the Government owns the media? We are only going to hear what each of them want us to hear. Limiting the number of media outlets in a particular market and overall limits were a good thing. But as in most things; greed took over. Where are the Edward R. Murrows and Walter Cronkites of today?

Dear Honorable Federal Communications Commission:
We need to have our public airwaves kept for the Public Good and available fo those Americans who make up this country. Remember, it was regular people who put everything on the line for the Freedom of this Country, not knowing what the outcome was going to be. They did that so our people could be free to do what is good and right and not be under more bondage of huge communication companies.

Thank you for your time to read this request.

I urge you to prevent further privatization of public airways. The nature of democracy requires the ability to hear and respond to a diversity of voices. I am fortunate enough to over-pay for the right for free information via cable and the internet. Information should be free to the public. The government should be using these airwaves to bring free information to the people, not selling it to the private sector. Companies trying to turn a greater profit will only hinder the progress of technological achievement. This is why hybrid cars took so long to come out. Mankind needs to move onto something new. The numbers will only get bigger & bigger. When will these companies be satisfied? When they own the planet? The oil companies do. They're paying off the car companies to keep cars dependant on fossil fuels. Now the airwaves will cost money? When does drinking water get rationed?

It is disgusting the amount of corporate influence there is in our government and daily lives. The FCC has no right to worsen the situation by letting only a few companies control the available bandwidth. At least 50% should be dedicated for public use. What is being proposed is wrong, and I abhor the FCC for even considering such actions!!! You should all be ashamed!!!

Corporations hold too much power already, which they wield against the consumer at every opportunity. Meanwhile, many cities spend large portions of their public budgets on wireless initiatives.

Quit giving greedy corporations more power. Help local governments retain their public funds focus on infrastructure maintenance rather than costly wireless initiatives.

The consolidation of power in the hands of the phone companies has gone too far already. In addition, I am a freelance dialog recordist for film and television productions. I often use wireless microphones which operate on these public frequencies. Does not AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast already own too much? They almost NO competition as it is. Why work to favor corporations even more than they have already been favored? Is LESS competition really better? In my area, Comcast already has NO COMPETITOR. How is this good for the marketplace? This is an old problem with cable companies. Do not turn over these frequencies to these companies. We have already seen AT&T’s mismanagement of fiber optic networks that they never built.

I urge you to keep the airwaves democratic and free.

Dear FCC,
I am a concerned citizen petitioning you to not allow businesses or anyone else to purchase such a limited resource that is our public airwaves. The public could potentially benefit even more from these airwaves than we ever have before. What large corporations want, isn’t necessarily what is best for the public. It reminds me of what happened here in Salt Lake City when we used to have a passenger train called the Bamberger Railroad. It was a wonderfully located line that provided public transportation for much of the Salt Lake Valley. In this case the railroad was privately owned and eventually sold to some automobile companies who bought it just so they could tear up the rail line and essentially eliminate the competition for their automobiles. Flash forward to today and the government is paying millions of dollars to put in a new passenger rail line, that isn’t as centrally located as the old Bamberger line because the property rights for the Bamberger were sold car companies again and built on. If only they had the benefit that we have now of learning from their mistake and not repeating it.
I petition you not to sell and repeat an unfortunate past.
Sincerely,
Paul Hess

The United States of America doesn't need AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast to have you turn over a huge portion of public airwaves. Companies aren't much without the public and neither are you. Keep the balance. You undermine that, you undermine America.

I have been having some concerns about my cable/internet/phone bill. And wasn't getting much help with it so I actually wanted to switch service. Until I learned that I can't even do that because the only company who serves my area is Comcast. So in order for me to have cable-services I NEED to use Comcast, and don't even have a choice. I do not think that is fair at all.

We, as a nation, must commit ourselves to providing universal access to the internet and the future technologies that will drive it. We cannot and should not have to rely on the generosity of Corporate America to provide to our populace the access which we ourselves have given to them. Living in rural Alaska, I know full well that there are no "gifts" from big business. If it's not in there best interest to deliver a product or serve a population, they certainly will not. By giving away the rights to these airwaves, we are only setting ourselves up to have to give these major corporation more money in order for us to use them. Public access is a public right. Privatizing these airwaves is simply another form of payola and should be absolutely discouraged.

David Horesh

These companies have already merged quiet a few times and have taken over many of the communication areas. They should not have more opportunity to make more of a profit off of us, when it is costing them hardly nothing at all except the paying of the lines that the public uses freely now. It's bad enough that everything else has gone up to the point where people are having to make choices on basic survival needs; we need a break somewhere. And by selling them these lines and not mandating how they will be or can be used is just sticking it to us again.

It is the original and legitimate function of the federal government to safeguard the freedoms of individual citizens. A move toward ceding the airwaves to corporate greed is a direct and willful betrayal of those principles. The air should remain public. We broke up ATT many years ago to prevent a monopoly. To sell the airwaves to three companies just creates a "trio-poly." Dear Members of the FCC,

As a former member of the telecommunications industry, I cannot support selling television frequencies that will be vacated by the move to HDTV to the telecommunications industry. Leaving these frequencies as unlicensed spectrum would permit the development of applications that would benefit the public good. Unlicensed spectrum has been used in projects such as the NSF funded HPWREN, which provides support to researchers, early responders and Native American bands in the southern California region. Providing additional unlicensed bandwidth would be beneficial to social and scientific applications and should be considered. I have nothing against large telecommunications companies, they paid my bills for many years and I still support their mission. However, I believe that much as our National Park System provides a public trust for material resources, the FCC should take advantage of this unique opportunity to preserve high quality wireless resources for public use.

Sincerely,

This is a rare opportunity to use a new technology to increase the democracy of information - and democracy and freedom of information are good for everyone, allowing everyone to benefit from each other’s good ideas. I am strongly opposed to turning over this bandwidth to the phone and cable companies that continually stifle Internet competition. Please don't hand over this valuable asset to the same companies that already dominate landline traffic. The new wireless spectrum must remain open and neutral to preserve the innovation that helped generate the current internet.

I think that it is a travesty that companies such as AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast are allowed to bully the Congress into passing laws that are against the public interest and greater good. This is clearly a case where monied interests are more important than what greater access to the internet would represent to neighborhoods, which can’t currently afford it at present time. It seems that with respect to things that could easily be made available for free or for a nominal one time cost, corporations would much rather privatize these assets into commodities to be sold for an outrageous profit. Please do your job here and vote no to any attempts on the part of these aforementioned companies to limit access and charge for internet access and availability to the world wide web freely available sources.

I hope the FCC will respectfully consider that we'd like the "luxury" of internet access over our airwaves. The digital divide is increasing in populations that are economically disadvantaged. I hope the FCC will not put another arbitrary roadblock in place that would serve to further that divide. Our children's educations will be more and more dependent on technology. Let's ensure we don't put another obstacle in our kids' way of learning.

Too many large economic entities now dominate too many of the choices, economic and otherwise, of citizens. This aggregation of power would have been viewed very negatively by the founders of our nation, whose constant focus was PREVENTING the accumulation of too much power in any sector or layer in society and in the political economy of the United States. Use of the public communications spectrum has already become concentrated in very few corporate hands. This trend needs to be aggressively REVERSED, to enable a greater diversity of viewpoints and information flow. Entering an extremely risky, hazardous Century, the nation needs all the diversity and creativity of viewpoints and perspectives it can get—that maximizes our chances of getting through the greatest challenges that have ever faced this country—or, for that matter, the human race.

Here we go again...another possible attempt at government mis-using the office they were voted into, by the people they are supposed to be protecting. I respectfully submit to all of you elected officials, that you are supposed be there "for the people," not for "big business." There is so much rapid change and growth happening in America, and the world these days. Think long and hard about the decisions you are all making while you are still in office. The American people are being pushed harder and harder against a wall, and that could result in a tragic turn of events during our lifetime. Are we going to move forward as a country, or revert to a government and country that is run by "kings and queens?" We all know how these governments have failed in the past, and that is a huge reason that America came to be. There is a big difference today. We are no longer un-educated "serfs" without the means and ability to stand up to the government, when the government over-steps its authority concerning the people. I don't feel the least bit sorry for all of these companies, as they are making great profits. Anything above and beyond that, is nothing but blatant greed, and mis-use of the power of the goverment. Please..., make the right decision, and do not turn your back on the freedoms of the American people to make these companies wealthier, and give them the control over the airwaves. Air, and the airwaves, should be free to all people!

Giving corporations these airwaves instead of releasing them to the public restricts access of the people to the benefits of technology and only serves to fatten the pockets of corporations, who have only their interests in mind. To the FCC: Please do everything within you power to prevent large corporations or any company from winning the upcoming auction which, if they did win, could and no doubt would stifle competition, innovation and wireless internet. The airwaves definitely and absolutely should only be used for the public good.

Regretably, the actions of the FCC over the last 2/3 years reveal what appears to be a continuing desire to both undermine the intent of the Telecom Act of ’96 and a refusal to accept the idea that true competition is what fosters innovation.

Public radio should be to the advantage of all community members. As a college DJ, a value the integrity of radio. Large companies controlling the airwaves will become an advertising ploy, and in some ways, will further cause a move from radio to ipods/mp3 players because individuals enjoy variety of radio, not a selected and minimally controlled form of airwaves.

I am not a communist or a radical left-winger. However, I believe (as most Americans do) that the purpose of our government is to serve the best interests of the people of this country. As a voting, tax-paying American, I demand that my government use our public airwaves for the public good. The FCC must force whoever wins this auction to allow competition, so our country can remain on top in the digital age. A private monopoly on access to public airwaves is bad for consumers, and it's bad for America.

I found AT&T to be so expensive that I was delighted to find VoIP as an alternative & have switched. We need the competition for wireless as well to keep up with Europe and the rest of the world. One more example of why we’re not currently competitive in the global market & turning over these airwaves would make it even worse. However, when I look @ the taxes & fees that governments have imposed on current telecom services, I’m not sure that I want the government involved in wireless as well – but don’t give it to AT&T and Verizon.

Maybe more competition, with required interoperability would be good for wireless communications. As it is now the choices, options, and coverage in the U.S. are limited by the greed and desire of the existing carriers to try to dominate. Proprietary equipment, broadcast frequencies, and non-interoperability is usually bad for consumers.

Affordable high-speed internet access is a necessity for the education of our nation as a whole. The internet is an exceptionally powerful well of knowledge and communication that embodies the spirit of democracy. Like public libraries, it is essential that such a resource be made available to the American people at an affordable price. These public airwaves offer a golden opportunity to provide high-speed internet access to many Americans who would otherwise be without. Such a public endeavor would also serve as a proving ground for radio-based internet technology, which could be later used by less-developed countries where public education is so desperately needed for the creation of a strong economy.

Overall, the bottom line is that these airwaves are deemed "public". So let them be used for the public.

This move is not for the common good of all peoples in the USA. It will only benefit those who have the mega bucks and that is not the ordinary citizen. It is a frightening situation you will put us into when money is the top speaker. I can not run for president as many qualified individuals can’t because of the money it takes today. Wireless technology is on the verge of outdating and replacing existing wired technologies and access. As this transition takes place it becomes increasingly important to build a foundation that will not limit future developments. This upcoming auction of airwave frequencies is an important part of that foundation just as the interstate highway system is the foundation of traditional travel. It is imperative that the decisions made today provide the greatest common good.

The internet is one of the greatest intellectual resources in the modern age. The FCC should look for opportunities to place this resource in the hands of the public, not into the pockets of internet companies. No corporation should have the right to regulate our intellectual freedom. Knowledge is not a commodity or a market share.

Jarek Ervin
Wallingford, PA 19086

Keep our air space free. There is no price that could be paid equal to the value of free and open airwaves. Remember the harm done to our country by the railroad barons. Limit the ownership of frequencies if you must sell them at all and then make the purchasers responsible to report publicly, on no less than an annual basis, on the good that they have served. Our airwaves are like mining rights to property owned by us and future generations. Make certain that they preserved for the public so they can serve the greatest good. Protect them from being horded by those that would monopolize them for private interests. You will long be remembered by your actions. To the glory of God and our great nation may be you be remembered well.

These are public airwaves and the public good requires open communication. Public (i.e. governmental) policy should support public use and resist privatization of public commodities, such as the airwaves. Short term gain from locking down these communications channels is far outweighed by future public benefit from increased innovation public use of this spectrum would allow.

It is outrageous that the FCC commissioners have the gall to give away what has belonged to the public for years.

It is time for us to say NO! to the greedy-corporate scoundrels of this country. They are not satisfied to own most of this country, but now they want to own the public airwaves. Shame on them! And shame on us if we let them. I say enough is enough. Let’s stop the madness and take control from these greedy corporate thieves that only think about the bottom line—money.

Glynda Williams

It is outrageous that the FCC commissioners have the gall to give away what has belonged to the public for years.

It is typical of the Bush administration to want to create a two or three tier system, one for the well-heeled who can afford the fastest access, one for middle income people that is slower, and one for the poor—which is practically no access. You may have the right legally to do this but I can assure you, there will be huge protest and a turnaround once Bozo Bush is out of office.

It is the FCC’s duty to regulate private industries that provide a basic service for the people. Due to this same principal during the time of Rockefeller and the transportation of oil the government passed the Sherman anti-trust act, etc. The term at the time was called "common carriage". To give control of the airways to the phone companies, as they want, is in direct violation of this common carriage. The phone companies have already defaulted on a state level, of supplying the fiberoptics, that they were to install in the early 90’s. They took the tax credits and increased rates per the terms of the agreement, yet no fiber optics across America. It seems they are spending all this money they made from that agreement to hire lobbyists to try and convince the FCC to give them more control of another media to further fatten their wallets, control the access to the internet and restrict our ability to allow free enterprise in this country. Enough is enough. It is time for the FCC to start doing their appointed job and to quit being puppets for corporate america and pawns of the administration in office. "We the People" remember that phrase.

Unused airwaves should be used for the public good. Privatizing them all for 10 cents on the dollar is a crime. AT&T, Verizon et al will ultimately only hold the public hostage monetarily for the possible use of these air waves and certainly not develop them for anything other than their own profit or hold them so that no one else can compete with them. Why give existing monopolies the opportunity to become even bigger monopolies?

We are at present 2 mergers away from the re-unification of the baby bells back into ma-bell. The 14 million page divestiture signed into law by President Reagan has facilitated the Bell getting into the wireless communications and internet access industries where existing ANTITRUST laws would have prevented entry. The Bell as a "broken up" company has broken labor unions, and bought up nearly every competitor in all three communication industries. The name changes under these mergers leaves a highly visible trail of the re-unification of the monopoly Bell Company. AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast are all baby bell companies, the proposed beneficiaries of the give-away and privatization of no-fee non-commercial emergency response frequencies. Since the creation of the eight "baby bells" the bells have acted as if by carefully planned oversight and a long term plan was being played out. At present most of the far east countries have far faster internet access than we do here in the USA where the internet was created. The last thing we need now is for the MONOPOLY to re-emerge as the sole gatekeeper to the internet, wireless communication and wired communications. There is a clear and present danger to the free market economy here. To give away another group of frequencies to companies that trace back to the Bell is unthinkable, and appears highly suspect. The frequencies under consideration currently poised for use in the case of national emergency, such as the recent Hurricane Katrina, and have a national defense history that protected the coasts back in world war two. To give away these frequencies is unthinkable. The amatuer radio operators and MARS defense volunteer operators are our back up communication system, should the existing privately held telecommunications system grid fail. In summary the billions of dollars worth of frequencies can serve our national defense and disaster response or be given away to a public company whose principle ownership could well be that of a citizen or group unfriendly to the USA, or a monopoly bent on its own interest acting without guilt, shame or remorse, and accountable to who? The recipients listed have so far failed to deliver bandwidth competitive to the services now use in the east. Subsequently we are being left out of the market

This has got to stop not caring about the publics wishes and just go with big money once again. I say no to privatizing the airwaves and I will send this to 500,000 other friends and acquaintances. You were voted in for us so help us.

I work for one of the few LPFM stations in the country (WRFR 93.3FM in Maine), and I feel that LPFM is important in that it gives people a voice and a medium that is not owned by a powerful, influential few corporations but instead enables many-to-many communication and encourages viewpoints that differ from the mainstream. Sadly, Clear Channel and other behemoths of media ownership and control have scandalously been allowed to buy up and pocket most of the remaining LPFM licenses, and for what use? Certainly they could have gone to better use by local, grassroots radio organizations. The relaxation of media ownership rules is repugnant and must be stopped now. This attempt to consign yet more of the spectrum "ownership" to corporate interests shows further disinterest by the FCC in actually promoting that which is good for the people, and instead, smacks of kow-towing to powerful corporate interests that are threatened by alternate methods of information delivery and access. Stop this madness now, return the airways to the people of the United States and end the harmful megacorporate stranglehold on frequencies and on information access.

We're urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.

Air waves belong to the people. How can we possibly sell the air we speak on. I have been an amateur radio operator since 1968. Where would Cell phones be without the input of Ham radio operators or many other experiments that would have never brought teh technology we have today. Many are contributed by amateurradio operators and to sell air waves would remove this gift.

Private enrichment of public airwaves has already gone much too far. Pretty soon no one will be able to afford to communicate on the Internet, watch TV or talk on the phone. This is a travesty. What’s in store for our children? If the govt. wants to make money, they should reduce their expenses by curbing the waste of our natural resources and limiting the usage of fuels thru better public transportation using environmentally safe methods.

Please don’t turn ANY MORE public airwaves over to large companies like ATT, Verizon, Comcast, etc. or ANY REASON what so ever. Any available airwaves at this point should be reserved for institutions of higher education and/or non profit organizations that can add variety and something of educational or artistic value to our commercially polluted airwaves. This big business for profit strategy the FCC has adopted over the past 50 years has turned our airwaves into garbage. As a 20 year radio veteran, I’m appalled at what’s happened in the past 7-10 years with Clear Channel in particular owning so much of the commercial airwaves that creativity, musical integrity and innovative content has all but been completely lost. Stop giving in to big business and protect the freedom of expression in this country. Thank you.

I am totally against companies continuing to raise their rates for patrons in order to obtain their own enrichment. I totally feel that we, as U.S. citizens, should have the right to choose more competitive rates and not have to pay astounding prices. There are already too many companies that "sock it" to people trying to buy a service and this has to stop in order to be fair to the less financially fortunate people in our world.

Dear Federal Communications Commission:
Please, don’t sell out to the big telcos! Give the American consumer a shot at having affordable portable broadband Internet access. Please, don’t let companies like Comcast and AT&T continue to deceive and take advantage of the American taxpayer.

I have been an unhappy Comcast customer for years, and have lodged complaints against them various times with the BBB. The only reason I am still with Comcast is that there is no better alternative for Internet service in my area, due to the artificial lack of competition created by the FCC’s protection of big telco companies.

This new available spectrum should be opened up for ALL companies and individuals to use and enjoy. Maybe then I won’t have to put up with vulgar and delinquent Comcast installers anymore.

Sincerely,
Daniel Labrador

The consolidation of media in this country has not been this extreme since the age of William Randolph Hearst. American citizens have witnessed multiple effects, including a lack of diversity of content and being lied to about the Iraq War. Now the FCC and large media corporations wish to excise a large portion of the spectrum which should be used to enrich the diversity of Internet providers. The synergistic implications of totalizing media regulation bode ill for the future of democracy in the U.S. I sign this petition and ask you to carefully consider your stance on Network Neutrality and make a decision that is in accord with the essential democratic as well as free market principles on which our country was founded.

Don't allow companies to sit on our airways for profit.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good not for big money making companies to get richer by.

Don't you think we've been screwed over enough?

There comes a point where the rich really are rich enough. If a farmer abuses his soil too often, too much, he will grow no crops. This is not rocket science.

Given my foreign address, I should note that I’m a US citizen and a regular voter. When I still lived in the USA (NYC) I was a regular listener to public radio, and here in Italy I still listen via streaming when I can. I think it’s obscene that the FCC is planning to turn over public airwaves to private concerns. American society is already so commercialized that it’s hard to find sources of news, music, and information that are not simply about money. The new possibilities of Internet access should be protected for the public good. -Allen Schill

To the FCC:
More than ever before, Americans need use of the airways for the public good and welfare as a very important aid in communication because we are living in very perilous times. We need to be able to send and receive communications that are vital for our protection, security, and welfare...especially in the event of a disaster – either natural or manmade. Business and industry are self-serving interests, which we hear from daily in the news media, commercials, newspapers, and even in entertainment. The government favors big businesses and industry when deciding national issues. There is a void when it comes to giving voice to John Q. Citizen and a nationwide channel for JQC to receive important news regarding survival and warnings. This also applies to threats from the spread of disease such as the avian flu virus, TB, SARS, chemical warfare, etc. Please look at the overall big picture... for the good of all Americans – from the people living on the streets to the top 2% of Americans who are the wealthiest. People who operate ham radios also need access to the airways because they are some of the very few who assist local governments and communities in time of national and local emergencies. I pray that you will not give in to pressure from profit-making interests of big business and industry, who have even been known to use strong-arm tactics to gain influence for their private interests. Our government was created by the people, for the people and of the people. by the Thank you.

Our global commons - those resources we all must share - is never well managed when opened to market forces. The results have been over-logged forests, over-fished oceans, over-polluted air, water and land, an over-burdened world. The ability to freely communicate is the most important tool we have in restoring balance. Do not transfer the management and use of our public airwaves to centralized private concerns. Do not restrict our shared ability and right to use this resource for our common good.

I can't believe that the FCC is even considering this. The massive abuse of power that has occurred in this country, especially in the last ten years, has already brought this planet and all life on it to the brink of extinction. Is there no limit to the greed of giant corporations and their friends in government?

I'm tired of big business - they get all the breaks, while people like teachers, and other public servants are ignored, except to add extra mandates to their loads without providing the funding necessary to carry them out. If big businesses contributed as much to society as educators in the way of volunteerism, we would be a better place. Unfortunately, it's all about money. They stand to make even more profit, while government crooks protect them from paying the taxes on their huge earnings.

Do not let private companies sit on a technology that could benefit us! We want a healthy and competitive phone/internet market!

Come on FCC, step up for what's good, NOT DOLLARS

I am urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

Please don't turn over the airwaves to corporate interests.

It is high time that our elected government officials start making decisions in favor of the best interests of the voting public (the "folks") instead of making decisions to satisfy the insatiable greed of big business!! Have you people in Washington got ROCKS in your heads? When God was passing out brains you in Washington thought he said pains so, you said "No thank you, I don't want any of those. You are all looney, and you prove it many times every single day. Please do not turn our airwaves over to these greedy morons. Their greed is so overwhelming that it can not and will never be satisfied. They will always want more, more, more and it is never ending GREED. It is getting out of hand!!! So, stop with the nonsense already!! We will vote all of you out of office!

PUBLIC AIRWAYS. Freedom of Speech. Freedom of Thought. and the Right to gather peacefully. Basic rights in North America, no? Handing over a large portion of the 'public' information systems to corporate interests nearly guarantees it will not be used by such organizations with the above mentioned valued rights in mind. If not through public airways, newspapers, the internet; how will the people communicate to each other?

Governmental regulation of our nations airwaves is the only rational choice. The government must not lose sight of its purpose which is to keep corporate interest at bay. I say "at bay" meaning that it is for the public good to keep competition going. If you let companies gain monopolies on anything (especially the media) then it becomes a one way conduit. This is not a principal that our country was founded upon. Please do the right thing and keep competition alive. Do not let monopolies take over our country. Thank you for your time and thought.

Hello FCC,
We are petitioning to avoid the "public airwaves" from becoming the ownership of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them. I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good. Thanks for your time and attention. Sincerely, Jose Montes

The UHF band is a precious national resource that needs to be carefully allocated for the country's maximum benefit. Simply auctioning it to the highest bidder is an abandonment of the FCC's stewardship. Just as the federal government and academia joined to create ARPANET and TCP/IP, this country will be best served by allowing publicly-funded research develop a universal broadband wireless internet. We don't need a repeat of the balkanization and chaos that characterized the development of cellular telephony in the U.S.

It seems to be an "in thing" to sell public property: sell the roads, sell the frequency bands, etc. Soon we will have pressure to sell the air above our land, the rivers, lakes and maybe even the ocean. Will we completely lose a sense of community.

Moreover, free communication is a necessary ingredient to democracy. Loose it and we can learn to live as robots.

I am totally against the big companies doing such a thing as getting something that could broaden the use of the internet and such. Especially after the Anti-trust, money in the pockets of Government officials in regards to the AT&T-Cingular SBC. Too many time have these slow moving monopolies been happening in recent years. Please do not let this continue to happen. Thanks
Please do not turn over the public airwaves over to large companies. Sadly Americans never really receive unbiased expression news because of corporate ownership of newspapers. Luckily some of us have access to international news to find out what is really happening in US. How sad.....

After Comcast solicited my business (which was illegal) & switched me from AT & T, I suffered 6 to 8 drops each & every day for 2 mos. & lost a whole lot of business. My entire world was turned upside down with constant intermittent outages on my land line, internet and fax capabilities and Comcast did not seem to care. They are not supposed to solicit businesses and have shown their greed and lack of concern. Hopefully AT&T will show up today. Please do not sell out the ordinary U.S. citizen to slavery! Thank you.

We need MORE competition in communications, not LESS. I am SICK of AT&T AND COMCAST CABLE. In Lansing, MI, we are STUCK with COMCAST for cable television. And they're expensive. Ditto for their high-speed internet! And as for AT&T? My husband & I attempted to get high-speed 'Net from them. They delivered BUT AT THE COST OF OUR PHONE SERVICE! THAT'S RIGHT! Seems that they could not provide us with phone service AND high-speed simultaneously. We ended up having to get rid of their internet service. And now we're struggling to get the bills reconciled!

By law, the airwaves actually BELONG to the public. No government can sell these rights. This Administration’s agenda of supporting corporate profits at the expense of 98% of its citizens is illegal, unethical, and immoral. If the FCC favors these corporations rather than the public, it will be responsible for the complete takeover of the media by one political party—and that is EXACTLY what happened in Nazi Germany. One of America’s most cherished freedoms, that which distinguished this country from all others, is its principle of free speech. Please do not destroy that freedom! It has already been eroded by media monopolies. I want to live in a democracy, not a fascist state.

As I understand the reason to regulate public airwaves through licensing by the FCC (An entity party of our government, which is funded by tax revenue collected by the citizens of the United States) is to prevent interference between people who broadcast on the frequency spectrum of that air space. If you turn the airwaves over to the corporate entities you put in motion circumstances that can inhibit innovation by placing control of this spectrum (and the airspace over my property) in the hands of the corporate bullies and their legal strong men. I’m seeing and living the end of our democracy. We are entering an age where capitalism is controlling our lives the same way communism controlled peoples lives.

I am part of the public and agree with working towards public good. I am not in position to decide what that involves, so I'm telling these people in such governmental positions that public good should be the focus. There are enough money-driven acts going on already. Please leave to the public what they still have. Protect it. Do not exploit it. As a retired School Technology Coordinator from a rural area, I know how important this issue is. Our students and faculty have high speed access at school, but access at home is another story. Either the access is non-existent or they want to charge you and arm and leg for it. Dial-up is a thing of the past yet we still have many places in this country where that is the only access. Let's keep "for profit" schemes out of the equation and look at the true benefits to the citizenry. As an example of current FCC authorized relaxation of television being allowed to bombard viewers with drug company ads, it makes me very angry. The Taft Hartley Act of 1947 was designed to limit the "overlord" status of big companies. This attempt to allow outright awarding the Communication Overlords public airwaves without competition reeks of profiteering with the FTC’s approval. These companies already rape consumers with "junk" fees such as Federal Regulatory fees that have nothing to do with the Federal Government and go directly to their respective bottom lines.

This was noted in the June Readers’ Digest. This is a quote from the article that is a sampling of what I am talking about in this message. "like the "Federal Subscriber Line Charge" of $12.78 that I pay Verizon every month for my two home phone lines. It sounds official and unavoidable, but according to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC), this so-called federal surcharge "is not a tax or fee charged by the government."

As in the movie "Network" this is my way of saying I am mad as hell and not going to take it any more”. I am also sending this link to all my contact so they can join the chorus if they are not part of a nation of sheep.

To whom it may concern,
The airwaves in question can and should be used for the greatest good by fostering innovation and competition in the wireless market, and by providing the public greater access to the internet. These goals cannot be achieved by selling the airwaves to large telecommunications companies. Thank you

Please keep the public airwaves ”Public”

These large conglomerates already drain us. What will they do after they have all the money?

Roger Clark

I am not only a long-term patron of the Internet, since the days of college teaching with access to the Internet’s precursor, ARPA (Advanced Research Projects Agency), but I’m also a thirty-year Extra-license Ham-Radio operator. During these thirty-plus years I have seen bandwidth and communication modes under the FCC diverted and exploited by commercial interests that simply sat on resources without availing them to the public while at other times the FCC apportioned fairly and managed sensibly similar resources. As a result, we know these communication resources can be managed wisely, and we can identify the benefits to the public of careful management of bandwidth and modes of communication. Now is the time to hold commercial interests to stringent review before delivering up any bandwidth or communication modes that might more imaginatively be placed at the disposal of all citizens. What are the implications if we do not manage our talents and resources wisely? In the future it may be impossible to exercise freedom of speech unless the Internet is open to all citizens at the lowest possible cost. The FCC must mandate that whoever wins an auction be required to make internet services (bandwidth and modes of communication) available to ordinary citizens in multiple settings at minimal expense. Commercial interests must not be allowed to squat on communication resources to the hindrance of our citizenry.

I definitely feel it's about time that SOMETHING was used for the public good, and this is one thing that would do a lot of good. A big plus would be that it would allow internet access for everyone, but more importantly, for low-income families & school-age children, veterans, and seniors. It's about time our government did something for "we the people" at "home," that is positive, would be much appreciated. and would be griped about by no one, with the exception of corporate America. More government funded research and commitment towards developing Free, renewable (non-depletable)energy would also be something our government could crow about to "we the people." In addition, facing the fact of global warming and more active action on saving our planet would be another course of true wisdom; not something Americans today see much evidence of in our government. Thank you.

To the Federal Communications Commission:
In June, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) will make a major decision: Use the public airwaves for the public good, or turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution. Please don’t let this happen as those of us on low income won’t be able to afford this and these services are a necessity for those of us incapacitated in one way or another. The phone services for health calls as well as other business for those of us who are home bound. The internet to stay in touch with family and friends and to get information for our needs or do our banking on line. It is difficult to care for ourselves without these helps as it is and having to pay higher prices will definitely hurt us and even those who may be able to afford this. As it is, the community I live in is limited for decent services as it is.

Thank you for hearing me out as I know you will take this into consideration.

My Fiance is Turkish, straight out of Istanbul. One thing that amazed her was the right for Americans to express themselves via public access television and radio. I too have traveled to countries (Russia, Guatemala, Dominican Republic) where media is controlled solely by government/corporations. It's sad to think that America's media would sink down to that level. What is most sad though, is that corporations such as AT&T are allowed to quietly slip legislation (or rather, a business plan) on a State legislature's desk with the full intention of changing state laws (taking away public right of way, elimination of franchise fees, making available the option of redlining services) to accommodate their goal of increasing profit as much as possible in as little time as possible. At the same time they produce advertisements that promise lower cable rates, and increased competition. It has already been proven in Michigan (an AT&T Victim) that there have been no substantial drop in price. This IS the corporate State quietly wreaking havoc on Americans, taking away our rights, and blatantly lying to us with promises of cheaper cable rates and increased competition. The bottom line: The People of the State should be the Individuals writing State legislation, not corporations. God help us all...

On more than one occasion when contacting Charter I have discovered that I am talking to a representative in Canada. I have nothing against Canada, but I do have a problem with the fact that I am not doing business with a Canadian company. Or am I?

In good faith I have been purchasing Charters products: cable TV, the internet service, and telephone service (I do not recommend this) from a U.S. Company. It's hard enough to find American Made products. If Charter Communications is already operating out of this country, how long will it take its subsidiaries to follow. Keep America free, and out of big business' control. It's time to start listening to the citizens of this great country. Thank you.

Innovation and competition in the marketplace is one of the things that makes our country and our quality of life so great. Compromising this vision by allowing a few large companies to seize and deny access to this emerging wireless marketplace is simply without merit to the consumer or to the producers of new technology.

The goal for the future should eventually be free, global wireless internet access for everyone. There are already many public free WiFi "hotspots" that have been created. We should eventually be able to have wireless Internet access everywhere - for phones, laptops, etc... This is just one step towards the right direction keeping these airwaves public.

I oppose the sale of the Dow Jones to R. Murdoc.

Please don’t turn over a large part of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

I am all for free markets, but the cable companies, which I actually prefer to use over satellite, have not been in check properly by the government in terms of pricing and competition with in it's industry. Cable companies hold exclusive areas and you are forced to pay their price or use another service other than cable if available. At least in my area you have no choices in cable companies. A cable company has a specific section of the county and if you don't like their prices, policies, channel selection, or auxiliary services such as internet and phone services - there is no competing cable company to shop. Surely by giving such organizations even more power and suppressing the poor and middle class by not allowing more access is a dangerous president. You, our elected officials, have an opportunity here to please over 90% of Americans with this legislation. We have a war we can't get out of. We have fuel prices skyrocketing even though oil companies are again showing record profits. We have a department of Home Land Security deciding how many of the bill of rights should remain intact and to what extent. The country is fed up and discouraged. Here's your chance to do something for the little guy, the average guy and every wealthy house hold that doesn't have communication stock in it's portfolio all at wounce! This country was started for freedom and some things still need to be protected for the public good. Please consider the consumer in today's market place and not just the corporate financial health. Please consider an American's right to freedom of speech and expression with out putting a price on it that would exclude many citizens from being heard or informed.

The radio spectrum should be allocated and used in such a way as to benefit the maximum number of people. Not to make the fewest number of people very rich. And what in the world would landline companies like AT&T and Comcast know about using public spectrum. Or is the point to give it to those who are least likely to do any good with it.

A SIMPLE FACT YOU MUST KNOW: Failure to protect my personal rights and the those of 'We The People', will get you promptly tossed out of your government position on your ear and HARD. I do not care how many ATT execs offered you post-gov kick-back jobs. Let it be know that to the full extent of The Americal Voting Public's outcry, we -WILL- ruin your career if you violate our trust. Selling -MY- public radio frequencies to commercial interests without just, due process, public comment and oversight is no less than an aggregious theft from myself and my grand children. Try it and I will personally bring your stinking policies, corporate promoters, and the henchmen behind them to banner headlines in every news media world wide. Remember Ken-what-was-his-name at Enron? HE tried it with our energy and power reserves and was hounded to death by an outraged public. WHO's NEXT? Why allow them to buy the airwaves and use them for their own success? Instead of selling the airwaves to the big companies, just to let them raise prices to where everyone is paying an arm and a leg for internet access/radio/what have you, sell them to smaller companies to make more of a competitive market with more affordable prices for consumers.

Throughout history, administrative decisions that have resulted in fewer people gaining greater power has resulted in the alienation of the population majority. If these public airwaves are turned over to these companies, it sends the message that the FCC would rather benefit the privileged few than the needy many. Please do not do this and let’s keep technological society progressing in a fair and democratic way.

Please do not give our public airwaves to private Companies. We cherish our PBS radio stations and TV channels as publically owned and operated. Records show that when the Government turns over publis operations, they become a disaster and costs us more in the long run to operate and correct. I’m telling my government to stop it! This administration has been trying hard to privatize our PBS stations and channels one way or another. This is just another one of their plans to try to succeed. Stop them!

Keep the airways public. There are enough corporations who are getting rich off the back of the common man. Keep the airways used for common good, not private enrichment.

As our county is going down hill, so is the public airwaves. We need to clean them up so we old timers can enjoy them as we knew years ago.

Leave the public airways alone. The big Companies make enough money.

This property belongs to the government – that is, to the people. If I were a customer of any establishment that considered these policies or actions, I would discontinue my business with them and would exploit this knowledge upon all those with whom I have contact.
Much of the only decent information I get is from public radio. The rest is propaganda and mind numbing.

Don't pimp off the public's airwaves to the ruthless corporate monsters. Haven't you destroyed independent media access enough yet?

That this is even an issue to be debated on is an example of the decay of idealism that this nation has been experiencing. There was a time when all the nation's oil ended up in the hands of the few. What did America do then? What is it doing now? Are we still the beacon of freedom to the world? If you hesitate to answer that, then you already have. Please now, let us not allow yet another accretion of power to the priviledged few. Let us all share our resources.

So many of our USofA’s citizens and residents are left unconnected in rural areas, even along US I-95 (eg.in Maine)! Please help EVERYONE in our great nation and keep our airwaves OPEN. Thank you for your work. Sincerely, Jeff & Mary-Teresa(Missy) Conrad

I respectfully ask that you keep the public airways public. Major corporations have enough avenues to enrich their profits. It will be just one step closer to “owning” the air. It is a public medium and should be kept as such. Thank you.

Freedon of speech, in my opinion, must extend beyond the semantics of plain physical speech or the written word. Present day and future technology cannot detract from this most blessed civil right. One cannot presume to in any way govern nor control an accessibility of communication that can only further connect humanity in its most positive and supportive sense. Keep your paranoid need for vigilence to those that may seek to keep our freedom from us. Let us all connect freely!
