Our Country cannot tolerate this corrupt government giving away the air ways that belong to all of us!

The print press has already succumbed to the trend of decreasing ownership; if democracy is to survive in our country we need to be able to hear a diversity of opinions as well as news that is not biased by the media’s ownership. Please do not give AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast a monopoly on the airwaaves; the airwaves belong to all Americans.

Please increase access to our public airways rather than turn them over to large corporate interests. Make the truly public.

Public airwaves to public use!

Collected by MoveOn.org Civic Action
The FCC has the power to take the U.S. into a future where everyone has a low-cost wireless connection to media, with none of the disruption and cost of laying all the cable in the ground, then maintaining it. We could have a system that actually works better as more users are added to it and that has virtually no overhead or maintenance costs. Or, they can choose to let an already too rich and powerful corporation take this same idea and turn it into a mega-money making venture for them with cable being laid and then having to be maintained. Said corporation can then justify a high price to charge the public (especially since they’ve wiped out all the competition), which will have the affect of leaving many people out of the loop. Only they will benefit from such a system the rest of us will not. So please keep this in mind your decision can either benefit one mega-corporation or it can benefit all of us. In the meantime, the rest of the world has already left us in the dust........

Stop letting companies control every aspect of what is available to us. There is too much corporate power in this country and there are too many NEAR monopolies controlling what is out there. Don’t let AT&T, Verizon and Comcast do to the internet what CLEAR CHANNEL has done to radio. CLEAR CHANNEL owns every radio station. And every radio station plays crap. There is so much music out there that is not being heard because of Clear Channel. Don’t let AT&T, Verizon and Comcast do to the internet what ABC, NBC and CBS have done to public TV. If I want more programming, I have to buy it from cable. And if these companies have their way, I will eventually have to buy TV too! And that’s what they want. Don’t let XM and Sirius merge! That would be a monopoly! All of these companies make too much money and deliver us so little in return. It has been a long time since America was a FREE country! None of this is good for America! Vote for what is good for the American people, NOT what is good for American companies. What’s good for American companies is not what’s good for American people. There is a direct conflict of interest here!

As a musician that plays a genre of music that is not a (popular) music, in jazz, I think it is extremely important that the internet remain a free, competitive, capitalist tool for all Americans. Many musicians of various genres use it as a tool to get their music heard. No longer do musicians have to depend on some record company to "discover" their talent. Musicians who play what is considered "unmarketable" music can market themselves. This is being done to great end. The Michael Thomas Quintet (the group I play drums for) is hitting many markets across the country. The group just had a feature CD review in Jazz Times magazine (May issue). We actually tour in these markets with great success. This is something that may have been impossible before the internet. It certainly would have been a lot harder to accomplish. Now say we do what Verizon, AT&T and other giant corporations want. All of a sudden the record companies can “afford” faster and better internet the say a Michael Thomas Quintet. Now the big corporate record companies can pay ridiculous amounts of money for more access and crowd out the small and/or independent labels and musicians. It is simply unfair, but since when do the greedy play fair. Side with the people, not with the powerful!

Over the past decade, I have seen a steady erosion of the notion of the Public Airwaves as a shared resource to be administered for the good of all. I have seen massive consolidation in the broadcasting industry, with the result that television has become dominated by tasteless, pointless, "reality" shows, and radio by politically reactionary talk shows, and I've seen the "fairness doctrine" thrown out the window. I've seen telecommunications devolve into a situation where landline and cellular customers are faced with myriad extra-cost bells and whistles, but often no more meaningful choices than they had in the days when AT&T landline phones and various open-channel radio services were the sum total of long-distance real-time communications.

You have already given too much to these large companies in the past. All the surcharges that were added to our phone bills were supposed to be invested in fiber optic cables. Instead, through the lobbying efforts of the large communication companies, the promises were broken and the companies were relieved of their responsibilities and kept the money themselves. As a result of this, we have some of the slowest internet speeds in the world.

Once again you are only looking to serve the interests of the large corporations. Don't you people have any consideration for the average citizen? Don't you ever want to do what is right and not just what is most profitable for you? It's not only about how much money you stand to make!

The Airways should never have been sold in the first place by the FCC without the consent of the people. In reality they ahva always belonged to us the people as much as the air we breath. The airways should and must be monitored and regulated at all times by the FCC for the good of the public–and not for the good of monopolizing corporations.

Competition is the basis for the innovation and new ideas that we depend on critically. Now that we have given up manufacturing and are deep in debt, we have to rely more than ever on technological innovation for our future prosperity. History has shown us that we cannot trust big business to do the right thing for the public, that is why regulations were put in place in the first place. Now that this President has worked so hard to deregulate just about every business he could get donations from, we see our water and air polluted, and our jobs sent out of the country leaving thousands out of jobs who counted on those jobs to live in this country. Do we all need to immigrate to other countries to get jobs, or can we count on our elected officials to finally begin to make laws that reflect the needs and desires of the American public. FCC needs to go back and check history to see that what they are doing is wrong and can be proven by the things that happened before regulations that prevented monopolies.

Think of how our highway system stimulated commerce, and how our education system (flawed as it may be) stimulates the economy. The internet is the information and education highway of the future. My one-person business requires me to I spend 60-70 days a year traveling. Lots of airports and hotels. The rest of the time I’m in a well-connected home office. I, and many like me, need reliable, efficient, low cost ways to stay connected when traveling. But the present controlled access run by Verizon, Comcast, T-Mobile, ATT and others is not a cost-effective option. Business travelers like me, as well as citizens who have lesser needs, should have more internet access options than the big players are providing, and at a low cost so everyone can have affordable access.

Please keep the newly available airwaves public or take measure to ensure that big companies cannot stifle competition and the innovation that other players could deliver.

Further, BPL is also not an option the FCC should be allowing. Recent evidence shows that the FCC has blindly endorsed BPL, creating an ostensible relationship with BPL providers and utility companies. BPL is a terrible "frequency" polluter, causing interference to broadcast stations on the AM band, Amateur radio operators, and many other services in the HF spectrum. BPL interferes with the amateur service, and this should not be allowed.

The Internet has revolutionized the way we communicate, but ONLY because it hasn’t been locked up in the hands of corporations and “official” content producers and providers. To do that kind of lock up with the broadcast airwaves will prevent the wireless world from becoming one rich with communication options and instead it will be another narrow avenue for the big corporations to tell us once again what we they want us to think. I stand firmly against that kind of narrowing and I hope the FCC will see this as a bad thing for mankind, stifling the kind of communication that allows for innovation and cooperation.

Freedom to communicate via the public airwaves and amazingly open Internet are the reality of today and the promise of the future. Stop giving away our rightfully public and open means of communication – and indeed of our cultural survival – to private interests that will inhibit and reshape things in ways that are antithetical to the free speech and individual expression that this nation is supposed to be about. Capitalism is a wonderful thing and in that exact spirit there’s nothing in the Constitution that guarantees a profit to any person or corporation. It just guarantees that any and all of us can try without hindrance to make the most of ourselves. Institutionalized monopolies are the very enemy of freedom and of our constitutional government.

The internet should be available to all at little or no cost - it has become infrastructure as essential as the telephone. Web access/email is the only option for customer service questions with many companies now. The IRS didn't even supply paper copies of tax forms to libraries this year - instead it send taxpayers online for access to the forms, and most taxes are filed online, too. What about banking? Bill paying? Then of course there are other more enjoyable uses - email, myspace, utube, google searches (maps, research) Keep the public airwaves low-cost and easily accessible!

During a time in which our rights and freedoms are (rightly and usefully or not) being restricted, it’s more important than ever that the public ownership of the airwaves be respected and protected, so this (and every other) situation can be monitored and reported on in as open and unbiased a manner as possible. Please do everything that you can to encourage this end.

Subject: You say you want a revolution...

Hi,

I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

Thanks!

It is absolutely abominable, not to mention, idiotic, to refuse to look at the long-term, the big picture, the consequences of ignoring the citizens of this heretofore amazing democracy in favor of The Dollar and corporatocracy. I am without words; but I hope words don't fail YOU and that you have the courage and the honor to prevent this purchase from happening. Think of your grandparents ...and then think of your grandkids. Do the right thing.

Public airwaves should not be turned over to the large companies who will use them for their own enrichment. Public air waves must be used for the public good. I dont know what I am supposed to say to the FCC. I would comment that America is built up of "The People" But I fear that sentiment would fall on deaf ears to a conservative FCC. If they wanted to show their allegiance to the People of the United States and their political neutrality, they could stand up against companies and stand with the populace. I'm going to watch this one closely for it will be obvious whether the FCC is in bed with corporations or doing the job the American People should expect they do.

We need to have many different voices and many different avenues of access.

FCC must not allow our media choices to continue shrinking.

the airwaves should remain public and not for private companies to make money off of.
Freedom of information IS freedom of speech- a 1st amendment right. Keep the internet free as it is often the ONLY source for gathering meaningful knowledge from multiple viewpoints. As an educator this is essential to my teaching practice. As an artist my website is my connection to the work. The use of economic censorship is as odious as political censorship. Whatever you want to call it, it comes down to the same thing. Keep the web open and free.

For the sake of our constitutional republic, please keep the public airwaves PUBLIC. In fact, if the FCC mandated that broadcasters donate sufficient air time to political discourse from candidates near election time, those candidates wouldn’t have to be constantly soliciting for money from sponsors to whom they are then indebted, endangering the integrity of our democratic process.

I use the internet extensively and support any effort to expand the internet.

Please access to the internet belongs to everyone. Our cities and local governments realize this and are attempting to provide it, at great cost. Please allow the poor, the undereducated, the rich and the educated alike to have access without excessive cost.

Once these airwaves have been privatized, there will be no way to open them for the public good. Please mandate that whoever wins the auction be prevented from inhibiting competition and innovation.

More assaults on our freedom - stop this legislation.

(a) More time and attention needs to be made available for considering this issue by the pub-

NOT individuals, nor are they democratically or-organized, hence turning over publicly owned resources to them is to concentrate power over them into the hands of a few. There is no need for doing this over airwaves given modern tech-

Accessibility is what gives the technology universal value. If for-profit corporations are allowed to restrict access "universally" the public loses out. Just as public education - universal access to education - enabled America to leap ahead in science in technology, restricting access to quality education would/will detract from our ability to lead. Please do not allow private corporations to control public access to the airwaves for their own enrichment.

Keep public airwaves public!!! Presently, the internet via email, blogs and websties are the only public forums left for individuals to openly discuss what qualifies as current events and/or news. Please stop this corporate takeover of public airwaves now!!!

What has happened to the collective good and sanctity of the airwaves? Please, don't give what belongs to society to for-profit companies.

Frankly, I am sick of the government letting the monied lobbists determine outcomes rather than acting in the interest of the people.

We have sold enough of America to the highest bidder. Corporate American needs to keep thier hands off of this! Somewhere along the line, a realization needs to be gained that the people can and will only take so much.
The idea of the "public good" is in danger of vanishing from this country. We need to keep it, and especially for our airwaves.

The fourth estate is being sent down the drain with the ongoing privatization of the airwaves. We should not turn the people's property into somebody else's good to lay the golden eggs for them alone. Those are our golden eggs, and not some craven investors wanting to accumulate billions more on the backs of what is rightfully the taxpayers.

I've heard that these channels are going to be purchased solely to prevent their usage by the people and creating more competition for those who can successfully bid on the people's property, and that is anti-free enterprise in its body and spirit. Leave the people's heritage alone. That is exactly what is not your job; your job is to protect the people's rights and property.

<td>AT&amp;T ripped me off when I moved and they could no longer provide cell coverage for me. I had to pay to terminate my contract, even though I had no choice but to find another cell carrier. In the 80's AT&amp;T soaked me for international long distance because they had no competition other than MCI. Now I work in an area where I keep an apartment and have no choice in carriers. I loathe AT&amp;T, but they still steal my hard-earned money. They are evil. Verizon is just Bell Telephone's perverted, renamed, inbred precursor of AT&amp;T. I have no choice for my home phone. The FCC’s mandate says nowhere in it that its purpose is to ”protect the corporate interest”, yet that is the general way they have operated for many years now. This is just wrong, and this issue presents about as clear an example the FCC’s misplaced priorities as any in recent memory. Please act in the PUBLIC interest this time.

I hope you will consider that the means to close the digital divide is to guarantee an infrastructure for new technology that serves the people not corporate entities. The right for a company to make a profit ends where American freedom begins. It is time to stop pandering to corporate lobbyists and to start representing the greater majority of the people who do not have the funding to lobby their elected officials. Our soldiers fight in the world to protect American freedom, as they fight and die for that, ask yourself if you are content to sign away the air waves in yet another handout to corporations? Please don’t do that. Please show us that you represent the people of this country and not the corporations.

In this day and age, open access to these services equals opportunity for those who would otherwise be excluded from participating in the new economy. I believe the economic health of the United States depends, not on a few corporate interests, but rather on open access to these services.

End the media monopolies today. Break up AT&T, Comcast, Sinclair, News Corp. and all the others. Break them apart. More competition for America’s hearts and minds is necessary for a functioning democracy.

Democracy depends on multiple sources of information, made available to inform citizens of news and commentary. The corporate world already owns too much of the commons of our country. The public airwaves are disappearing into privatization, to all of our detriment. Please do not let this go forward, further serving the moneyed corporate interests instead of the common good.

Freedom of Speech is Free Speech, not corporate controlled speech. The FCC has become the mouthpiece of the Corporations in regards to how many TV and Radio stations they can own. Much like rural electrification in the 1930s or broadcast television in the 1950s, we are now in a position technically to expand high-speed access to the internet to rural areas and to the inner city. Internet access is vital to the education and economic advancement of all and should not be limited by high profits for private monopolies. Cable television in my estimation has been a disaster to which I refuse to subscribe. The same mistake should not be made with the richer content available through the internet.

To Whom it May Concern,
In a world where more and more of our natural resources are being held by a select few, it would be innovative and in the general interest to allow the airwaves to reach the public. Let’s strive towards more public domain and general involvement
Thank-you.

LOOK - Reagan removed the fairness in speech laws requiring the press to present equal time for opposing views - and now we have 'news and information' companies with aggressive politically slanted policies.

Then Clinton reduced the cross-platform ownership restrictions on the press - and now 65% of all 'news and information' we see on TV, radio, newspaper and billboards is controlled by ONE COMPANY - who blacklists entertainers that don't conform to their slanted political policies!

LET'S STOP THE CRAP. THE CREATORS OF THIS COUNTRY INSISTED THAT A TRULY FREE PRESS WAS NECESSARY FOR A FREE NATION. WE ARE GOING BACKWARDS. THEY WOULD HAVE YOUR OUR HEADS FOR IT!

Keep the internet open access to ALL. The corporations are not bigger than the common man. There is a grass roots movement that will eventually shift the power back to where it belongs - the single individual, not the corporation. Shame on you if you let money dictate the future of our great nation.

You will have to answer to yourselves, to others, and to God -

DO THE RIGHT THING.

The privatization wave has gone far enough. Neocon ideas, like this one, may have helped the country in some areas. In this case – as in a few other glaring policy failures – the neocon ideology will harm almost every average individual in the U.S. The rich will like the privatization, but the poor, and our large but shrinking middle class, will pay. Democracy will suffer.
That is, of course, what the neocon ideology is all about.

Changes in FCC regulations allowing consolidation of media have already devastated local radio, including its ability to be a resource in times of disaster or crisis. The internet has increased and improved democracy by providing equal access to all. By keeping a level playing field, it's proved to be fertile ground for innovative businesses that never would have had a chance to develop if the internet were dominated and controlled by corporate gatekeepers. Keep the public airwaves public!

Private GREED must not replace the Public GOOD–Mandate whoever wins the Auction Cannot stifle Competition and or Innovation!!

It was Big Cable that refused to carry ATSC digital TV, even though there were no technical reasons to adopt an different, incompatible standard. Their actions set back the dissemination of digital TV by many years because the receiver manufacturers would have had to include tuners for both standards in their sets.

As an engineer, I contributed substantially to the HDTV testing in the early nineties and I know what I’m talking about. Don't give Big Cable another monopolistic handle on the market.

Even though I work for Verizon Wireless we cannot have a monopoly re emerge regarding public airwaves - it will destroy dissenting political views being available over the air

Don’t give Big Cable another monopolistic handle on the market.

Please don’t allow AT&T and Verizon monopolize our airwaves.
We need to maintain a level playing field in our entire economy to keep democracy viable. But it’s by far the most essential in the information and communication field. The Founding Fathers knew what they were doing when they included this in the very First Amendment to the Constitution. Please keep the internet open to free-market competition among all players. Thank you.

The Internet must be kept free of corporate control. Such control will eventually lead to advertising dollars as the measure of all things, and America will lose what has become one of the greatest venues for the exchange of ideas and for commerce. Please do not let private companies run monopolies on our public airwaves. If you look at the cable companies they have been able to already monopolize the industry and raise prices to insane prices that families cannot afford. The middle class has already suffered with the current administration through the support of "big business." It's time for someone to step up and support the middle class rights to survive on a middle class income. Right now people are being priced out of their ability to live in suburban neighborhoods. The sale of the airwaves to private companies will only do more harm and cause people to lose access to the only information resource that is currently prices reasonably.

Dont sell the airwaves to corporate gatekeepers. The people have lost too much control already.

Dont sell the airwaves to corporate gatekeepers. The people have lost too much control already.

The U.S. government must protect our airwaves for the average U.S. citizen from corporate takeover. The government should work for EVERY citizen and taxpayer. Help the endangered species—the American citizen!

Why can’t the FCC do its job instead of trying to turn over their responsibility to the private sector?

We need our airwaves to be owned by the public as they have been for decades. We the people of this country do not want any huge corporation to be in charge of our information, period!
The public air waves are just that, owned by the public. To sell them off to corporate conglomerates or make privately owned stations more difficult to be profitable is one of the great crimes our government has committed.

I really like the idea of cities being able to extend wireless coverage to all, at low or no cost. We are falling behind other countries in our access to high speed Internet at a time when lack of access to the Internet means that you are completely out of the loop with respect to access to information, job ads, etc. So, turning over the airwaves to a few corporations is bad for everyone, and it is especially bad for the “have-nots” of our society.

Too many of our information sources and almost all of our supposedly public airwaves are in the hands of a few corporate entities. In order to ensure that the public has open access to information, please set aside the broadcast spectrum that is being vacated by broadcast television for public use.

Public airways were always supposed to be PUBLIC—they need to remain so, providing the citizenry with real news, real options, and public debates to give people more information regarding elections, not the sound-bites of paid commercials. If the FCC gives away the airwaves to corporations, it will be one more slide down the slippery slope to the end of democracy, by creating an uninformed (even MORE uninformed!) populace...

It is time that the government "of the people, and for the people" began to act like it again! That's US, the common people, not the corporate CEOs and their minion of lobbyists.

Where is the competition of free enterprise. The large corporations want to have their cake and eat it too. They don't want competition, just profits without investment. At some point you the FCC and our government have to come to the realization that the people in this country need to be heard and that you can respond to their voice.

You gave away the TV airwaves, keep your hands off the internet!!!!!!!!!!!!!

No privatization of the web! Keep the internet free of fees for information.

Please leave some airwaves for non-corporate expression, space for the individual, for us, the public.

Ultimately, opening the airwaves will prove to enrich competition in the marketplace while providing the best possible product at the best possible price. Please do not allow this process to be stifled.

We're already seeing effects of "Corporate" America and it'll be our downfall. Mainstream news has gone corporate and feeds the news that brings in the highest profits to the American public. We need a balance. We need news that informs. We need to keep our airwaves public. Please consider what America stands for and keep it this way.

Don't do it. These are public airwaves, not for sale to commercial entities who will make us pay.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good, not corporate gain.

This is the land I live in, I want to trust our officials. Please make sure you protect our rights not those of the large corporation.
I depend on wireless technology.

Privatization of the public domain must stop.

The airwaves belong to the people and corporations must not be allowed to monopolize them.

The airwaves should be for the public good.

I'm tired of hearing and seeing the same propaganda and calls to “buy, buy, buy” on every station/channel. The public needs CHOICE!

Please don’t sign over access to the internet to major corporations.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Thank you.

Thank you.

The government must protect our airwaves and encourage innovation and competition in the wireless market. Protect the public good - ensure auction rules prohibit anti-competitive activities. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.

To give megamedia corporations more power to control access to public airways is not in the best interest of the american people. It is obvious that large, concentrated media organizations do not operate to serve the public but to enrich themselves, and influence the politicians who will further their greed. To further enhance megamedia’s ability to control what the public can see and hear is to further erode the public’s ability to have a voice in the governance of this country. Do not allow this to happen.

Putting our nation’s airwaves in the hands of a few corporations is nothing short of oligarchy, an enemy of democracy and of the public good. Already, our nation’s publishers are in the hands of few, with “literature” being stifled further by the marketing decisions of our American megabookstore duo: Borders Books and Barnes & Noble. Do NOT give in to this trend by stifling competition in the wireless Internet market!

I am one of the two million people in the world who study and use the Esperanto language, which has grown in popularity because of the Internet. That same Internet has also revolutionized radio in a way that major media players cannot even begin to copy or appropriate (I regularly listen to Radio Caroline online). My Internet choices are made by my own personal tastes, and I do not want AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, Time Warner, or Cablevision to dictate my tastes by decree.

Democracy requires public speech about issues. Corporations try to prevent or limit free speech.

E. Victor Mereski, Usn Ret E9
Savannah, GA 31406

The airwaves belong to the public, whose anti-competitive practices have resulted in the U.S. falling to 16th in the world in high-speed Internet rankings.

To restore America’s leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Paul Carlson

The public needs to be informed about ongoing information not thrown pointless ads or infomercials.

Albert

Allowing companies to effectively shut out competition by buying up bandwidth is not responsible public policy. The government policy should be “use it or lose it” for these licenses, or they shouldn’t be auctioned off at all, but simply issued on a first come first served basis.

The public airwaves must be used for the public good. It is th public who licenses the airwaves.

The airways need to be kept free.

Who the hell are YOU to sell OUR airwaves? What a pathetic and insensitive - yet expected disgust to Americans! DISGUST, SHAME and INSULT to YOU from U.S.!!!

Please keep airwaves publicly owned!!!

Public Airwaves should be for the public! Not for profit. We are behind EVERY industrialized nation for broadband access. That will not change while profits are the motive.

The petition expresses my feelings perfectly.
If we hope to maintain ourselves as a democratic society, we must not lose any more public airwaves. We should be restricting commercial access!

It would appear the public is going to have to fight the corporations at least annually, or the government will turn everything over to the corporations. It is certain that if each time a decision goes against the interests of the corporations, the decision is immediately up for reconsideration, then eventually the corporations will win out. This mechanism should be revised in favor of retaining public control.

Randy Genthe
Kingwood, TX 77339

It should be mandated that if any company should buy Internet air rights at auction and then fail to use them for the public good, a very large fine would be levied, so large as to deter such behavior. There should also be prison time mandated for chief officers of any company that should act in this way.

I absolutely object to auctioning these airwaves to corporations so that they can regulate prices. These are PUBLIC airwaves and they definitely should be used for the PUBLIC good. Thank-you, Kristina Bennett

Free speech is the bedrock of a real democracy. As a journalist and lawyer, I understand how important the first amendment is to making our country great and allowing it to survive. Giving our airwaves to commercial concerns is one step closer to making this county like the old Communist regimes where most of the mainline content is controlled and the masses are spoon fed their propaganda. How can you believe in any of your wildest dreams that this would be a good direction to take?

Quest “owns” the phone lines in my area—a government regulated monopoly. I can get DSN internet access only by subscribing to Quest service. Mediacom “owns” the cable in my area—a government regulated monopoly. I can get high speed cable internet access only by subscribing to Mediacom. I like my ISP, but I cannot get high-speed internet service through my ISP because Quest and Mediacom won’t permit it. The government sold out too much to big business—don’t make it worse.

The public airwaves should be available for use by the most possible people, and, to me, that means they should be available to more than just the big companies out to benefit themselves. Let's have high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast, freely available to all.

It is of utmost importance, for the strengthening of our democracy, that these airwaves be used not to simply further the commercial interests of corporations. They are the property of the American People. A strong democracy depends on having an informed public. These airwaves should be used in a manner to enhance the flow of information to the American people. And I am not referring to commercial information. Rather, information on the state of our communities, our country, and our world, which will help us make more informed decisions as citizens as we participate in our local and national governments through our vote.

In a democracy we need to have free expression on the airwaves. If we have corporations such as AT & T, Comcast, and Verizon sponsoring programs, this will influence our thinking in certain proscribed directions. Personally I listen to NPR for all my radio programming and would like to see this both retained and expanded, which might not be the case if corporations were in charge.

It’s sad enough that the FCC has relaxed regulations on radio allowing local oligopolies of radio in many markets. Please don’t follow one poor decision with another which simply helps corporates create yet more local monopolies. This is inefficient, in a purely economic sense, and incongruous with the mandate to regulate the airwaves.

I'm not 100% sure that wireless signals "beam-ing" all over the place and into everywhere is really such a wonderful thing as we dont know for sure about what effects it really may or may not have on people or or other living beings - (though I do utilize, and appreciate, wireless internet and cell phone technology) - BUT I can for 100% sure say, if were gonna be headed in that direction anyways, the Public Airwaves should DEFINATLEY NOT be owned, controlled, and monopolized by a few large corporations!! Absolutely NOT!

These airwaves, are, after all Public airwaves, are they not?
Then they need be left available for other public entites to utilize as well (similar to, in general form, that is, how radio waves and bandwidth are leased by many a varied radio station entity)

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market. We're urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access—as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

Public airwaves should remain just that....PUBLIC! I would like to believe that the government and its assigned agencies are still here to SERVE THE PEOPLE vs. serving corporate America (not to mention "following the money"!!). It is my sincere hope that the FCC has the courage to continue to serve their largest group of constituents, rather than allow money and power to make their decisions for them. Thank you.

The Founding Fathers believed that a free press and an informed public were the keys to a functioning democracy. Our corporate media is driven by profit not the search for truth and accountability and is considered the 76th best media in the world. Let that set in and don't give these people more control when what needs to happen is that they need to be smashed into about 60 companies that cannot share board members or own media across spectrum period. So you can only own one kind of media company: sattelite, a newspaper, advertising, t.v., radio station internet company period, can only own one such outlet in any city and cannot sit on the board of any other kind of media company, period. If you are in media you can't own and no one on your board can belong to any other kind of company's board period. That would nicely save our media.

How about giving the corporations a country of their own. This way they can own everything they please, thus leaving the airwaves, the air, the water, the ecology to the public to whom they belong. In addition, they can use all the pesticides, genetically modified produce, cancer producing hormones, etc. in food products and leave our country’s earth and food stuff as pure as it can be in an environment already almost irretrievably polluted by their greed, irresponsibility and hubris.

The selling of public property to private interests has been, in general, disastrous. I ask the FCC to not take a rash decision that cannot be revoked. Consider the consequences if this should not increase access to the internet and economic progress & competition. There is no way back.

Countries in the EU as well as Canada do much better at providing broad access to broadband services, and the infrastructure is public property. My European friends are always surprised to see how limited our cell phone & internet services are compared to theirs.

Communication access is critical to education, community organization, economic progress and democracy. It is therefore important to create the environment and make available to the most people the opportunity to communicate. This can only be done when the government, made of representatives elected by the voting public, keeps access to communication technology available to the public. If such access is parsed out to a select, profit motivated few then we will explicitly limit opportunity to a smaller select group.

I am currently using Time-Warner for my internet provider & digital home phone service, but just learned that they were bought out by Comcast. Comcast will not let us keep our Roadrunner addresses, which I had on my business cards, so now I will be out that expense, as well as the inconvenience of contacting all the companies that have that address & will have to get a new business address. If Comcast bought out Roadrunner in the Houston area, why can't we keep our addresses? I don't think Comcast cares anything about their customers, & I didn't choose to be their customer, they 'acquired' me. I don't think we'll have a long relationship.

airwaves should not be owned by anyone, let alone big businesses who have already shown their antipathy toward the common good/need. Having big companies control the now-public airwaves is another step to lowering the competitiveness of the American people.

Please don’t sell the public down the river. You are beholden to serve all, not a few powerful companies.

Please do not give away our public airwaves to corporate giants. Please keep them open for innovation.

We need to reinstate strict limits on how many media outlets can be owned by one person or corporation.
If the U.S. is to be a free country (Which I question these days!), our airwaves MUST be free and for the good of the public rather than corporations … and the public MUST get ALL the news available and NOT censored by those who want us to hear what THEY think we SHOULD hear!!!

Don’t sell of our country to foreign interests! You know well that all the major corporations are majority owned by non-americans, and auctioning off our airwaves amounts in my view to an act of treason! STOP! The public spectrum is for the common good of all of us, and not the private benefit of foreign interests.

I demand that these airwaves only be made available for cities, counties and states to use for the public benefit as part of our greater entitlement as citizens.

Thank you!

You know that the future of democracy depends on the quality of information available to the public. That quality depends on free market competition, and must be protected from monopolizing information media by big corporations with deep pockets. Therefore the right to put information into cyberspace must be free to all comers—so that the urge to gain information is not limited by a handful or a hundred organized and highly funded buyers of "airway rights." The government "shall not infringe on freedom of the press or assembly." The cost of publication & distribution of print, radio & video media limits what we can obtain. YOU KNOW WHAT IS THE RIGHT THING TO DO. FORGET WHO APPOINTED YOU AND PROTECT OUR DEMOCRACY FROM BEING HIJACKED AGAIN.

Just today I used the Internet to research Social Security benefits for my sister, who is ill with cancer. The U.S. government has devoted a great deal of thought and no doubt money to developing a Web site that provides a very good, informative, accessible way for citizens to access critical government services. Why should essential benefits such as this one be restricted to people who can pay what are already high costs to perform such tasks as file their taxes, receive government information, and conduct business in our high-tech age?

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast, who will use them for private gain instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.1

In June, the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) will make a major decision: Use the public airwaves for the public good, or turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution.

Please save public airways for the public good.

Once upon a time, airwaves were a public trust. They might be used for public good—for example, if we demanded that tv and radio stations air political debates instead of the latest reality show or talk-trash venue, we might eliminate political advertising and get money out of politics. Stop the wholesale slaughter of free speech. Keep what's public public.

Free and open public access to web technology is needed helps to assure a stream of economic prosperity. DO NOT ALLOW A TAKEOVER BY A FEW PLAYERS. THE AIRWAVES ARE FOR ALL THE PUBLIC.

Public resources, like our airwaves, should be used for the public good. As steward for public resources, the government should protect the "shareholders," i.e. the public, and their resources.

I say "AMEN" to the statement above.

Do not allow this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to pass into a history as a great mistake: the future development and evolution of public media is too vital a thing —particularly at this delicate point in time, where traditional media is being reshaped by the digital revolution— to allow it to become just another corporate franchise. Dear FCC,
I think it is imperative that you set aside a significant part of the spectrum for open and nondiscriminatory internet access. The US has now fallen to 16th in the world in high-speed Internet rankings, with few choices and some of the highest prices for the slowest speeds in the world. The continual lobbying to stifle innovations such as Internet phone service and to destroy Net Neutrality must be stopped! I demand a better Internet for everyone and to end the stranglehold these companies have on my World Wide Web!!

There was no government control in Concord during the Revolutionary War for the 'one if by land, two if by sea' candle powered communication. Why should 231 years later, the government allow corporations to attempt to control any form of communication? What would the founding fathers say about this?? Freedom of speech is what characterizes our country, not corporate greed. Remember: "For the People"

The financial gap between the haves and the have-nots grows wider every day. Keeping the airwaves open for everyone is paramount; it allows people to stay abreast of the news, children to do homework or learn about the world in real time, and sometimes it provides inspiration when we need it. Do not take this away. It should be available to all, and it won’t be if the communications giants continue to control what we do and drive the price up while we do it. Do it for the next generation. Do it to raise their awareness.

The FCC has a stated policy of promoting internet and broadband communications access to ALL. Allowing the incumbents to snatch up the public airwaves would severely undermine this policy. The incumbent wireless providers already have more than enough spectrum to provide their services (existing and planned) and are not even using all of the spectrum they currently own. Thus, they certainly do not need more, and allowing them to reserve it to themselves will slow innovation and prohibit newcomers from accessing this market. The public is in desperate need of competition in this arena and this is reflected by the facts that most areas can no longer access free public TV; cable prices continue to rise largely because many areas are only served by one provider and demand continues to grow as the availability of free TV disappears. This is same scenario is already happening with respect to internet access. Pricing and geographic availability of internet access will become more problematic if the same few companies are the only ones able to offer internet service. The large number of communities throughout the US that still lack internet access is unacceptable and a result of the current small number of companies controlling the infrastructure (e.g. spectrum) needed to offer service. Citizens’ access to the vast information the internet holds is critical to the future of this country. If we allow a small group of companies to control all information access, the result will be devastating to the US economy, technological development and competitiveness with other nations.

Sincerely,
Nicole Mason, Esq.

Jon Miller

As a research scientist who collaborates with other scientists widely and frequently, via the internet. The wide availability of internet access has transformed my field and advanced science (completely unrelated to communication technology) dramatically. The bandwidth in question is a public good and should be handled in the manner that will broadly benefit the largest possible population. Please don’t just auction it off to the highest corporate bidder.

What do we want America to be? Do we no longer care about being the most innovative country with the most patents, and being the most democratic nation when it comes to the offering of opportunity. I am an American working for an NGO in Brazil where I can see first hand how the control of markets in the hands of the few stifle development, where price gouging keeps technologies that promote education and development in the hands of a few. Are equity and parity not something that we hold dear? Has our government fallen victim to a corporate raid brought on by lobbyists and driven by the need to realize ever greater quarterly results? Where will it end, this frenzy to appease the soulless, heartless, conscienceless beast that is corporate America (and guess what people-they are not America any longer-they can go wherever they want). Why are we beholden to the likes of AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast? We can grab a fast buck in the race to the bottom-or we can inspire and make a meaningful contribution to society, culture and humanity. Just think about it-there are countries out there that are offering wireless technologies to their citizens for free and these are the countries of tomorrow-how do we compete if we give away the farm?

I urge you to vote with the knowledge in your head and in your heart that the ‘Public Airwaves are for the Public Good’.

I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast-who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service–they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

I desire innovation and accessibility. However, as a librarian, I have also experienced the disadvantage of new technology that is not standardized, or changes that occur too fast just to sell a product. Also, the poor and those who live in rural areas are negatively effected by too many changes in communication devices and by the expense. Big business; big prophets have to be balanced with responsible products that benefit the most people.

Our newly-available airwaves present an amazing opportunity to bring the United States up to the standard of other countries with regard to high-speed internet access. This opportunity must be open to all consumers and all providers - limiting it in any way will keep the USA at 16th or lower in the world, and I find that unacceptable.

Cina Barker
Nashua, NH 03062

Public airwaves must not be sold to private companies. For profit corporations will focus on just that – making money, limiting competition, and restricting the variety of services available on the wireless internet market. Keep the internet free!!!!

Elizabeth Love
Austin, TX 78745

PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE expand the hand off the rights to corporate interests who would use it to stifle innovation and raise our prices. Additionally, the Internet is the last vestige of democracy left in our country. Should these rights be handed over to the large telecom companies for financial gain, they also in due time will control the content. We would be in deep trouble should that happen.

You've already given the private market most of the airwaves, and removed competition from many markets. Air waves belong to everyone, they are NOT a commodity to be sold to the highest bidder, or given away to be used for profit. The public is fed up with acts of favor to corporations. The air waves belong to everyone.

The airways, like significant waterways in this nation, must be protected and maintained ONLY for public management and control. We have witnessed the disaster of having private management of prisons or of public schools. Please do not allow private corporations to dominate the airways also!!! Jim Seeber,

I BEG YOU TO IMPROVE THE WAYS OUR AIRWAVES ARE USED. LIKE THOUSANDS OF OTHERS LIVING IN RURAL AREAS, I HAVE NO HIGH SPEED INTERNET ACCESS BECAUSE THE CABLE COMPANY WILL CHARGE US $8000 FOR THE WIRING, I AM TOO FAR FROM THE VERIZON ACCESS POINT, AND THE 'DISH' COMPANY SERVICE IS LOUSY. You have an obligation to ensure that the public airwaves are managed for the public good. You must ensure that the ambitions of well-heeled and well-connected corporations do not interfere with the public's access. Already, this country is falling behind the rest of the world in accessibility. We have unfortunately come to a place where we, the public, cannot trust corporations and the market to act in the public interest – that is your job.

Radio broadcasting, for the most part, has become a swamp - a roiling, murky, stinky mess, appealing to the lowest common denominator. How will offering control to mega-corporations (who only consider "the bottom line") bring the standards up? What we need is more local control and intelligent, caring broadcasters.

We live in a semi-rural area where the only options we have for Internet are Satellite (terrible latency and slow connection) or extremely slow dial-up. The phone companies have no interest to install any high-speed access. Opening up new airwaves to new potential companies (not the current monopolistic phone/internet carriers) will be of great value to the majority of Internet users and open up many new avenues for communication and business.

One of the last few frontiers that are still open to the average citizen is the airwaves. With the advent of services like MySpace; YouTube; and online blogs, to name a few, the everyday citizen can voice their opinion and be heard by fellow citizens. The virtual kidnap of communication airwaves by the major communication corporations sets a major obstacle to those freedoms.

I don’t support either the sale of additional frequencies to the corporate telcos nor do I support the roll out of free wireless internet across the landscape. The FCC should cease from further release of the public airwaves until such time that the health and environmental implications of the already existing wireless transmissions can be established. It is incumbent on the FCC and the EPA to do the necessary science establishing once and for all the safety of human populations and the environment.

The federal government must not turn over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast who will use them for private gain instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies are fighting to eliminate competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

The public airwaves must be used for the public good rather than turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution.

“The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.”

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution—bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They’ve spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks. I urge the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.

They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

The opportunity to revolutionize the Internet and wireless world is at our fingertips. The only question is whether the FCC will embrace it.

It's time to break up the monopolies. Corporate interests run counter to the interest of the public.

The public airwaves are just that PUBLIC...for us all not the corporations. You as an FCC board have tried numerous schemes to try and turn them over to the big money Fat Cats without regard to the wishes of the public. You ought to be ashamed. Have you no moral or ethical thoughts to any one or anything other then your own private gain? (Michael Copps you are exempt from these remarks if the board were made up of more members like you the public could rest a bit easier. I'm sure history will smile upon you and your heroic efforts to keep the airwaves free)

The things I value most about the Internet are not for sale! I've become an online shopper because I'm an online reader/researcher/writer/community builder. The Internet is a space for information first – a space that lessens rather than increases the economic divide in our society. I don't want Verizon (or similar companies) making decisions about what I can and cannot see or post on the Internet. They don't have my interests in mind!

Public airwaves provide what is essentially the only outlet for thousands of independent music artists whose music falls outside the "mainstream" commercial realm. These artists depend on reaching their audiences through public airwaves and their economic lives depend on them.

Please don’t let AT&T takeover the internet—they have already taken over the local bells and have turned into a superhuge monopoly.
"all around the world" is AT&T’s radio and TV jingle and I hear it over and over and over again. I don’t care how much money they pay you or your relatives, your relative’s relatives to influence the FCC to vote in AT&T’s favor. By giving AT&T the power to control the internet, you are creating a bigger monopolistic monster.

Don’t forget that AT&T has given carte blanche access to the NSA and other private intell such as the "secret room" in AT&T’s SF office without search warrants.

Please reconsider your decision to turn over the internet to AT&T, it is simply bad for business. thank you

Time for “public” to be put back into government “by the people”? The newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

Yike, why does this administration seem totally focused on turning over the public's assets to private firms. That is not the direction I favor.

It is very sad to have arrived at a place of such blatant abuse and a place of such blatant transparency - and yet the Peoples' Representatives choose to do nothing to ensure the fundamental checks and balances that constitute the backbone of our attempt at democracy. And we're losing ground - the people are sated, if not bloated, the government serves its self congratulatory masters, and the focus is so utterly short sighted and self serving that it staggers the imagination. Soon - very soon - it will become intolerable and this country will experience something of a change - a very big change indeed - from within. So wake up all you reporters who are asleep at the wheel swallowing only what you are fed. Your feckless, slothful laziness will land you squarely in the camp of those who feed you. Sadly you have foregone your responsibility and the whirlpool beckons.

Please keep this spectrum of public airwaves public. License some of them to responsible operators, just as you do with the rest of the spectrum. But leave enough to make the internet instantly accessible to all, and provide greater access and interaction to all. It could mean a great deal to democracy, for example, if qualified individuals for office could address the public on the internet with out regard for how many millions it would cost. That is just one good reason to consider this point...

I am against this overuse and monopolization of public airwaves by big corporations. What is available should be in the public domain as much as possible, and not be sold to the highest bidder. The public should have at least the majority of use so that no corporation—or collection of them—can dictate use, stifle innovation, or competition.

FCC policy makers and enforcers must know innovation is squelched when big media giants shut out small local operators. In Maryland large utilities have turned into mafia operations with perverse tentacles in state gov regulators. If FCC continues with fleeceing the public through their favored giants, the public may turn on them. You are inviting trouble if not jail time for yourselves. The tables will turn on you. Hi,
I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.
These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.
You can sign the petition I signed here—urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

I definitely urge the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. Please do not break with the long FCC tradition and the spirit of the US communications laws, including the First Amendment: public airwaves should be available for public use, and thus should not be allowed to be purchased in bulk by large corporations. Moreover, the FCC should enforce a strict "use-it-or-lose-it" policy with respect to these airwaves; combining licensing for large blocks of airwaves is not an efficient way to ensure that all airwaves are available for use on the public market. There is a real danger of large corporations "squatting" on broadcasting rights to prevent competition from smaller, more nimble potential high-speed internet provider competitors.

We need greater competition in the media..printed and on air

Please, let humanity and divinity control this one.

What is at stake is democracy. The knowledge and information gap between the haves and have nots is ever-widening. Public access ensures the free flow of information and the right of free speech. Thank you.

Public airwaves are a public good. This is well-established in law. The only thing worse than a regulated monopoly is a deregulated situation that leads to monopoly in practice while loudly proclaiming that it supports competition and innovation. That's the worst of both worlds and I urge you to have nothing to do with creating it. RUN the other way–keep these frequencies open for the public good.

Media should serve the public good. A free society is less free when private corporations control the flow of information. It is the responsibility of the FCC to safeguard a citizen's access to media.

Public Airwaves are for the Public Good!
As a Professor I consider it my responsibility to provide information freely to everyone. Public access to the airwaves is essential for me to do this. It is critical that our government not give away or sell these rights.

These large telecom/internet/broadband companies, while speaking a misleading market-friendly line, engage in anti-market-friendly practices harmful to individual consumers. Case in point, my cable bill from Comcast. Not long ago, they arbitrarily raised my monthly fee for service. When I asked why, Comcast’s representative explained the increase was to pay for upgraded services that others in my neighborhood were subscribed to. I answered that I did not subscribe to those premium services and did not wish to. The response was a politely phrased "too bad" (although not in those exact words). These companies care only about advantage, monopoly advantage when they can get it, and nothing for the marketplace of ideas, technological, cultural, political or otherwise. They may claim that consumers who use the new bandwidth will pay for it, but that will NOT be the case. Too much has been handed to these corporations already.

I rely on internet access for my work and personal life. It's important that such access remain affordable, reliable, and quick. Making more bandwidth available for internet services would do just that.

Bandwidth is reasonably considered a natural resource. Please don't turn it into a commodity to be sold to the highest bidder.

In the 70's we saw solar technology bought and stifled by petrochemical interests in the name of protecting their financial interests. Had such companies been civic-minded enough, they could've had profit as well as aiming us in a more independent direction for our energy needs. Instead, we're dealing with a crippling dependence on foreign oil, and a disastrous environmental situation.

Please don't let our public airwaves go the way of solar technology in the 70's. Protect them as the public resource they are.

These are our airwaves and I don't want them auctioned off to companies that ultimately care about nothing but their profit margins - unless the rules governing their use are highly circumscribed so as to protect and promote the public interest.

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

Let the people keep their airwaves for the common good.

I live in Harlem, where a majority of households cannot afford private Internet access—it is crucial that as the Internet becomes more important for socio-economic advancement that we keep the options open for everyone to benefit, and allow innovations and alternative entrepreneurs to access this vital public terrain. The Internet is more than just entertainment, more than just media—it's crucial that we keep it from monopolization and maintain its democratic status!

Enough! Enough! If you continue to give the airwaves to big business the internet will put you out of a job.

The public airwaves must be kept public and not shifted into the domain of monied for-profit corporations!

Democratic media is essential to democratic society. Giving already bloated media corporations more control over the airwaves would be a drastic step in the wrong direction. Our media needs greater diversity, less service to power and more concern for the public interest. The airwaves are a public trust - please do not sell them, and us, out.

The airwaves belong to us - the American people - and should not become an economic arm of corporations. Mega-companies are concerned about the bottom line and creating more wealth for themselves - not about the good of the people of this country. Allowing companies to control airwaves will be the death knell of democracy. (A good example: the corporate control of newspapers now in the hands of a few who can - and do - use it to slant the news. Mega corporations must NOT be allowed to control this medium as well.

To me, getting wireless, leading to a borderless world is all Hooking Up

By Tim Wu

Forbes Magazine, Published May 18, 2007

A cartel of mobile phone companies controls innovation on our wireless networks. Its time for government to step in.

Lets say youre an entrepreneur who has an idea to build a wireless fob that finds your keys even if you left them in Virginia or Barcelona. Or say you want to design a refrigerator that transmits a signal to Safeway, instructing it to deliver a gallon of milk every time youre running low. To enter the market you will have to turn to one of the four mobile phone carriers that today exercise an oligopoly over wireless device communications: Verizon Wireless, AT&T, Sprint and T-Mobile.

Good luck. Get ready for an endless set of hurdles, including lengthy trials, revenue sharing and demands to cripple or modify features, without any guarantee of final approval. All that before your fob or fridge can transmit a tiny signal. In practice, many innovative devices never reach the market. The Big Four tend to approve only established partners whose devices fit their business plans, which is why we have yet to see all those wireless devices that were supposed to be in our future.

The firms already control what phones or devices reach Americans; 95% of cell phones are sold by the wireless carriers themselves. They strictly control phone design, blocking features that might threaten their revenue, like timers that keep track of how many minutes youve used each month. The carriers have also crippled or blocked alternative means of connecting wirelessly, like Bluetooth and Wi-Fi, because they want you to burn up minutes on their networks and charge extra fees.

The good news is that the federal government will soon have a chance to change all that and throw open Americas airwaves to innovation and entrepreneurship. It will come in the form of an auction, within the next year, of the few remaining pieces of a precious national resource licenses to the nations wireless spectrum. This particular chunk of spectrum is becoming available because TV stations must stop using it to broadcast old-fashioned analog television by February 2009.

Thats why this years auction is so important. The

Our country is no longer the most advanced technologically speaking. By keeping the airwaves public we increase the number of innovations available by having more access to more people. By closing the access to financially less advantaged or in the interest of promoting profit to certain corporations, we handicap our democracy as well as our dwindling competitive edge in the rapidly developing global high tech fields.

The public airwaves need to remain public. Corporate efforts to purchase public airwaves to prevent the public from receiving the benefit of lower cost services, particularly when these services are largely educational in nature and the lower cost would make currently unavailable educational resources such as the internet available to low income families is unethical and should be illegal, and as a lawyer I suspect that it probably already is. For a federal agency to condone and facilitate such corporate conduct is corruption, pure and simple. Don’t expect that this will go unnoticed.

I am a medical student and use the internet for many aspects of my education, including research and accessing class notes and other administrative documents. My limited budget as a student would be further stretched if I had to pay even more for my internet access. In addition, the convenience of being able to easily and cheaply access the internet anywhere in the city is irreplaceable in terms of my ability to be efficient in my studies.

Be fair about who owns the air. The big corporations already own 99% of all media outlets; please don't give them more.

Keep the internet free and bound to the public good!

Innovation and competition in the wireless market are one of many issues that will sustain on our leadership in the world of tomorrow. Do not turn over control of the public airwaves to the likes of ATT, Verizon and Comcast.

The airways are owned by the public for the benefit of the public good. Please keep it that way by not giving a monopoly to just a few corporations.
I strongly support protecting the airwaves - for the public good. The FCC do not have the right to grant ownership of the airwaves.

<td>What if America actually stood for doing what is right for the public's interest? That would be amazing! It used to be what our country stood for. But in recent decades, corporate feudalism has taken hold to control every aspect of our lives, from the air we breathe and the water we drink, to who is elected to public office, to the information we have access to. This insanity must end. We have a right to a free and open internet - free from corporate greed, free from corporate and government intrusion, free to everyone. The Federal Communications Commission was set-up to protect the Public - so stop making decisions that cost the public money and take away the sources of information that we need to operate in the 21st century. FCC, be a champion instead of a mouthpiece. Who stands for the public anymore? No one! That is, no one,..but perhaps our government. We urge you to (and will work to ensure that you) do the right thing.

Lynn B. Ditullio
West Whately, MA 01039

In so many ways, the current FCC regulations do not serve the public good nearly as well as they might. Please do not allow the airwaves to be monopolized or primarily controlled by such a limited menu of interests. Our democracy is at stake. Please do your part to keep communication open and available to the earnest, small voices.

Pam Mcdonald

During the Reagan era he pretty much destroyed all the laws against monopolies. Now we are faced with huge corporations monopolizing our public airwaves. Not for the common good. Oh, no! I work for a major company that owns 149 radio stations, and a major amount of tv stations around the country. It is said that the airways are owned by the American public. The days are long gone when individual owners served their local communities. If you keep letting the corporations buy up all the little stations, community information, and representation will be lost forever.

I teach online classes for a couple of universities. Having access to the internet is vitally important to my students and to myself for research and development of classes. I would hate to see it become controlled by big business. I also listen to a lot of web radio like Hay House and others. I like being able to access these sites without hindrance from big business. Please protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

We need competition and a variety of options in the internet market. The large companies have sufficient access to the public airways. Let them compete fairly. Consumers deserve the chance to choose the services that are best for them.

Public television has always been extremely important to me for its variety of educational and local-interest programming, which is why I believe that we must maintain public internet-airwave space to allow for such manifestations of local interest and concern. It is crucial that local communities be able to express themselves to themselves.

Let's not let the radio waves suffer the same fate as electricity in CA during Enron.

I strongly support for the concept of the separation of content and the COMMON CARRIER. Yes, I understand that the AT&Ts and Verizon business opportunities will be hurt. (I am an owner of AT&T stock) Too bad, after my own freedom and interests, they (corporations) come in a distant second.

So we are going back to MA Bell owning everything. NO Monopolies unless it is on the game board from Parker Bros.

I urge you to keep the internet open and available to everyone.

Not only are the public airways for the public good but they are the property of the public. We should be on the board that decides who gets to buy. Why is it that Fox, of which there are so many channels, has been allowed to bombard the airwaves with their political slant. It is accepted as the sounding board of the White House. The people who are hired to broadcast probably are compatible with the views of the conservative corporation voices.

Public airwaves belong to the public. No matter an individual's economic or social standing, it is imperative that s/he be granted access to the "information highway." We need to insure that information is not available only to those who can afford it. Additionally, it is imperative that there be more than two or three sources of information - competition and innovation rarely come with monopolization.

for once, do not worry about your political power of the "realistic" chances of your resisting the lemming cry. For once, do what you know is right for ALL Americans.
If you happen to be elected, for once, be responsible to your constituency, not to your campaign financiers. If you are appointed, for once prove yourself worth the trust to be an individual capable of forethought and prudent decision.
For once, vote your conscience!

Please do not sell off scarce public airspace to private companies! Take the time to reconsider! The internet was a huge revolution, but it emerged in the public sector, using resources that were not controlled by large corporations. Similarly, the FCC should think very carefully before it allows price discrimination over internet packets. "Net neutrality" is a very important principle. There may be a case for “congestion pricing” but pricing different packets based on a label of who the parties are who are exchanging the packets is a dangerous precedent that could endanger small companies like the one I founded that earn their lifeblood on an open Internet.

The government does not need to be about helping rich companies become richer.

Public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

Public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

The big word here is "public". We are the public. Corporations are their own "public". The airwaves should be for all of us, available to all of us, at no charge.

Keep the public airwaves public! Too much privatization!
There is too much consolidation of big media—don't give away the rest of our public airwaves.

Please consider the United States as the nation it was meant to be and has fought so hard to become - by and for the people. Sounds simplistic and naive, but in reality, it IS possible to curtail the insatiable corporate greed which has become almost a rogue, self serving force feeding off the citizens of our great nation. If there is any decency left, you will NOT allow the airwaves and communication access of our populace to be slaves to yet another financial master, as though we haven’t enough with the usury now legalized by banking and credit companies amongst so many others. If most Americans could see the actual reality of the corporatization of America, they’d beg for tax increases instead of paying for the private profits of CEO’s - because we are held hostage to paying private profits of others for no services without much choice. No taxation could equal the cost we pay to individual profit centers, and no benefits for communities.

Keep in mind, at some point, this trend will end very very badly for our nation, from the richest to the poorest. Nature teaches us that successful parasites never kill off their host, but choose a symbiosis. Placing our hardworking citizens under one more yoke of financial strain to pay for what should be a community enhancing communication technology is foolish and short sighted at best, or downright despicable if done without a thought about what direction this country is headed if this trend continues.

Thank you for your time to read a plea for reason and debate over such an important decision.

I do not trust the private companies to provide us reasonable priced services without some government controls. For instance, a regulated natural gas company provides natural gas to my house at about 1/2 the cost of cable TV. The cable TV should be much less expensive than the natural gas due to the higher cost of maintaining the gas lines and producing the natural gas. It is natural to expect Comcast to charge as high of price that they can get-I do not blame them for maximizing their profit. However, it is the governments responsibility to regulate a scarce resource like the public airwaves.

The availability of public airwaves have declined in recent years and this has also begun falling over into the area of the internet and we need to stop it in its tracks. For the internet to most useful and powerful, it must be free from the constraints of privatization.

Our family owned a small AM-FM radio station. It is important to assure that available frequencies are available to all citizens, not just to the corporate giants.

Our founders knew that a democracy will be possible only if there is a TRULY FREE press/communications. Please do not allow any corporation too much control.
The airwaves should be for the public good.

Save the Air waves for the public good. Don’t forget us little people.

The public airwaves are not something to be given away to political contributors. Small businesses should be at the head of the line for these new frequencies. In particular, there should be rules preventing anyone from buying up frequencies and preventing others from using them for the public good.

I am already displeased by the amount of media consolidation going on. There should be more voices heard on our airwaves - from more providers. Allowing big corporations to buy up and sit on the new internet frequencies is bad for everyone else.

It flies in the face of reason and the common good to allow corporations to put a stranglehold on free communication. I am already hostage to Comcast as there is no alternative to them in my area if I want high speed internet. I hate having to deal with a monopoly that I can’t even threaten to leave. The uncaring employees (probably poorly paid with no benefits, so I don’t understand their apparent loyalty) are mostly rude and unhelpful. We need freedom FROM corporations running every aspect of our lives.

This is outrageous. Who still thinks privatization of anything works? Where have you people been for the last decade? Privatization has been a miserable failure and cost Americans billions of dollars with sub standard service. The long arm of money makers has to be provoking the idea of turning airwaves over the more corporate greed. Please use your head and DO NOT ALLOW private companies to take over the public airwaves.

Your purpose is to decide what is best for the public good. This is a huge opportunity for the FCC to make history by making one of the most farsighted decisions possible in assigning this new airspace for general public rather than letting it be controlled by self serving, public fleecing corporate interests.

To: Federal Communications Commission: You have the money to buy the airways, but you do not have the right to buy our freedom of the airways, you have taken our moneys by crook and lies. We know it and we can not stop you but we will in the end, for good will win in the end. So do not do this let our freedom alone you have money and power, so let us little people have our freedom of the airways, we need it. Bill Davidson

Privilization of what should belong to the people is a treasonous crime.

The country should be wireless. It is a way to spread good and bad news, warnings, celebrations, etc. It is a way to bring wider communities together, and unite extended families, and it should not be the province of only those who can afford it.

please make sure air waves are used for the public good

Radio in this country sucks! Only a few companies own almost all the local stations and everything nowdaws is piped in from somewhere else. There aren't even that many real DJs anymore. Local music or alternative labels are rarely played. And this is the situation NOW. How could you possibly think about letting this ogopolistic control of large companies go any farther?!? <td>The airwaves belong to the public and the public never has been fully served by media companies. Why should they get access and then charge candidates high fees for campaign ads? Why should they sell back to the govt. what they lease at low prices? All candidates should have an equally large amount of free airtime on TV and radio whether debating or not. What is not clear about the word “public”. If an airway is owned by a commercial establishment, by definition, it is not “public.” Keep the public airways public as any civilized country does.

It is the FCC’s duty to protect a vital national resource and foster its development so that technology continues to advance for the public’s use and enjoyment. By conferring special rights to a limited group of corporations, whose duties are to their shareholders and not the public at large, the FCC is not doing its job. Public airwaves must be open to competition, which will bring the best services – and which are economically competitive.

Air is public domain and should never be controlled by private interest. If "air waves" can be utilized for private and public interest, 85% of the optimal usable space should be used for the public good by the public. The FCC is giving our communicatio channels to very small private interest groups, and this is a calamity.

Competition makes for a FREE economy. Corporation ownership stifles innovation. Recent history bears that out. Computer operating systems became "layered" rather than innovative since Microsoft took over the market. Alternative fuels and designs for engines to run them sit on shelves – and change is coming only because the so called "big 3" are faced with REAL competition. Keep the airwaves and internet open to LOTS of competition. Do not "sell" it to a few corporations.

No more PUBLIC PROPERTY give aways to BIG BUSINESS.

It is scandalous that the FCC would even attempt this corporate giveaway. For once, can we just keep the public good as our top priority in this country!

Please ... keep something for the people. Big business has enough already.

Companies like AT & T, who are already way too big and too powerful, should not be allowed to block the general public and small business people like me from fast and dependable access to the internet. Controls need to be put into place to dampen their greed, as they seem unable to do so themselves. Please do not make policy and law that serves the interests of big business only while cutting out the little guy.

The air waves, like the air, belong to the people.

Let’s not have another program which empowers a small, powerful group of corporations which in one way or another is committed to control communications. Do NOT allow the airwaves to be given to the major corporations who are interested in controlling them.

As a student, affordable access to the internet is incredibly important. Particulary for those of us who struggle to meet the financial burdens of gaining a higher education, keeping internet as open and affordable as possible - and making it even more accessible than it is today - is crucial for leveling the playing field of education in this country. I encourage you to ensure that the public airways are used for the public good and NOT for competition-stifling profit.

Discourse among the public is vital to a democracy. Please resolve to protect it.

The public airwaves are supposed to be public! Since corporations are a "legal fiction,” accountable only to their shareholders, ownership (as opposed to licensing) of RF bandwidth by an entity that is primarily accountable to its "bottom line" is, in my view, a direct assault on the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution. Since corporations determine the fees and conditions through which they offer products and services, it follows that a "legal fiction" will be granted exclusive control over the means by which our countries citizenry freely communicates. SPEECH THAT MUST BE PURCHASED THROUGH A FICTITIOUS ENTITY THAT SETS TERMS AND CONDITIONS ISN’T FREE! Adopting the view that what’s good or expedient for business is good for our economy – hence in the best interests of our citizenry is a dangerous conflation between a system of government (a republican democracy) and an economic system (Capitalism). Allowing this to happen is not only dangerous, it’s tantamount to treason. Aside from this, if there’s nothing public to regulate, what’s the point of the FCC? For these reasons, I respectfully request that you reject any measures that cede ownership of arguably our most important public asset to any individual or organization.

Respectfully yours,

Our communication system is one of the most important areas that must remain to serve the citizens. We have too much of the public airwaves given over to about 8 Corporations and they decide what we should hear. We do not have enough competition in the market place. We get plenty of infomation concerning certain TV shows "American Idol” I hear a lot about that and I don’t watch it. When it comes to real news well somehow that is missing. I consider it to be in the public good that stations air the candidates so we can make an intelligent decision. And they couldn’t be a charge to the candidates..it is in the interest of the public good. I urge that our airwaves be protected from the corporate gate keepers who stifle innovation and competition in the wireless internet market

It seems to me that the government must stop being run by private enterprise and start being for the public good and welfare of the people which it represents. Looking back historically it seems to be the only way for a country to survive in the long run- a view which seems to be out of favor; We are only about short term policies these days and this is not sustainable! Innovation is one of the corner stones of what has made the USA a great country. Open access to the internet promotes innovation and innovative thinking in all sectors of our society and everything possible should be done to protect public access to the internet, which is in the public domain. Innovation has always threatened the status quo. I believe that rather than capturing the public airwaves, established companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast should serve the public interest and secure their market share by being innovative in their support of public access and use of internet technologies.– Keep the public airwaves in the public domain.

This is an unusual and irreplaceable opportunity to harness wireless technology to drive the economy at large. Licensing the airwaves to telecoms companies will produce a one-off profit but will not benefit the economy in the long run.

I am fortunate enough to be able to afford broadband internet service, there are millions of others who could benefit from this service but have to make some choices that necessarily do not include such a capability. In such an internet-savvy world, they and their offspring need this access as much as I do. Please keep these airwaves to help them help themselves. These companies are rich enough. How about giving something back to the people!

You can’t take what is public ownership. The airwaves are a limited resource. Let’s not squander them on corporation self-interest. The public would be much better served for the public good - such as enhanced wi-fi or other public use.

Please consider the "public good" above the almighty dollar.

The airwaves should be free! Stop selling our rights!

The middle class is getting squeezed every which way. Give us a breather somewhere please!

America should belong to the people, not the corporations.

Making the airwaves free to public use is the future of america. Why let the conglomerates control yet another faction of our society. give the power back to the people and make it more accessible for the poor- so they at last can be equal in some sense to the wealthy in some sense. Look where we have come in the world of cell-phones!!!!!

The public air must be used for the benefit of citizens. The changes freeing-up these airwaves are proving to be an expensive problem for lower income people any way. The optimum access for the general public will in the long run generate more money and success for our economy and our society than segregating these airwaves to a ghetto of a few commercial operations that will have a monopolistic hold on a large portion of our public airwaves excluding all except those who are willing or capable of paying for the privilege of what is supposed to be a public resource.

I strongly disagree with selling FCC airwaves to the private sector. Keeping airwaves in the public sector will allow Americans to afford and choose their telecommunications. The history of airwaves in the public interest is not a distinguished one, the most God-awful examples being the quality of programming (which can be blamed on public preference) and allowing private companies to charge for political ads (which cannot). There is no public interest higher than maintaining our democracy and that's currently done by paying fees to corporate interests. STOP!

The history of the United States is filled with the sale of public resources at giveaway prices to individuals and corporations who then resell them to the public at exorbitant profits. Public subsidy of corporate greed is a hallmark of American government - short term gain over long term vision. And now we are considering giving away the airwaves. Once sold they cannot be reclaimed. Keep the airwaves public, the citizens of this country deserve no less.

You cannot take a short sighted approach to technology by allowing corporate profits to prevent unfettered access by the public. An investment in the American people will pay off for everyone since it will make our nation stronger. By milking the consumers as so many telecom companies are so accustomed to doing, is only draining the leading edge our nation was once known for, and without that edge what good are their company slogans. We are already becoming second best, don't let us be left behind.

The airwaves are owned by the American people. Coincidently, the federal government is owned by the American people also. Remember us? Are you going to STEAL what does not belong to you? Are you complicit with corporate fascism descending upon America? In other words, are there any actual Americans at the FCC? If you decide in favor of private control, we will know that there aren’t.

move-on.org’s definition of public good, may not match mine. However, competition in this sector should be expanded or encouraged, not stifled. Such powerful telecom media should not be controlled by a chosen few with the deepest pockets and a limited collective limited set of interests. Cingular acquisition of AT&T wireless has been ultimately and directly detrimental to me as a customer. Highest bidder should not be only criterion.

The airwaves are PUBLIC. You’ve no right nor reason to make them private. My news is gone to pot (what happened to public service in exchange for airwave use?) and the tv is mostly not innovative and is very boring. With rare exception it isn’t worth turning on the tube. Past time to give room to more outre voices. What ever happened to anti trust laws in any case? The FCC is charged with working for my (public) benefit. If you can’t do the job correctly and without graft, go home to your families and cease making my life even more bleak. Thank you.

Please help keep and encourage the net to be an area of responsible growth and equalization among the ranks of our society. Preventing this anti-competitive behavior would be beneficial in two significate ways. One, families would no longer be forced to choose solely between high-priced phone and cable Internet. A new wireless market including lots of competition within that market would mean more affordable Internet access for families. And two, poor and rural communities which phone and cable companies never bothered to wire with high-speed Internet access could now have high-speed Internet signals beamed directly into their homes.

Signals broadcast into the air have always been considered free: radio, television (before cable and satellite), bringing news and information to people who are not able to pay for subscription services. Another corporate give-away with no central control of protocols used will further degrade America's position as a technology leader. To the FCC,
I am writing to voice my opinion against having the FCC allow continued privatization of the public airwaves. I feel that the public airwaves should be used for the good of the public, and that the government must protect our airways from corporate domination who will only stifle innovation and competition in the wireless internet market. Please do not allow this to happen. Thank you for doing this,
Sincerely,

Subject: You say you want a revolution...

Hi,

I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

You can sign the petition I signed here - urging the government to make sure the public airwaves are used for the public good:

Expanded public access to the internet on a non-commercial basis would be a powerful lever for growth.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

Walter Kohn
Santa Barbara, CA 93103

Additional use of airwaves should not be granted to the communication group of monopolies, but should be available to the public and to private enterprise. The smaller companies are rapidly being absorbed by AT&T, that was broken up because it was a monopoly and acted contrary to the interest of the public by using its power to prevent competition. A three minute long distance call cost as much as $2.00. Don’t allow this to happen again.

privatization of public services turned out not such a a good idea after all - at least for the public - if you look at Health care and other Emergency contingencies. the monetary bottom line can and should not always be the determining factor when it comes to public services. You savea buck short-term, but long-term, noone is responsible or accountable, or can be told to do something if need be. And un-privatization is almost impossible ...

Internet access should be a public service like street lights. The US has fallen behind in the implementation of wireless internet technology networks. I design games for a living - and everyone that does games for mobile devices says that all the growth in the game industry is in Asia. Our computer networks are just not fast enough and our carriers fragment the market. This makes it prohibitively expensive to develop games in the US mobile market. Please support use of public airwaves for greater access to high speed internet services for all.

Our civil liberties are being eroded one by one. One of the most important is freedom of speech. Please allow the internet to continue developing as it is. I do not want corporate gatekeepers who will restrict my access to information and eventually charge me money for what I now have for free.

We have always known as a nation that monopolies are not good for business or growth of business and certainly not when they can control the price to the consumer. We broke up AT&T previously because they controlled the telephones of the nation. We all heard about the rental on the phones where the couple had paid for years much over the worth of the phone and yet no one from the company bothered to tell them and then they had wanted them to return it. These people will be in control of the wireless communications as well. They won’t have to dig a hole or string wires or provide the instrumentation so why should they be in control.

I steven r kintz believe that the government should do all that has to be done to keep internet service price down to allow lower income people access to the services also. Im middle income and im tired of hearing many people complain about being ripped off by companies like comcast. They have too much power now. Its same way with cingular. I quit the contract as they send me double bills and refuse to fix it. Comcast sends me bills,,and i never sign up for comcast at all. They also refuse to wipe out the bills

The FCC was designed to protect the public good not corporate greed. If the citizens of this country don’t take steps to protect this country and the original spirit of the country from those within who would pervert it for their own selfish interests there won’t be a free country anymore as we know it. I appeal to each Commissioner to remember that first you are a citizen of the United States of America and you are in this position to protect the public airwaves a vital part of what makes this country free. Allowing corporate interests to be in control of ANY part of the public airwaves is a mistake. Affluent investors and big money interests constitute ONLY a small fraction of the total “public.” I think it is naive to argue that ceding authority over the internet to this “moneyed” minority would be in the best interest of all of society. Corporate interests are too narrow, too short term, and too much about greed. Keep the control of the wireless internet out of corporate hands.

The Bill of Rights provides for freedom of the press and freedom of speech. As a Federal bureaucracy, the FCC is obligated to uphold the Constitution. What the printing press and town square were in 1776, the internet is today. It is absolutely essential to our democracy that the airwaves of the internet be open and free. We need to maintain bandwidth for the individuals, small companies and creative entrepreneurs of our country. The monopolization of the airwaves by a few big companies would ultimately lead to the loss of democracy. Let the market place of ideas determine whether the perspectives of different individuals or groups have any merit.

The FCC must maintain the freedom of the airwaves, lest they contribute to the demise of our great country.

Please do not turn over the net waves to the large companies. We don’t need large companies taking over and then filtering the information we receive. I am an adult and I can do my own filtering. The information we have received via the net as worked fine for many years. LEAVE it alone!!!! Don’t try to fix something that isn’t broken. This is just a way for big companies to make more money. Dear FCC;
Please reserve the newly available airwaves for the public good. Big media conglomerates have shirked their duty to public service for far too long. I received a letter from my cable provider that told me I was getting 2 C-SPAN channels that were not included in my (broadcast basic) package, and that I would no longer receive them. That the cable companies feel they can withhold perhaps the most important public service outlet on television from even the most basic package shows just how important it is to them be responsible to that public service contract. Luckily, there were enough basic cable subscribers to rebel against the removal of C-SPAN that they retained it in the package. I am a voter, a taxpayer, and a politically involved American. I am hopeful that you will decide to make more bandwidth available to the citizenry. The voice of the wealthy and powerful media corporations reaches plenty far as it is.
Thank you.
James Orleans

Enough profit already. What does it profit a man or a company if the common good is forgotten. The airwaves, the air, connect us all. Let them profit us all.

Privatizing airwaves is akin to privatizing water. Please don’t let corporate greed deprive us of yet another resource!

Please plan ahead to prevent the growing divide between the haves and have-nots that has already created economic stress on our country in the form of unequal access to health care. Do we want an educated, productive, informed citizenry, which universal access to the Internet can foster? Or do we want the problems of countries where limited access to the benefits of our historic period incite discontent and potential violence?

There are too many of us in this country for us to communicate directly with each other. In order for citizens of the USA to be informed about important issues so that we can act appropriately we need to have airwaves that are freely available to people with many different viewpoints. Selling off the rights to the airwaves to the highest bidders is extremely unAmerican. You need to stand up for our rights, not sell them off to the highest bidder. Printed on every coin in the USA is the phrase "E Pluribus Unum", or 'From the Many, One.' I take this to mean that our diverse voices are what unite this great country. If we should turn over public airwaves to a select few, large corporate interests, hence silencing the majority of our voices, maybe that slogan should be changed: E Tres Unum. (From the Three, One)

Don't betray your public trust, please.

I have had a problem with this legislation from the start. Our family has chosen to not have cable for several reasons through the years–don’t want yet another monthly charge, don’t want a plethora of useless stations available to our child. As the airwaves become more limited to TV viewers, it will dictate those of us in hilly areas to get cable or to accept even fewer stations because digital reception is more of a line-of-sight kind of reception, as I understand it. This legislation directly feeds into the profits of cable companies as it is.

It is a travesty to think that legislation is dictating this change that primarily benefits existing cable and internet vendors. It makes me wonder how many legislators’ stock portfolios are benefitting from this decision?
Please keep the airwaves public. It’s the best alternative to a situation that already smells.

Dear FCC:
I hope that when you decide what to do with the newly available airwaves that you keep the good of the whole of our society in mind, and allow the airwaves to be available for all citizens of the United States, not just a few wealthy corporations. So much good can come from your decision to place the well-being of the masses ahead of the privileged few.
Please consider deeply the ramifications of this important decision you must make. You can help to begin the process of rekindling the greatness of the United States of America by doing what's right for the masses. Please stand up for equal rights, for equal access to opportunity and creativity, and for equality amongst all people in this Country by keeping competition and innovation open to all of us.
Thank you,
Rodney Sanchez

Have we learned nothing in the past 6+ years? Dissemination of information, unfettered, is the only chance for an informed electorate. When you allow business to decide what needs to be heard/seen (ala Rupert Murdoch), you stifle the democratic process. I find it interesting that President Bush continues to "spew" the idea that "...competition keeps costs down" while at the same time putting control of information in the hands of a few. Show me someone who believes in a "free market economy", and I will show you someone who is being subsidized (I paraphrase Robert F. Kennedy, Jr.). The point is, the "public domain" is for the public use, not political partisanship of either party. It needs government oversight. Big business has its own agenda, and its agenda most often does not conform to my needs. Sincerely, Rick Meyers

As an astronomer who frequently observes at radio frequencies, I feel strongly that frequency bands in the public airwaves must be kept open for everyone to use. As more frequency bands are allocated to individual companies and groups, astronomers lose frequencies at which they can observe radio signals originating outside our planet.

Furthermore, no person or company created these frequency bands, nor are they tangible objects; they are simply a part of nature. The bands should thus be accessible to everyone.

Rural areas are underserved by existing infrastructure. Because of low population density, land lines and cable are not available now and probably never will be. Wireless communications may be the difference between death and economic vitality for many small communities.

"Corporate America keep your hands off the internet. It's "we the people", not "we AT&T, Verizon and Comcast". "We the people" have a choice for our "provider" of internet service AND should have a free internet to roam after that choice.

"We have way more control over our news and entertainment now than we need. The almighty dollar seems to be behind most of the decisions about what to put on the air. PLEASE leave the public airwaves public—we need independent sources!"

Are they not doing the same thing down in Argentina? Mary Ellen Kendgia.

Let's keep the internet out of the hands of private-profit makers.

The "privatization" and "monopolization" of the means of communication in this country has had a horribly negative effect on the citizenry. Ideally, we should have universal, free wireless internet service everywhere. Here is a place to start.

The public airwaves must be protected from the grasping greedy tentacles of huge corporations. Our free internet access affords our society with some many possibilities. Must the few always make an obscene profit off the many? Must we end up as consumer slaves with no means to improve our lot just to feed the insatiable appetite's of these corporations? Let's not devolve by giving away what allows us to learn and improve our quality of life. Internet access has its faults, but by far it is a wonderous information network that links humanity in a very special way. It should not be seized upon by giant corporations for the purpose of limiting public access while raking in profits. America should be more than just doing business.

There is a lot of work that needs to be done in the coming decades to insure that this planet and its societies remain healthy. This work cannot be done by business alone; the public must be encouraged to participate in finding solutions to problems like global warming, poverty, etc. The kind of involvement necessary can be facilitated by giving citizens more access to more airwaves at affordable prices. Democracy not only gives people the right to speak; it requires they be given a space to do this. The airwaves are one such space. Please consider the value of public participation in the important discussions required to address the issues of our time and give the airwaves to the public, not the private, sector.
Thank you for your time and attention.
Sincerely,
Tim Kurtzweil

I believe we have enough corporate control in this country, and the Internet is a great educational asset.

As a Kansas resident, it is important for poor and rural communities which phone and cable companies never bothered to wire with high-speed Internet access to be allowed to have high-speed Internet signals beamed directly into their homes.

It’s already too expensive to access the internet. The phone companies have consumers in a head-lock. I have to pay for home land line service in order to have internet access and I don’t need a home land line because I have a cell phone. What I really need is direct internet access that is inexpensive and NOT tied to a telephone company. How about low cost public internet access? A land line is $50 a month and the cost of internet added to that is climbing to $45 a month on top of that. The internet access through cable tv is also quite expensive even if I cancel my land line service. You can’t win - either way it’s too much and I’m at the verge of cancelling everything - no phone, no internet.

Thank you for considering the plight of the working class.

Dear FCC - As a small business owner of a web company, I am afraid that the big companies that will buy the new airwaves will not act in the best public or competitive interest. The flow of information is the most important part of a democracy and private sector rarely acts with this in mind. Please save these airwaves for the public good and allow small companies like mine to grow, add jobs and add to the innovation the world desperately needs.

Sincerely,

A strong democracy can not continue to exist without a public that is well informed and with knowledge and access to its civil duties. I would like to see us debate this policy more publicly, and push for a solution that favors public good over private profit that benefits fewer citizens. It would be counter to open-market public policy to allow communications companies to purchase the rights to this bandwidth if the likely result is to limit competition. One such result of increased competition and use of this underutilized bandwidth could possibly be to built affordable wireless internet options nationwide. If our country wishes to grow and continue to lead at the cutting edge of technology development, then the US must consider how to make high-speed internet access more ubiquitous. It should be considered a public good or work of infrastructure, much like roads, or sewage systems. Without these basic utilities, business development & long-term community viability are endangered. Internet access is an essential ingredient to our country’s continuing economic development.

Please consider these sentiments in your review of FCC policy and governance, asking the question—do our actions benefit the average American long-term?

The idea that Big Business should dominate the airways is appalling ... they already carry too much weight with newspapers, TV, and radio ... The airwaves must remain public and open to ideas and actions that may not be what big business wants, but what the public needs!!!

The economy and daily lives of United States citizen are influenced far too much by the big media mogules. Public airwaves seem to be the only way to get the un-biased truth on very important public interest issues. Don't strip of us of one of the few remaining "public" accessible and potentially more affordable ways to communicate and access internet services.

It is my understanding that AT&T, Verizon and Comcast are lobbying Congress to gut Net Neutrality, which could mean the end of public airwaves as we know them. Please do not let the big telecommunications companies take over the airwaves. These airwaves need to be left open to the public for free internet and radio access. Of course it is not free when we pay taxes, but we do not want our tax dollar to support big corporations. More regulation is needed over cellular phone companies. The service is terrible after long waits. Most of the time the service representatives are in another company and get the orders mixed and erroneous. Thank you.

Dear Members of the FCC:

Our nation was founded on the principles of honesty, fairness and representative government. The democratic process is one in which government officials and the decisions they make should reflect the will of the people who elected those officials.

However, as lobbyists gain an ever tighter grip on those who were elected to make critical decisions for the good of their constituents, it is clear that those officials are being BOUGHT, rather than being elected.

Please do not let moguls in the communications industry strengthen their monopoly by empowering them to acquire the few remaining airwaves in the communications spectrum.

Enough is enough!!! Mind control is the first symptom of mental rickets and the intellectual malnutrition which it will inevitably create.

Respectfully,

Richard A. Marzolf

This is like giving away public land. We've got to ensure that these resources are available to future generations. Please protect the people you were elected to serve, not the corporations who lobby you.

Verizon caused a great deal of damage in my neighborhood, including cutting my electrical service. They decided it was best to through caution to the wind and work as fast as possible. They should not receive more power over us.

This country has had enough of the "benefits" of corporatization; the Internet provides equal access to the public discourse to all, and it should remain that way.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

seniors living on fixed incomes cannot afford price increases. this is just as bad as the oil companies

These airwaves belong to the public. The public airwaves should be for the public good. The USA should stand for free market competition, not monopolies.

It is unreasonable for the FCC to give the airwaves to three companies for their financial benefit.
People are strained financially to the max, in debt with credit cards to be able to afford just a regular life, while the multinational corporations could brake the country with their greed if the Government does not listen to the People. Using the Public Airwaves for the public good would be just smart and could give our country a chance to be competitive in the International market.

Wireless in the US is laughable compared to much of the EU and places like Japan ... I don't think the companies involved have shown that they can be trusted with such a valuable resource.
I would much rather see something that was inherently not a walled garden.

I believe that the public airwaves should remain just that...public. Why should we give the right to use those airwaves to just a few large companies, when we are just now beginning to understand the many uses they can be for the public good. Let us keep public what is public! Why the rush to give away what is ours? Do the right thing...keep the airwaves for the people to use.

Communication should be as open and free as possible to expedite all kinds of interactions and connections between members of the public.

The FCC should protect public interests and stand up for rights of individuals.

Public airwaves should not be available for use by for-profit companies. If they need those airwaves, let them buy them for market-value.
There is no decision to make here. The airwaves are the property of the public and should remain so. Thank you.

Why would the FCC grant sole access to this valuable spectrum to the same members of Corporate America who strive to stifle competition - when the FCC is supposed to promote competition to benefit ALL citizens; not give handouts to multi-billionaire companies? I want to see STRONG language that would promote innovation as a means to greater competitiveness - not another federal grant to Big Business that leaves America falling even farther behind the rest of the world than it is now.

To whom, who can do, or have influence, please lobby with passion, to keep the public airways open to the public and controled by the public, so invention, creativity can survive. Greed is the killer of society’s process. It takes courage to fight for the public’s rights to use what is theirs. If the public has those rights, the average citizen blooms, with creativity that creates taxes, infrastructure, and freedom for many, result, a better society. Please, don’t let self interests of corporations, and money making schemes fog your abilities to judge for a free, and public airway. Thank you, Kay Moore Moscow Idaho.

I believe there should be a stipulation at this auction that clearly spells out that buyers of these airwaves MUST use them. Buying them to disallow others their use is not in my best interest, or the best interests of competitive business.

Many years ago it was the Steel and Rail industry that were the big monopolys that controlled America and the world. Now it is the telco industry. They are seeking to consolidate their power. The people who buy the air space should be required to use it, and not just in some token way to get by some law. We need to promote competition and not squelch it.

Our entire physical world is changing rapidly in ways that will affect every life form on the planet, producing widespread turmoil and upheaval, yet our government persists in making changes that will make a few people richer at the expense of all the rest. Is there a relationship between these two events? Is the FCC helping the rich and powerful become moreso such that they will have a better chance of being the ‘survivors?’

Margo Baldwin

The constitution is there to protect our citizens’ freedoms. And if I remember correctly, there is one about freedom of speech and press. Taking those freedoms away by giving free internet space to corporations is in violation of the constitution. The United States of America prides itself on keeping rights sacred, and taking those away - what kind of example would that set for the rest of the world? Taking one right away may not seem that monumental, but then, who will stop the next one from being rejected? What if it is voting rights, or land rights? Will those be disregarded and violated? Once you start taking away rights, it is hard to draw the line of where to stop. Don’t make it more difficult in the future, don’t give in to corporation greed.

Abby Spindelman

For me personally, this is an urgent and potentially very positive issue. In the 1950s and '60s, I worked on the AT&T account at its lead advertising agency at the time, N. W. Ayer. AT&T had been engaged for years in a sustained program of "corporate advertising," which was not a cynical exercise in "spin" or "sound bites" but a well-funded and honest initiative to win a broad base of public respect for the company and recognition of its public-spirited sense of responsibility. (The program included, for example, sustained sponsorship of "The Bell Telephone Hour" on radio and then TV, serious TV documentaries on subjects such as American cities, earnest print advertising that reported on Bell Labs' innovations and the like. This was motivated, ultimately, by the recognition of the "public interest" requirements of the FCC of that day. That was a powerful motivator for truly responsible corporate governance, at AT&T.

I most urgently hope that you, as Federal regulators at the beginning of this new century, will not ignore the significant public responsibility you hold in your hands on behalf of all of us who live and communicate in this country. Please guard against giving away a precious resource. The corporations which control communications technology will be venal if you give them license to be, but they will also be mindful of public interest if your require them to be. It's in your hands.

Please preserve the public airwaves for a use that will bring great benefit to American citizens; namely, to drive down the ridiculously high cost of wireless Internet access. Having inexpensive/free and wide-ranging wireless service in public buildings, commuter stops and parks would massively increase the productivity of the workforce in what is otherwise "downtime" (waiting for trains, etc). Also, it would allow people like me to be with our children out of doors while still getting our work done. If I could be online in the park, it would cut down on my childcare costs, let my children play outside, and increase our time together while still allowing me to do the work that pays our bills.

Or you could help the big companies make more money. Which is more important - the productivity and benefits of a nation, or the pockets of a couple CEOs?

For many years, a mainstay of news and information has been television. While this medium has performed a great service, the people who have the ability to broadcast from coast to coast has never been large but has now dwindled down to 5. The internet is a new medium and a new frontier. The airwaves are a public trust like air or water. It is a communication medium that will allow an instant and worldwide distribution of information and ideas that can not be stifled by a fistful of people. We need the FCC to work for the public’s best interest and not privatize a public trust that belongs to all Americans.

I challenge anyone proposing to privatize the airwaves to be a strict constitutionalist: where in the constitution are private (corporate) rights/interest mentioned? They are not, and it is time to move away from the Corporacracy that grips this country.
The business of government is not is not to protect business. The role of the government is to promote the Commonweal; the greater public good, not the parochial private/corporate interest. Please: do the correct thing and leave the airwaves open to the public interest!

The public airwaves are owned by the public. Too often the FCC has given away use of public property for the equivalent of $24 dollars of beads and trinkets. Vague promises of more entertainment options is not more important than ensuring a broad range of access. The test of whether the public is getting value is not in the number of new websites or new channels that become available, but in the diversity of voices that are available. Make the choice that ensures competition. More options offered by a very few media firms is not the same as more options offered by a wide variety of media firms.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

Please take your responsibility seriously in this matter. 'Public' in this case is not a corporate acronym.

A free press - all media included - is the citizen’s first guardian for freedom. The administration has no right to assign it. Impeachable offense.

Please support the free exchange of ideas and limit the "digital divide" by ensuring that the airwaves remain public.

It is time to curtail the growth of cartels and monopolies in our economic system. This is one more way our access to communications is threatened.
You have the opportunity to "allow" regular channels of free wifi internet for those of us who pay enough already. Please consider this part of your job to protect the public at large from abuses. Thank you.

Corporate abuse of power for profit is something that has been steadily increasing. Please prevent any possibility of that occurring in this critical public awareness medium by opposing any move to allow corporate interests to affect public access to the Internet, in any fashion.

The internet and most technological improvements have come about because of the research and innovation conducted by universities and sponsored by federal agencies. Working with community colleges and small universities on technology and distance learning systems has shown me that the limited choices in providers is squeezing already constraint budgets. This is especially true in rural areas. Please keep our air-waves out of the hands of monopolistic suppliers so everyone will still have affordable access.

The government must protect our airwaves from the same corporate gatekeepers that have stifled innovation and competition in Internet markets. To restore America's leadership in high speed Internet services, the FCC must ensure that the upcoming auction sets aside at least 30 MHz of spectrum for open and non-discriminatory Internet access. This will guarantee that new entrants have the opportunity to enter the market in competition with incumbent providers.

It would be a big mistake to hand over these airwaves to the very same phone and cable companies that dominate the wireline market. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

Many of us struggle to pay exhorbitant costs for high speed internet access. Yet most of the developed world has such access at affordable rates available to almost every home, giving their children an edge that leaves American children behind. I believe that allowing these services to fall into the hands of those whose only concern is to keep costs high and satisfy their shareholders will disadvantage American students for years to come.

Media Consolidation is a frightening proposition. Democracy is dependent on diversity of views. In the modern world, such views are available mainly through the mass media. To create a legal/economic environment that allows limited ownership of mass media through corporate consolidation is equal to the destruction of free speech. What happened to the freedom of information? If larger media corporations are permitted to monopolize local and national TV, radio, Internet, and newspaper outlets, they will have the power to block public access to many political and social perspectives, as well as blocking public access to various entertainment programs, that those large media corporations do not favor. One media base means our information only comes from one source. The more media outlets, the more points of view the public will have access to when making decisions. The public must be able to decide for themselves and not have big corporate interests determine what they want them to know and not know. The FCC has already broken its mandate of assuring a free and impartial media by not only allowing but also actually encouraging the consolidation of various TV, Radio and Newspaper companies over the last decade. It is time that this consolidation is stopped so that the American people can obtain critical information necessary to the survival of this nation. The Internet has always been a free unregulated realm in which entrepreneurs could plant the seeds of their version of the American Dream. It is the last frontier for many to become productive citizens in our capitalist system. Allowing corporations to dictate comings and goings on the Internet would sacrifice the opportunity that so many have to better themselves without restriction, for generations to come. I object to turning the Internet, one of the only communication outlets for completely uninhibited democratic speech, into a cash cow for corporations that will filter what is allowed to pass through "their" pipelines. I do not want my access to information on the Web to be controlled by big business. It already controls the print media and airwaves. The Internet has grown to what it is, good or bad, because it is open to access by anyone. Removing that feature would be a violation of freedom of speech. Uncensored access to the Internet has become not

I have written to the FCC before about sanctioning Don Imus...I was a broadcasting major at Penn State and worked in the industry for a while. Here is my opinion—whenever there is a limited natural resource, such as bandwidth, the government MUST step in on behalf of the people and control it as a public interest. How can this NOT be so? I pay for the FCC to do this on my behalf.

Come on - give it a break. These companies are already making plenty of money. Do the right thing for a change and side with the people vs. the money makers. Also, FYI - They already do a HORRIBLE job of serving their customers. I've tried most of the companies offering wireless and ALL of them have fallen short of truly addressing the needs of their users and providing well working communication that is quite within their abilities. They don't care... THEY DON'T HAVE to they're "the 'phone' companies you are about to sell us all out to".

Have you people NO shame! Airways belong to the PUBLIC, not a few greedy companies. Let the public/U.S. children learn about life and enjoy life, not see much $ a greedy company can make. The oil companies are a prime exampl!
These resources, because that is truly what they are, should remain public and accessible to everyone. As it is, the lack of true competition in the Internet Service market has resulted in ridiculously (criminally!) overpriced access to a technological innovation that is becoming more and more an essential component of modern life. This is the government's opportunity to act to ensure that it's people will always have affordable access to the airwaves by consciously choosing competition and innovation, demonstrating for once that they are capable of putting the common good over corporate profit.

As a Comcast cable customer I have been extremely frustrated for more than 8 months of problematic service. As there is no competition for cable access in my community, I had no recourse but to keep using Comcast or go to Satellite, etc which I didn't wish to do. If I had the ability to change cable companies I would have months ago. To allow these corporate giants the exclusive use of the public airways would hold all of us hostage to their needs, not ours. PLEASE rethink this use of the public airways.

The commercial users have plenty of space on the airwaves! What we desperately need are more space for non-commercial outlets for the general public good: local FM, blogs, small political parties and groups. The airwaves are a resource of the general public and should be used as such.

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

Opening the airwaves for wireless internet access is EXCELLENT for business. I trust that you will advocate for this measure. While in the short term it will drive down prices and decrease stock holder values, the long range benefits are huge.

Carla Rogers
Richmond, VA 23235

On several occasions in recent years I have joined with others to protest federal giveaways of resources that belong to the people—and are therefore NOT the government’s to take or give, despite too-common practice. Among these resources are publicly-owned lands, those rights guaranteed us by our Constitution and Bill of Rights, and our access to still-developing communications technologies. I am outraged that the FCC is again contemplating handing over to big business the control of our electronic access to information. Not only would such an action be a travesty against the public good, but it might also create yet another area in which this nation is likely to fall behind those countries where competition and invention are not inhibited in this manner. It seems, sadly, that everything has its price in the U.S. today. You have it in your power to make sure that the price is not far too high. Please don’t allow big corporations to control the communications revolution.

Ever since the advent of electromagnetic communication, by consensus, the air has been has been considered as public property which is allotted to private or public groups to use in the interests of the American Public. This policy has resulted in for profit use and for educational purposes (the latter sadly decreased at this point in time). It is in the interests of our society prosperity and civilization that diversified information transfer and the unlimited and uncensored transfer of the state of government, essential educational material, and the expression of the arts, literature, entertainment and social political and economic views not be restricted by private groups with sufficient wherewithall to buy out and monopolize information presentations to the American public. There must always be the opportunity for the presentation of diversified opinions in the airwaves when it exists.

The public airwaves and the internet should be for the public and not relegated to a few corporate interests whose only goal is gouging the most money that can for diminutive services and any access. Keep AT&T and their like from having the complete control that they obviously crave.

Are we now messing with "free speech"? This is a threat to the American way of life. The right to free speech started with great leaders like Benjamin Franklin and the Fathers of our country. Do we have the right to let them down?

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.”

One of the thing ideas that has suffered under the way this society has created its economic system is any notion of a public good – it seems that everything must be privatized, including those resources, such as the airwaves, that are clearly owned by the public and to be used for the public's good. This must stop, which is why I am signing this petition.

Collected by MoveOn.org Civic Action 593
It is a Right (not a privilege) of every American to have free access to publicly presented information. The Internet has made this possible in a way not seen since the days of the old Republic where Town Hall meetings were a more literal truth and where the events that effected a person's life were not so deeply influenced by globalization.

The presence of technology that would allow a less costly and thus more participatory flow of information is not only the basic right of a citizenry in a democracy it is also vital to an effective and informed electorate. Action taken to deprive the nations people of this resource would run counter to the fundamental nature this nation was founded on.

this issue is of utmost importance to me,„„Ken Tate

It is time that we, the people, the people responsible for this nation, this democracy stand up for our rights. We own the airwaves, they are public domain, and they should remain as such. I am annoyed by the lack of access to public domain currently. A person cannot turn on the radio, TV, or computer without an onslaught on big industry advertisement. I am exhausted with having to filter through this bombardment of useless information. We, the people, should have open access to the public airwaves. They should not be for sale.

These new airwaves should be available for public use of the internet, without a fee. If this bandwidth can be made freely available for the benefit of all, there is no good reason why corporations should be able to chage for access to it. Why should they be able to charge for air, which up until now, has always been free?

Please do not transfer over to these major corporations without more public notice, and public hearings – What is at the base of our problems with the political financing which is the base of all the interest in constant money raising by persons who want to run for office is that the Fairness Doctrine was eliminated over 25 years ago. The vast majority of campaign finances goes to pay for political advertising. We need to make access to public airways equal and free ......please remember that this is part of the media that is in our founding father’s minds that would help to keep our democratic system in check.

having lived overseas for many years and been impressed with internet speeds (and the resultant multi-uses that are made of the internet) in Europe, I am depressed on my return to the U.S. to find our internet speeds resemble that of 3rd world countries I’ve worked in. What is the problem? Could it be that large companies are monopolize internet access and destroying the public use? Any new wavelength that is made available should go to widen access to internet and multiply the access points, not be given to large companies who already monopolize the access points. Make a decision FOR competition, not for large corporations. PLEASE! a concerned citizen.

Big phone and cable companies should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

It is critical that the Federal Government ensure full neutrality and equality regarding access to the Air Waves in this country. We must get the infrastructure right at this point in time as it will set the Government’s direction on this topic for years to come. Maximum consumer benefit depends of full equality and neutrality of the Air Waves infrastructure, very much like we have already done with the Interstate Highway System.

Stop the allocation of public resources for private profit.

Don’t sell more bandwidth to the corporations...Use it for wideband internet access.

I am an educator. I believe the public airways should stay public to help all students have inexpensive access to more and better educational opportunities!

Let us have our free air! Air should be free!

Turning over the Internet to private industry is totally unfair to the American public. If you permit this to happen, then I will be convinced that we no longer have a real democracy - one in name only. Rather we have a fashist government, which is worse than communism. It is very wrong for private business to take over the airwaves like that. Please pay attention to the needs of the public as you are obligated to do that.

Public Airwaves for the Public!! Under the current Administration we are rapidly giving away ALL our Public Resources to Private interests for their own private gain. For all the lip service to economic growth and expanding markets with which the Administration defends this injustice, the fact is that we as a Nation lose quality of life, fair distribution of wealth and control of our shared national assets. Left unchecked the inevitable consequences are an angry and displaced lower-class, decreased national security and a dangerously non-viable government.

Anthony Ingraham

The big business that makes a fortune from the airwaves must be made aware that they do not own them. We must be prepared to take away their privileges when they do not put the public (owners) first. It is easy to see they are making too much money just by what they pay their CEOs and investors. If that income was shared with the public (owners) in rate decreases it would be a first step. The old fashioned way to make money was to live within your means and invest some of your savings to earn extra money from your investments. Now golden umbrellas are given to people who destroy companies and peoples jobs - go figure.

"Universal Access" needs to be expanded to include broadband access to the Internet. I am in a narrow deadzone between AT&T (my supplier) and CenturyTel (which is offering broadband in big display ads). I cannot have broadband (DSL in the case of AT&T) without paying COX for cable service I don't want and spending a lot of money. Please lean on the Telcos to fill in the gaps and expand the FCC universal service coverage. The US is uncompetitive in this field; we should be ashamed. The phone companies were granted millions of dollars in the 70s on the claims that they would provide high speed access to the nation. 75 mips up and down were promised, instead we have limited access only for monitarily efficient neighborhoods and no access for rural and low income areas. Not profits for cable, phone or cellular companies and continued limited access for rural and low income areas.

Public does not mean private regardless of the strictures place on these corporations. The free market place is not working with regard to these services. The corporate interests as a rule engage in price fixing and collusion to the detriment of the consumer.

this is very important for maintaining our democracy in this nation. our media outlets, including all broadcast media are owned and managed for the good of those companies which own them, creating deterioration and conformity in what and how news is offered to the public citizen. we need the independence of the internet to maintain what thomas paine began–freedom of the press.

You must be kidding! The great leaps in technology have always come from outside Inovation. If the rivers were kept to only the sloops, the steamboat would never have been given a chance, If the Steamboat operators had their way, Trains would never have had tracks to run on. Hell, we’d still be burning whale oil, if Edison wasn’t givin the chance to run some cables. Do Not give the PUBLIC airwaves to corporations! Teddy Roosevelt would flip in his grave!

The change to digital television has opened the prospect to use this slice of the publics’ airwaves in innovative ways, not only to the benefit of a few, but to the benefit of much of the public through the use of wi-fi technology. Very little of the electromagnetic spectrum is not assigned to non military or governmental service, private, or other commercial uses. This would be one area where it would be of greater public good to utilize this portion of the airwaves for general use - prompting innovation and further economic development - rather than auctioning it off once for current minimal gain for our government.

When you silence the voice of diversity by giving the power of the media and internet to a chosen few, you pave a roadway for lost freedom of thought, and open a door for fascism, dictatorship, and corporate corruption. Don’t break the foundation of our Republic, Democratic nation by dimming the lights on freedom of thought, freedom of speech, and diverse imagination and innovation. Support the United States Constitution, not corporate executives. Thank you.
I am an AT&T customer AND shareholder, but I do not want private companies to be able to buy the airwaves. Keep them for the public good.

The definition of the phrase "Public Airwaves" is not just words - it is LAW, and should be enforced for the good of the people (remember "We, the people..."?)
Corporations are not people.
Carl Dershem
San Diego, CA 92104

Corporate interests are only for profit, the national airwaves are as much a treasure as the national parks and should be managed for everyone's benefit, not just to make money, but to inform, because without a diversity of opinion it is difficult to ever get at the truth, and truth should be the objective of all government controls.

The airways should be used for the good of ALL the public not just those that can afford it. The power of communication is becoming too consolidated in the hands of too few companies. It is getting to be a monopoly. Wasn't MaBell broken up because of the monopoly fears. Why are we going backward in time. Keep the airways open to everyone. This is a vitally important issue— we must preserve public resources for the public, instead of allowing large corporations to profit at the expense of the public. Please, take this opportunity to build the foundation for true public access to this incredibly important resource. Stop selling what should be for the public. same old same old!

Verizon presently supplies me with service that is despicable. Give them more ability - No. They are incompetent with help people that do not even speak English.

Licensees are meant to use their license for the public good, not to manipulate the marketplace to their profit motive. Please keep this in mind when voting on any airwave license.

The middle class is under enough strain because of the collateral effects of high gas prices. This may be the mythical straw. We will never be able to compete with other countries where WiFi and internet access is both faster and more readily available than it is over here if you allow the big companies to control internet access. Competition is the heart of a real capitalist system. The lack of competition is the hallmark of a fascist state. Please keep the airways free.

Haven't you given enough to big business? Do the right thing for once and give back a little to the people instead of screwing us.

The common good requires that we all share the airwaves, not just businesses.

It is essential that EVERYONE have access to public airwaves especially people who may not be able to afford to pay the high prices that would be charged by huge corporations. Remember the anti-trust of ‘ma bell’ etc.
It seems to me corporations have had it their way for too long and too much. There needs to be a little room left in America for the public, common good. Selling of these frequencies to companies that will then use them to make the rest of us pay through the nose is just too much. Enough. We, the public, your employers own these frequencies. You folks at the FCC have sold enough of the public's assets in the name of competition that was supposed to make things less expensive and encourage competition. Neither has happened. I once paid my telephone bill to AT&T. Then I paid Bellsouth. Now, I pay AT&T and Bellsouth doesn't exist.

Once I had multiple sources for news and entertainment with innovation in both. Now, I can change from one news program to another and basically watch the same watered down information on every channel.

Just stop creating monopolies.

Hi
Please stop giving away our public airwaves to big business and start using these new resources for the public good. We the people are getting the short end of this end game. Please, hold open hearings on C-Span so the public can vote on who should receive the public airwaves. Mr. Chairman, Please provide the public a chance to bid or at the very least, see what is going on in our government! Stop cheating the public and the taxpayer. We have a vested interest in what is happen in our government. The public need to be apart of this important process.

I am a citizen, not a "consumer" of the U.S.A. Once again MY GOVERNMENT is giving away MY public space. This is the trend, to privatize all that was once our right as a citizen, now we have to be a CONSUMER to use what was once the right of an American- from land, to waterways and coastlines, to the airwaves and now our cyberspace. Americans are being hat are being hyjacked by the government that is serving corporations. I want the freedom to decide to change to Skype rather than to be forced to use Verizon- or any other company that is using their insider goverment influence in order to turn all Americans into paying consumers of America the richest country in the world for a spectacular few. Free for the big players, little players pay to lose and pay more and never can choose.

The federal government and all of its branches exist solely to serve the needs of the general public. Making pacts with private entities to take public access away from a technology that uses public space for its very operation amounts to little more than theft. Give the public back its property instead of stealing it and then in turn selling rights to it off to the highest bidder. The federal government is not supposed to be a capitalist organization. Let’s stop running it like one.

The First Amendment is one of the cornerstones of American democracy. Freedom of speech and association requires public access to a wide variety of opinions and approaches.

A nation in which the public airwaves are controlled by large corporationa is not a democratic nation.

Your responsibility is to act in the best interests of the nation and the people of America. That means that you must protect competition and freedom of access to public airwaves.

Sorry, I'm a harda$$ about work ethic & values. If Private Industry would like my hardearned money they ought earn it the old fashioned way: by Working for it, not by ripping off public assets & essentially stealing free shareware. Work smarter for the future, quit settling for the cheapest {sl}easiest fix! I certainly won't be buying into this hype if the line is crossed, there are other mediums to free speech outside of the internet & televised channels to chose from.

Holding an auction is itself already a betrayal of the public, and a betrayal of the public’s ownership of our national airwaves. An auction of this type is WORSE than auctioning off our national parks, for the benefit of our nation’s biggest real estate developers. WORSE because the public airwaves represent CONTROL OF PUBLIC INFORMATION (or DISINFORMATION), and CONTROL OF PUBLIC THOUGHT (or THOUGHTLESSNESS). The public airwaves should be opened to public use, for the public good, by public judgments of merit – not on the basis of mere private corporate wealth.

Since the 60's the government has given too many concessions to the big corporate communications giants while they in turn have never acted in the public interest. It has been abundantly demonstrated that the first interest of business is their own self interest. If their self interest and public interest conflict, business self interest comes first. Sometimes there is no attempt to serve the public good at all. Witness the Fox network. Witness mock newscasts that are really serving a particular point of view. It is absolutely critical to maintain that the public airwaves serve the public good. Indeed, if they don't then they are a precedent where public assets may be usurped for the rich and powerful.

The FCC needs to have complete control
John Larson
Athens, GA 30606

TO MESS WITH THE PEOPLE'S AIRWAVES IS TO MESS WITH THE UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION! Can no one at the FCC understand this very simple fact? Did the FCC conduct public education seminars about what these changes will mean to future Americans? If not, then the FCC needs to be taken to court for undermining the American people' freedom via communication that is not controlled by the monied elite buddies of current industrial-military oligarchy that keeps trying to control the minds of Americans. Please use the public airwaves for the public good. Let the wireless Internet revolution evolve without the greedhead panderers selling out our future and thus guaranteeing more of the dumbing down of American minds. Power to the People, which actually includes FCC employees!

The Bush administration has taken every opportunity to steal away public rights in the interest of big business. They have ruined our public reputation in the international world, are destroying the environment and our public lands, and now they threaten to steal the public airwaves for their corporate cronies. It is long past the time to say no. I hope the FCC will show that it has some backbone by protecting our airwaves. It's time to stop the assault on the people.

There is too much JUNK on our airwaves, too much hawking of religion and too little news. What passes for news these days is just entertainment. Fairness in broadcasting is gone as is equal time, most opinion is very conservative and there are too few dissenting voices. Too many stations are owned by a few big companies who support extreme right wing views. Religion is NOT "education" it’s superstition and a very profitable under taxed business. Where I live, I’m still stuck with a very slow dial up of only 24k. This is a major handicap for making the most use of the internet. There is NO competition in this area for high speed internet access, only Verizon. We should have access to ALL the internet has to offer, we don’t need to be censored by our internet provider this isn’t CHINA-yet. WE need more competition, not less. Free the airwaves to more independent business and put the airwave hogs on a diet.

Keep the airwaves public domain and free

Keep the airwaves open to innovation. Not everything in the U.S. should be corporate.

PUBLIC airwaves should not be sold to PRIVATE companies. Our democracy depends on the free interchange of ideas, and allowing private corporations to dictate how and by what means we communicate is a direct threat to our free society.

The rape of the majority working class American public is already underway by the oil and drug companies and their cronies, please do not permit this to happen yet again. Keep our airwaves free, and do not permit the right wing to continue to steal from the common man.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

How about a little decency and common sense in your dealings for a change?
By allowing private businesses to control public airwaves, the FCC will be dealing a blow to both democracy and justice.

Andre Soares

I do not understand how the government can turn over PUBLIC airwaves to PRIVATE corporations in the first place. It is not theirs to turn over. The public air waves are just that - public.

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don't want this competition to their Internet service—they'd rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

The FCC must act on behalf of ALL AMERICANS!! ...not just the corporations and big Telecoms.

This action of gutting Net Neutrality directly affects how small businesses like ours does business; we are the pioneers that are blazing the trail to the global marketplace, after all. Why should America be 2nd fiddle to anyone? We have given up and now the rest of the world will have the advance technology, free flow of information, and a secure system through which small business can thrive. I don’t understand why the FCC doesn’t comprehend. Keep America’s airwaves open and viable for a vital America. I think it is a national security issue in itself.

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution—bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They’ve spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks.

We’re urging the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior.

Again it is always corporation’s instead of people.

Free airwaves for public use.

Let's do the right thing and use public resources for the public good!

Please do not give our public airwaves to private companies.

Public airwaves are for the public, not for corporate profit and control.

We make snide remarks about countries where the media is controled by a few of the powerful. We need more openness for all and can only have that when it is not expensive.

Subsidize the car companies, the tobacco companies, the war profiteers, big pharma... why not finish the job and destroy the public airwaves? Freedom's on the march!

If we lose the public airwaves, we lose the soul of our country. It is a clear as that.
Sell them to the highest bidder and you have sold the philosophy that made this the greatest country in history for about 200 years. Sadly, we are no longer great.
And the reason we are no longer great is that we have decided that everything has its price. Even freedom.

Our newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet servicethey’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

The Internet became what it is today by providing equal opportunity to all through openness and innovation. By stifling this potential opportunity, we impair future innovation by individuals and small ad hoc organizations which are our primary source of innovation. The Internet is the last place an individual (or small organization) can compete, even against the corporate goliaths, on a multinational basis. We have the opportunity to finally bridge the “Digital Divide”. This is a win-win strategy for the Internet and its consumers. Don’t Give Away Our Airwaves to AT&T, Verizon and Comcast. The airwaves belong to the public, not the corporations. We need more competition and innovation, not more of the same. This new wireless spectrum must be open and neutral so that America can build a better Internet for everyone.

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution—brining us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They've spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives. I urge the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior.

I also feel that the big phone and cable companies shouldn't be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can't tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

Thank you!

From the beginning of broadcast the airwaves have been considered public. The FCC should continue to view all airwaves as such to give Americans as much access as possible, not to allow big business to grow bigger with very little benefit to the little guy on the street, in the park, or at the coffee shop. Real Americans, who have increasingly tight budgets, need the internet more and more to conduct their daily affairs. Giving control of these airwaves to a few big companies would just cut off even more Americans from the tools to help them become successful citizens.

I am a communications major from Washington St. University. As I remember the Communications Act of 1934, it stated,...”public interest, convenience, and necessity.” “Public” means public—not corporation.

The terms of the auction must include substantial profit based fines for any entity or person who does not use the newly available airwaves to promote competition and innovation. The oligopoly of the communication companies is already impeding competition and innovation and thus hurting consumers financially with every monthly payment they make. The airwaves must be used for public good!

Please remember that "We" means "we the people." We've already come a long way from the days when the airwaves were free - literally - and intended for public use.

Public airwaves are just that - public, and should not be sold or assigned to private corporations for profit.

James Mouritsen
SLC, UT 84102

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They've spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives. Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can't enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks.

I urge the FCC to protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves.

Dear Sirs,

It would be better if you awarded companies with the best ideas for developing the internet using the new medium of transmission, than to just give it to the highest bidder. Let's make sure resources that would benefit the public are not blocked by monopolistic trade practices. The public is watching, and will take action if its interests are not preserved.

Wireless innovators need to be able to enter the marketplace by accessing the public airwaves. The public airwaves need to have auction rules that prohibit anti-competition behavior. Don't keep innovative companies off the airwaves. Inventive minds have fed modern industry. Keep the public airwaves available to all, not just big corporations. Take a stand, make a difference, our future is in your hands. Use your mind and come up with solutions that benefit us all, not just the few.

Collected by MoveOn.org Civic Action
Eisenhower built an entire public highway system to assure common carriage. The FCC is here to PROTECT those airwaves. They belong to the American people.

By definition, a corporation cannot promote the public’s best interests over the interests of its stockholders. The internet is creating new opportunities and solutions for anyone with access because it is free to innovate and grow.

Japan and South Korea set the standard and are way ahead of us in access to this type of technology. Let us make a bold statement by leading ahead with a new frontier of open standards and innovation. The greater good for all our citizens and greater tax revenue for the government will quickly follow.
This issue is crucial to homeland security. In the wake of a disaster, and especially a pandemic, people will need to be able to communicate with families and doctors; attend online classes; work from home—all of which will be easier if more Americans have affordable, fast internet access, and if important innovations haven’t been squelched by lack of competition. Long live America—by the people, of the people, for the people—also known as the voters.

It is a great disservice to the American public to privatize airwaves and thereby prevent or limit access to the WWW and the global marketplace. It’s like forcing people to pay to go to the shopping mall to use the post office inside. On top of that, most private internet service is terrible and expensive compared to internet service in other countries. We are still using copper wires!! When will the public airwaves truly be the domain of the people, for the people, and by the people? Owners of the airwaves who don’t operate or manage, or influence the programming on the public airwaves can’t truly believe that "OUR" interest are being represented over "OUR" public airwaves, when private corporations are the "ONLY" entities that can market, advertise, sales and distribution over the "PUBLIC AIRWAVES".

A democracy that truly does not exists in "real time". Participation by the people in the decision making process that affects and informs all of our lives is what is needes. DO WE HAVE THIS KIND OF SYSTEM, OR NOT?

If not, why not?

We want real change, real now...

We already have a problem with agglomeration of broadcast companies. No one company should be allowed to own more than one portal in one location. Competition is the lifeblood of both innovation and our free market system. Keep the airwaves open.

Dear FCC members - do your duty to uphold the principle that the airwaves should be used for the public good. You MUST protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market. If you auction public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast, they will collude to set high prices. Only those who can afford it we be allowed to use it, which is not for the public good.

My comcast bill has gone up 7 times in the past year. What is going on? In the meantime, support for interent and cable problems has become a problem in itself. If they continue to gain so much of the airwaves, we will forever be at their mercy. Please open the airwaves to the public. Think about how wonderful the opening of the capabilities of the access too global positioning changed our lives for the good of all.

This is too important of an issue to let fall into control by any small number of large companies. The internet has revolutionized things like science and medicine by the simple fact that practitioners could communicate with their peers easily. It is changing the shape of the workplace, marketplace, and all the way down to personal communication. This trend is continuing, and allowing anything that would stifle competition will impact us ALL in a negative way. This would benefit poor and rich alike, from working class, to business class, to scientists, and on and on. The internet as allowed for telecommuting, and if that continues it can have a positive impact on our environment.

Allow wireless innovation to thrive and our lives will be transformed for the better. Anti-competitive behavior cannot be tolerated, and absolutely cannot be encouraged.

Public good should outweigh private gain. Do not allow the newly developed technology for use of the public airwaves be taken over by companies who would only get profits from what has been developed with a great deal of public funding.

Hi, I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

The action to put the airwaves in the exclusive control of Big Business is despicable. If you do this, you are a willing tool of the globalist corporate elite’s move to destroy American democracy and replace it with an authoritarian government. This is not the first time the FCC has surrendered to the interests it is supposed to regulate. The repeated media mergers of a few years ago have left a short fall of local media outlets. Daily papers among other outlets for information for the people have fallen by the wayside. We used to have local DJs all over the radio dial and now we have syndicated talk shows all over the dial.

Award the big companies control and we won’t know what is happening in the world if we happen to live too far away from a PBS outlet.

This is not the sort of society the Greatest Generation fought for in WW II and it is not the sort of society that we were willing to fight against in the years of the Cold War.

Keep the public airwaves free!

Sincerely yours

The Public Airwaves belong to the taxpayers. No more Corporate Welfare!

If corporations communicate so loudly, the voices of citizens will not be heard.

Would you protect the last frontier of democracy, the Internet and not allow it to be "owned" by the big comm companies!
We the people control the airwaves, not the telecommunication companies. We are entitled to the benefits that ALL free enterprise can bring, from the biggest to the smallest competitors. Those who do not agree with this American institution should consider moving to some of the communist counties of the world where media and communication control are common place.

I'm sick of being ripped off by Comcast and Verizon. Like other energy and information companies they have raised their rates to astronomical proportions simply in order to line the pockets of already insanely wealthy corporate executives. $4-5 a gallon for gas, $100 a month for television access. Competition used to keep prices affordable but a once great society has been bankrupted by corporate greed. Do not hand over our informational freedoms to companies only interested in personal profits. America needs to stay competitive and that competitiveness hinges on consumer buying power. I will vote you out of office. We need stronger consumer advocacy and an FCC not run by corporate cronies.

Dear Sirs: It is an old ploy of the fat cats to squash competition by buying budding competitors or by suing them into oblivion. Now can we add another, co-opting the federal regulators? It is antithetical to the very nature of the FCC to allow further corporate takeover of the airwaves—rightfully belonging to the American voter, who also turns out to be the American listener/internet user/consumer.

The public airwaves are an important resource which should not be sacrificed for the gain of private companies. Ultimately the airwaves should be used to broadcast legitimate public debates to get true information to voters and get the big money out of political campaigns. TV adds are the biggest cost to campaigns and there is no way to verify the content. Clever adds don’t offer information, they are designed to manipulate the public rather than inform. This affects everyone - and big business has enough big money!

Keep OUR airwaves open to all instead of selling to the behemoths. It's about time the FCC worked for the public again.

Dear Sirs,

We definitely need wireless net neutrality and what we do NOT need is giant companies like AT&T, Verizon and Comcast buying up administrative rights so that innovative technology is blocked. Please do the right thing and put the interests of the public as a whole above the interests of giant telecommunication companies.

It's in the public's best interest to be in control of public resources.

This country was built on competition, don't block it.

Give people some freedom now that many other freedoms are being taken away!

I am directly affected as an Internet user.

The Public Airways are just that: Public. We own them. The Government has already given much of them away to commercial interests, in return for a pittance of public service. Please don’t allow the moneyminded interests to corral the rest.

The airwaves have historically been seen as public property. Recently, fines have been levied against those who use the airwaves for indecent material, because it is a public forum. It is hypocritical to fine broadcasters for certain content, but then give control of the airwaves to a corporation or private entity. It is totally against the historic use of radio waves to privatize any portion of them now, and will only lead to a homogenization of content in this diverse nation.

I do NOT want public airwaves under control of BIG, PROFIT-ORIENTED CORPORATIONS. That is NOT an appropriate use of our PUBLIC resources. MEDIA conglomeration results in the WEAKENING of our DEMOCRACY which depends on an INFORMED CITIZENRY. DO NOT APPROVE THIS GIFT TO BIG COMPANIES.

I pay over $120 a month for the very basic usage of mobile & home phone (which I never use, but need it for my internet connection) and internet services. As a full time worker & full time student I have to sacrifice buying some text books to keep these services, yet, outside of home where I spend most of my time, I have no access to my internet. Often I have decided to drop one of these services to reduce cost, but which one, when I depend on all.

Public airwaves for the public good. Let competition prevail. No deals for fat cat Telcos.

Craig Manning

We have seen many examples of large corporations doing long term damage to our country even when they were subsidized with our tax dollars. Please do not let this happen on your watch. History will judge your actions as either in the service of the voters, or in the service of the corporations that bribe our congress everyday. Money doesn’t last forever, but your reputation will forever be a part of history. Which will you want to be remembered as.

I am so disgusted with this administration I could scream! It took years to break up AT&T and the Bell's only to let them merge back under this administration. This is a once-in-a-generation opportunity to increase public access to the internet in a fair and open way. The airwaves should belong to the public, not to large corporations which will use them to increase their profits, not to benefit those who need but cannot afford internet access in the current system. Please help improve the ability of all Americans to be connected to important resources by reserving this important resource for public use.

The Airwaves belong to the PUBLIC! The right to use those airwaves is a privilege, and companies with the means to use those airwaves, while having a right to earn money, have are obliged to do so only at the public’s behest and best interest. Freedom of speech is number one. To me, in this age that includes freedom to communicate. You are the stewards of that freedom for all of us. Think of the impact to future generations, the global community. We do not live in a vacuum or for corporate bottom line. I/we are citizens not ‘consumers’. The airwaves are meant for the good of all the public and MUST be protected.

The Public airwaves should not be sold to the highest bidder, but to aid, inform and allow private citizens and small start up companies the ability to compete in local markets. PBS and other public forms of television and radio are continually being shuffled out of marketplaces. We need more community access airwaves available to the people and not stifled by the mega-conglomerates. We also need free access to the internet and no control of access by ANY corporate/government industry.

I have noticed that my selections for just about anything are becoming increasingly small. Think Target, WalMart, HomeDepot, Starbucks, not to mention the oil, electric and telephone companies. My limited choices are starting to sound like the stories I grew up reading about the Soviet Union where people stood in long lines to buy ties that were all the same. Freedom of choice is healthy and keeps competition on their toes. This in end is supposed to allow for superior, creative products. With limited competition, where will be the drive to build a better product? And where will be the competition to keep prices at reasonable levels?

So many different ideas, opinions, and facts never make it to the airwaves due to the continuing consolidation of media – as news and as entertainment. We need more, not less, public airwaves. Plus we need the FCC to provide leadership within the US govt for making small, independent professional outlets compete better with the few large and dominant media companies.

We have a phenomenal time to help educate and empower the general populace of the country. With the growing prominence of countries like India, China, and other developing eastern block and southeastern asian countries, we need as much public access to information to compete. It boggles my mind to think that the FFC would even consider peddling an inherently free public resource. Such an act would sacrifice our children's and their children's future to enrich a few short-sighted (quarter-by-quarter, annual report to annual report) businesses. The inception of the Federal Communications Commission was intended to protect the interests of the American public from rampant corporatism. Allowing a corporate monopoly on technology and inhibiting market competition is in diametric opposition to what should be the goals of the FCC. Protect the public's interests, not the corporations'.

The internet and the airwaves should be for EVERYONE not big business. They should be affordable so that anyone who wishes to access them may do so. The internet has made huge strides in providing all kinds of opportunities for people that would not be available to them any other way. Control over it by large corporations will truly ruin the chance to compete in the internet marketplace. Furthermore, it has the propensity for hiding the truth in news reporting without allowing the opposing side of an issue to challenge the truth of a story. It could also cause the internet to be unaffordable for many to access, which might affect those who struggle to make ends meet and utilize the internet to help them look for work or assist their children in school. As a "downsized" boomer, I already feel the monthly cost of my DSL prohibitive, but have at present no alternative to what I currently use. Allowing more competition might show lower costs for many in the future. Allowing only a few big companies to control the internet will only drive costs higher for users. This is a bad idea all around for the public.

The electromagnetic spectrum is something that is as shared by all human beings as the air we breathe. Just as nobody can own our air, nobody can own the electro-magnetic spectrum. Who can own the color yellow? Or the color red? If congress made a law granting ownership of colors to corporations, there would be giant outcry. How is this any different?

If use of the electromagnetic spectrum needs to be regulated in order to prevent services from competing with one another over the same wavelengths, that is a serious concern. However, it should not be an auction process. Rather, the government should first deregulate the airwaves, and allow market-driven divisions of the spectrum to emerge. Only if there are disputes over the use of a certain frequency should the government step in, and first as arbitrator between the parties, and only second as judge.

Licensees of the public broadcast bands were once required to operate in the "public interest, convenience and necessity." They were required to provide public service programming and equal time for opposing views. But, over recent decades, they've wiggled out from under those responsibilities. Result: candidates must raise millions of dollars to get their messages out to citizens. Money has come to count for more in our democracy than votes. Broadcasters have effectively expropriated public property, renounced their public responsibilities, substituted entertainment for news and public affairs programming, thus, seriously weakening our democratic system. They've reaped vast power and profits with little to no return to the public beyond lowest common denominator programming.

We would be utter fools to repeat that mistake again.

I, Cathy C. Chapman, feel the airwaves should be used for the good of the public. A relevant situation occurred recently when my IBM preload of Microsoft software, bundled with Verizon broadband, became corrupted. These three (3) huge, multi-national companies: IBM/Lenovo, Verizon and Microsoft have a policy where they do not send instruction manuals or CDs with preloaded software. They say to go online and troubleshoot your computer problem that way. However, when the software malfunctions, you CAN'T go online and, since they refuse to send a manual and/or a CD, you cannot remove/restore your program to a previous state or read/research what you think the problem may be. In other words, these companies are deliberately hoarding information and refusing to share it with the paying public. Calling their tech support is a nightmare due to the "pass the buck" mentality and lack of training of some of their workers. I feel these huge, very profitable companies fear (and they should) that there are too many computer-savvy individuals who can pick up a manual or insert a CD and fix their own computer problems. Withholding manuals and CDs will be similar to buying the airwaves: they will control HOW/HOW MUCH the public has access to certain information. Cathy C. Chapman

I make a living providing websites to clients allowing them to get there business message to their clients. My job has been stifled already by AT&T's poor service and dominant position in the internet carrier industry. Ease of access, reliability and cost of internet access has been adversely affective by AT&T's new monopolistic growth. It would be wrong for the 80% of businesses who are small to be overrun yet again by the minority giant coporations. What is best for America isn't rampped up profits for the few, but new and open oppotunities for the many. I do not approve of this privatization of public air waves!

I urge you to keep our public airwaves for the PUBLIC GOOD.

The open airwaves can help free democracy continue in the USA and spread to the world. Our best path to creating a free world is communication.

Internet access is expensive enough, it should be more easily accessible to all.

These are the PUBLIC AIRWAVES and, unless these companies want to cut us all a check for using OUR airwaves for their own profit, then they (the airwaves) should be used for the greater public good, not the lesser PRIVATE greed.
The airways were conceived as a way to facilitate free exchange of ideas among citizens. Now phone & internet companies regard the airways as something we support and pay for to increase their profits.

The airwaves belong to the people not, the government, and not corporations. All the FCC actions need to represent the people and deliver the goods for the people. Keep the airwaves public and open for all to use.

Free speech is only possible if people can hear what is being said. Turning the airwaves over to a few big corporations put them in the position of monitoring our speech and deciding what is acceptable. That is hardly "free speech" which is a cornerstone for Democracy.

The public airways are like the air we breath, vital to well being and growth, and as such should be available to everyone. Enough of our world is in corporate hands and we have seen just how much corruption is in the corporate world with scandals like Enron, Walmart's spying on and mistreatment of workers, and Haliburton over charging for meals in Iraq. Enough is enough. Don't make the fatal mistake for the internet of putting more of it into fewer and less accountable hands. DO YOUR JOB AND PROTECT THE PUBLIC GOOD!!!

The US government should offer use of the airwaves to the taxpayers of the United States. It is totally unfair that our government would even consider giving the airwaves to communication companies to sit on while they drive up the cost to use their services. The 1996 Deregulation fractured American wireless landscape and created compatibility problems for our country. America now lags behind almost all other significant countries in terms of coherent footprint, wireless internet access and others. To assign the spectrum in a manner in which the public can benefit - particularly breaking the difficult and cumbersome issues regarding wireless in major metropolitan areas, will have, in my professional opinion, a positive effect upon our standing as a country in the world, inspiring others to communications careers and advancing our position as a people. There is little else than can be said, except that the obvious effect would be to complete the idea and vision of the 1996 Telco Deregulation act, by driving everyone to a compatible, extendible platform. Only the license of this spectrum to the public and not corporations.. will allow this. The effect on the economy as a whole will be massive. Healing the divisions of the country from IDEN, GSM, W/CDMA and others into one standard would mean multiplied footprint, coverage, and increased service - which will ultimately translate into a more vibrant, stronger wireless economy.

The BIG OIL corporations have driven us to the brink of extinction rather than develop sustainable transport. The Agri-Medical industry has poisoned us and taken away all food value. Wow, what a neat idea to let them run all of our communications too. NOT! All Corporations should be made illegal, since they obviously have been used to poison and stupefy us for short-term gain, which is clearly suicidal. Should we let these suicidal goons have ANY MORE POWER WHATSOEVER? ABSOLUTELY, UNEQUIVOCABLY NOT!

Establish and enforce a policy of airwaves for the public good. Hands off the internet.

The airwaves are a public trust and should not be given to commercial interests without a substantial quo pro quo.

Give public airwaves for public good a chance. There's no need to start paying a corporation for something we can keep in the public realm for very little tax dollars.
No, no, no! :)
James Murray

The airwaves belong to the people to use to their benefit. Therefore private companies should not be able to profit at our expense from unlimited access to the airwaves. The FCC should be determining how to best design access to the internet for everyone in this country. Big business should compensate the public for any access they get to the airwaves.

It is vital that the newly available airwaves not be assigned to the huge, long-established companies to monopolize in addition to what they already have; the wireless innovators are the new and extremely important potential providers of high-speed and unstifled internet for the country-dwellers and well as city, the the competition will help keep prices reasonable and content uncensored by the individual companies against one another and their customers.

The public has a right to use the airwaves for the good of general public. The big corporations are already controlling much too much or our airwaves. The Internet should be freely accessible to everyone. I am tired of the monopoly. The FCC’s job should be to protect the interests of the American people NOT the huge corporations. The giant Internet corporations would rather buy up the airwaves and sti on them than allow the public access to them. That is fascism. Stop giving corporations priority over people. Protect the American peoples’ right to choose independent companies instead of monopolies. Do not allow corporate giants to dominate small business and the American public. I am an AT&T customer but I would like the opportunity to choose new, competing companies as my provider. Thank you.

The airwaves belong to the American people,not corporations or corporate america!!! I and many other Americans would like to keep our public airwaves for the public good!!! I watch informative t.v. and I know if the FCC makes changes it would not be in the best interest of the American people,instead it will be in the best interest of corporations!!! I am 100% against what the FCC is trying to get by with which is to make sure that we the people only see what they WANT us to see,god forbid that the people should find out the truth about a lot of things that are going on in the world these days, well I know the truth about a lot of things. Keep our airwaves ours or I get the feeling you might find out about the power of the people.

In my youth I once thought CB radio was the final frontier for the first amendment. Was I wrong? Regardless, I expect the assignments of Citizen’s Band channels 19 and 9 to preserve current purposes should anyone’s cell phone fail. My cell phone fails. So does my internet connection. Both fail for many regularly enough. Much later in my youth I thought Public Access Cable TV had something going for it. I felt it too was the final frontier for the first amendment. Maybe I was wrong, as, by now I expect anyone with a computer has found a better avenue to express themselves worldwide, and this is precisely my point. Not that public television or radio should be cut back in any way, rather, because internet avenues allow them to LISTEN and respond to viewers/ listeners; Today I know for a fact the internet is the first, last, and final multidirectional frontier for the first amendment - the same first amendment written to allow for the creation of a public press including but not limited to new technologies, communication pathways, and I do fathom better governments and better internets of, by and for the people. In other words, unless bandwidth is reserved for, by, and of the people, no future power shall enjoy the shared wealth of common interpersonal communications, emails, postcards, business letters, or contracts of standard commerce. All common persons may elect to be corporate customers and must continue to be granted all god-given and sovereign rights to enjoy equality in all bandwidth and common communications given EQUAL ACCESS to PUBLIC pathways and opportunities enjoyed by all PUBLIC entities. Just in the ways so many millions are now globally accustomed, more so daily; in so many very important and interpersonal ways. This current state of our global transition from affordable home phone service to affordable global information services FREE OF CORPORATE OR OTHER GOVERNMENTAL INTERFERENCE must include God given, sovereign rights of we, the people. Herein, we demand bandwidth, and the continued right to protect bandwidth granted by our forebears.

Honorable Commissioners:
The airwaves, historically, have belonged to the people, not to individual companies. Please make a decision to let the internet grow, to move to Internet II and III and down the line and improve the quality of life for millions of Americans.

You KNOW what will happen if individual companies get their greedy mitts on them. Incidentally, I am a pretty good size stockholder in both Verizon and AT&T, but I DO NOT want them dictating and charging for what belongs to the American people.

I cannot think of anything more important than keeping the airwaves free, and having them used for the public good and not private profit, which will stifle debate and the free flow of information. The FCC already did the public a huge disservice by allowing so much media concentration. No one with any serious interest in news relies on big media, which has come to stand for news-for-profit, or ”no news”, just infotainment all the time. Please protect the public. thank you.

<td>The principle of public airwaves, and the foundation for the existance of the FCC, is the the airwaves be used for the public good; to turn them over to private corporations without even so much as a TRIAL few years at seeing what use the public could make of them in our technological era, well, that would seem like no less than an abdication and complete abandonment of FCC core mission. Please don’t sell the airwaves to major corporations- let small stakeholders purchase a majority of the bandwidth.

This is about fundamental economics. There is only 1 frequency space, and ownership should be an absolute minimum.

Thank you

Keep the airwaves public. Don’t sell or auction them off to private interests.

The way I see it, the sole purpose of government is to protect citizens from private greed. This is a chance to fulfill that mission.

Free speech and free air – free communication.

Equal access to the big pipes, too!

The airwaves should be a free speech zone equally open to everyone, without control by corporations.
Without an unbiased media, there can be no democracy. Keep media non-profit.

The FCC limits their own control by selling off bandwidth without knowing how it’s going to be used. I don’t see any reason for a wholesale auction at this point, when no one can reasonably evaluate it’s worth. I also don’t see why “use proposals” can’t be evaluated on a case-by-case basis for part of the bandwidth at a time.

No more giveaways to corporate entities—we only need to look at the price of gas nowadays to see what corporations are doing once they eliminate all their competition. Stop this abuse NOW!!!

Hi You all. Protect our airwaves and make them for all. We can't lose one beautiful word. We have to really improve our efforts here. We've built something important and beautiful. Don't let this be dismantled.

Serve only the public interest, it is time to put a bit more "social" into our democracy!
The public airwaves should be used by and for the public. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market - let the internet stay public access - it is a great resource which should not be limited.

Having watched over the past 30 years as the concept of the communication spectrum held and administered as a public trust has been turned into lip service rather than reality - I am appalled that the FCC is not living up to its responsibility to administer these resources for the common good. Not everything should have a price. America has been sold off piece by piece, pixel by pixel...shouldn't something remain in the hands of the public?

Keep the airways open.

Do you understand that the public owns these airwaves? Do you? You are only a governing body and have no right to sell, trade, or give away what you don't own.

In a healthy Democracy capitalism and corporate self interest never work for the public good and need to be regulated for the public good.

Please do not sell "the public's air-waves"!

Having a wide variety of users on the air waves is vitally important for providing a variety of sources of information and also a variety of ways for people to work cooperatively for the public good.

Further stifling competition by selling off high-bandwidth spectrum is a violation of the mandate that formed the FCC and must not be allowed to occur. These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

Don’t let this happen. In June, please decide to use the public airwaves for the public good. Don’t turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution.

As a librarian in Tennessee, where far too many of our communities’ libraries still do not provide broadband Internet access, I hope that the public airwaves will not be artificially fenced off in a way that prevents wireless broadband from being deployed to my state’s rural residents. In Africa, nations without the resources to lay copper wire have entered the modern communications era by “leapfrogging” with cellular deployment. We should not be artificially hindered from doing the same in Tennessee’s rural communities.

Since the repeal of the Fairness doctrine during the Reagan adminstration, news content in mass media has been extremely poor with the result that the public is less informed by the giant media corporations that dominate the airways, which are a public domain. There has been little public participation in determining the range and scope of news, with news broadcasting becoming more and more focused on entertainment and shock jock style broadcasting. The public airways should not be dominated by big business who do not have an ethic of service through information, but who are more interested in profit margins. War sells in an entertainment driven industry, and I believe this is one of the reasons television and radio newsbroadcasters failed so miserably to inform the public of the truth about the lack of an immanent threat from Iraq in 2003. They also have failed miserably in the broader context of foreign policy on a global scale. To top it off, local coverage gets sacrificed when media is consolidated. The public airways should be used for greater good of informing the citizenry, not misinforming them or distracting them from the important issues. Only through independent journalism, and public financed, but independent programing (I was appauled at Bill Moyers firing from PBS's Now), are the only assurances that the public will be informed. 25 years of extremely poor and shameful performance by the news media is proof enough that consolidation and privatization are essentially antidemocratic. Please keep are public airways free from the monopolies.

Large corporations in our country have ruled many of the things the consumer needs and the price we have to pay. As examples, look at gas prices, food prices (which also seem to increase every week), the exporting of American jobs overseas, companies using illegal aliens as workers, and so on. The American people have less and less money for their everyday lives, while the corporate world gets richer and richer. The Internet has basically been accessible to anyone and its access is reasonable. However, now the large corporations want to have control of Internet access and who knows what will happen. The Internet should be kept open for any and all innovators to use and improve. Please do NOT give a large portion of the public airwaves to these companies, such as AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, and so on. Thank you for letting me express my opinion. Regards,

Ellen Eggers

We need more competition, not a stranglehold going to the three or four majors. Heck, I’ve been saddled with Cablevision and the Dolan family throttling my upload speeds for nine years, until they recently lifted speeds because FIOS got into the area. Imagine what’ll happen to prices if there is some true competition.

PLEASE USE THE AIRWAVES FOR THE PUBLIC GOOD. As a verizon land-line customer, I am unable to get a high speed internet connection even though I live in a housing development of 150+ houses. I have been told that even though we are within 1500 feet of the connection, they are not interested in running a line to our development. It may have to do with living in West Virginia which has a low percentage of home computer owners WHO PAY AN ADDED AMOUNT ON EVERY MONTH’S TELEPHONE BILL TO SUPPORT FAST CONNECTIONS IN PUBLIC LIBRARIES. My connection [NOT MY COMPUTER] is too slow for Skype or Vonage also.

Use of these frequencies should be reserved for public use - municipalities, etc. so they can provide basic connectivity to all citizens, for free. Those of us with more means will always choose to pay for more bandwidth, but those who can't afford it, need to be assured free access. Dear Members of the FCC,
The idea of turning over public airwaves to megamedia moguls, regardless of HOW much they can pay, would be a betrayal of everything that an official elected to serve ALL constituents, should stand for. The people who would do this, would sell us the very air we breathe if they could prevent us from breathing it free. (In fact, some of them are the very people who choose to poison that air.) Any elected official who doesn't stand up vigorously against this incredible greed, is just as bad. I'll be watching this closely, and since writing is what I do, I'll work extra hours to inform friends, relatives and the public what's going on, and who's responsible. I will NOT vote for anyone who doesn't oppose this madness, and I'll join every campaign to get those people out of office. I also will work just as hard to get out the word in favor of those, regardless of party, who oppose it.

The public airways belong to the people of the United States, not the FCC, the Bush gang, Congress, and certainly not AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, or any other major contributors to the republican party. DO NOT ALLOW THOSE HUGE CORPORATIONS TO TAKE OVER OUR AIRWAYS. REMEMBER, THEY BELONG TO ALL OF THE PEOPLE, NOT JUST A SMALL HANDFUL THAT GIVE BIG BUCKS TO THE WORSE PRESIDENT IN THE HISTORY OF THIS COUNTRY AND HIS HANDLERS IN THE VARIOUS FEDERAL AGENCIES (e.g.) the FCC). ALSO REMEMBER, THEYRE WILL BE A DAY OF RECKONING FOR ALL OF THESE TYPES OF ACTIONS AGAINST THE PEOPLE OF THIS COUNTRY. 2008 is not too far away.

Since its inception decades ago, the FCC has been charged with the responsibility of assuring THE PUBLIC GOOD in communications. Please remember your mandate, and assure general access to the broadest spectrum of services, bandwidth and connectivity, by preventing the hijacking of these resources by business interests who would tend to hold them unused or turn them into weapons against our own citizens. This country is already far behind in connectivity compared to many other countries; open up the spectrum for innovation, not close-held, dog-in-the-manger obstruction!

Already, far too great a proportion of our public airwaves is controlled by a few major corporations. Research strongly suggests that this allocation of the airwaves has led to homogenous and shallow program which does not serve the public interest. The airwaves are a scarce, publicly owned resource which ought to be used in a way that benefits its owners.

It should be plain that the set of corporate interests do not often or reasonably intersect individual interests; in the case of a freely available resource that does not require active service to maintain or harvest, there simply should not be legislation granting ownership of said resource to any body but the public.

I am 68 years old, and I regard the Internet as the greatest technological development of my lifetime, and possibly in the history of the world. Information is power and, through the Internet, people in the poorest and most remote areas of the earth have access to more information than was available to families like mine through school and libraries when I was growing up. This new access has the potential to change the world in undreamed-of ways. Please don’t allow private corporations to limit access to those who can afford it or control the dissemination of information. The future depends on your decision!

Dr. Janine H. Burns

There is no way in hell that these few companies will get control over the public airwaves...we just aren’t going to take it any more and if need be revolt, cancel our current subscriptions, and possibly a lot worse things...don’t tempt us, as we have had enough of the raping and pilaging that has been going on during the last 6-7 years of the current administration’s careless handling / management... now you are talking ”fighting words” and we will fight these corporations to death if we have to. Take notice.

Radio and much of TV is still a vast waste which is a terrible shame since it can do so much good. Commercial broadcasters should have access to the airwaves only by auction and for a limited time no more than five years per auction. Public non-commercial broadcasters should be given a much larger slice of the pie!

The internet was developed using U.S. citizen's funds and is one of the most innovative developments in history of communication. The public airwaves, internet and broadcasting, should be available and affordable to the public. The information and ideas that can be shared are essential to the education, innovation, and quality of the life of the U.S. citizenry. One only has to look at the (poor, banal) quality and high cost of much private broadcasting to see that there must be accessible affordable options for information access if the U.S. is to remain a significant global participant.

Information is hard to come by, let alone an alternative voice. If we are to have freedom of expression in this country we must provide a forum for it. As the FCC your job is to protect the right of the public's access to our airwaves for the overall good of the American people. Limiting access to only those who can afford it is not fair to those who cannot. Rich or poor we are all Americans. Our airwaves are ours and should not be sold off to anyone.

The fact that only endorsed phones will work on some networks is hopefully going to be where the line is drawn on this issue. Those airwaves have been for the public use since the inception of the FCC. The FCC used to be about making sure that all voices got a chance to be heard. The FCC owes it to U.S. citizens to establish policies that incent high speed internet access across the nation. If AT&T, Comcast, Verizon and the like are held accountable to provide this with their purchase, no problem. They should not be permitted to buy this bandwidth, then develop/market it to only profitable (densely populate, affluent) areas of the country. Businesses of all sizes and students of all ages must have high-speed access, no matter where there are physically located.

This is another attempt to dismantle our government. This administration is in love with the word ”Pivatize”, turn everything over to the Corporate Barrons...

The telecommunication giants have not acted in the public welfare in their use of the airways. They will not now if they are given more. These airways MUST not be given to these giants. If they are allowed to use them, they MUST pay thousands of percents more than want they are paying now. American airways for Americans and their good - not for the corporations. Thank you.

Public airways are exactly that - they belong to the public. Small and start-up companies in the cable and telecommunication industries are where the innovations are, as well as the competition to keep the larger companies on their toes and keep their prices in line. I'm limited to Comcast for my TV and internet cable connections. I think that's called "monopoly." I'm extremely pleased to have a small company, with excellent results - and lower fees than Verizon, Comcast or AT&T, for my digital phone connection.

If you give away (auction off) "our" airwaves to the existing big companies, you stifle competition, start-ups, innovation, and all the ingenuity that works to make prices affordable and services excellent. It may be a really good deal for corporations such as AT&T, Comcast and Verizon, but they are certainly not the guardians of the public domain; the FCC is. Please fulfill your functions in keeping a significant portions of the public airwaves out of the hands of already overly-large telecommunication companies, and reserved for smaller companies, competition, and all the ingenuity that goes with that, historically distinguishing this country in which people with ideas and gumption have opportunity to use it and aren't squelched by Giants and their power to gobble up all the available resources.

Do you job for John Q. Public, not J.P. Corporation.

Thank you very much for your serious attention to this very serious matter, and for understanding that it has great relevance to the issue of internet neutrality as well.

I believe public internet access should be expanded. I already pay for internet access at home, but as a small business owner, I am on the road an awful lot and note the lack of these public facilities. If the choice were between having more airwaves to buy, or expanding public use of the internet, I would opt for the latter.

I recently had to change DSL providers because my small provider, who hired Americans for customer service and tech support, could no longer afford to compete with giants like Verizon and Comcast. I was willing to pay higher prices for the sake of having better customer service. Yes, American customer service IS better, faster, and more efficient for Americans. Handing the airwaves over to these mega-corporations will monopolize the business. It will harm small businesses and ultimately be bad for the US economy.

Please reconsider how this privatizing of the airwaves will affect the average citizen. Most people use the airways to communicate through internet and telephone usage that provides free or at least low cost access. These private companies already get much compensation from the public. Protection of the airwaves to keep them public should be a high priority for the FPPC, since the DFPPC is supposed to be an oversight agency to protect the public interests. No good can come from lessening the access to the public. One of the basic freedoms left in this country–freedom of speech, which the public airwaves provide.

Since the FCC has all but removed public access requirements for licensing of radio and TV stations, we need to at preserve some of these airwaves for public use. Don't sell our airwaves! Use long term leases and set aside a reasonable amount for public access. If a reasonable public use cannot be found, then lease the air space. But at least give communities a chance to put the air space to public use first. Also, if a leasee abuses the airwaves, then that spectrum license should be revoked, and considered for public use.

The internet is an increasingly important tool to get information and news from a diverse range of sources. In fact, since the TV airwaves are almost entirely owned by huge corporations and the news has been watered down to stories that barely go into depth about what is important in our world (American Idol instead of a detailed analysis about the world economy, local issues, foreign conflicts or immigration), the internet has become my primary source of information. Huge corporations have already proved they can't properly distribute information to us. The people need control over their information sources in order to access information we have a right to know. Don't sell off the airwaves to the highest bidder again.

The public will need this bandwith in the future if it has any chance to preserve our dwindling republic. Please look at the issue as if you were a responsible doctor and "do no harm". We must preserve some medium for unbiased public discourse in this country. Our way of life and professed ideals are being "privatized" and it is absolutely the end of our nation if we don't reverse the current trend. Preserve these new frequencies for the American people and insist that any entity who buys the new frequencies have a plan to utilize it. Do not allow the media giants to do what the oil companies do with our energy innovations (buy the patent and bury it). Make the media accountable to the people it is suppose to serve!

I have high speed wireless internet service in a rural area that is supplied by La Canada Wireless Assn., a 501(c)(12) not-for-profit association in the Santa Fe, NM area. Instead of giving our public airwaves to for-profit companies, I would like to see the FCC create a separate section of their rules (similar in some respects to Part 97 which provides for the Amateur Radio Service) to instigate a Wireless Internet Service. This new service could be either separate from or a part of the Amateur Radio Service. Appropriate distribution of frequencies would follow.

The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private gain instead of the public good.

These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access—beaming high-speed Internet signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America at more affordable prices than current Internet service. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

In June you will make a major decision: Use the public airwaves for the public good, or turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution.

The public airwaves should be used for the public good. The government must protect our airwaves from corporate gatekeepers who would stifle innovation and competition in the wireless Internet market.

There are many innovative companies jumping at the opportunity to forge ahead with the wireless Internet revolution—bringing us high-speed wireless networks from coast to coast and all sorts of innovative wireless devices. But the old phone and cable companies are aggressively trying to block this progress. They’ve spent billions laying wires, and they enjoy having their customers locked in with few alternatives.

Without access to the public airwaves, wireless innovators can’t enter the marketplace. So the strategy of companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast is to buy the administrative rights of our airwaves at auction and then use those rights to block competition. They also stifle the development of new wireless devices by only letting their own endorsed products work on their networks.

I respectfully request that the FCC protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit this anti-competitive behavior. If the government auctioned off the right to maintain a public highway to Ford, we would certainly not let Ford block Toyotas from the roads. Likewise, big phone and cable should not be able to keep innovative companies off our airwaves. They also shouldn’t be able to tell their wireless Internet customers which websites they can access as they do now. And just as phone companies can’t tell customers what phones can be plugged into a wall jack, cell and wireless companies should not be able to dictate which phones or wireless devices people use on their networks.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Please vote to use the public airwaves for the public good!

What possible overall PUBLIC benefit is there to auctioning off the limited bandwidth left? It is in the citizens of the United States to maintain ownership of the airwaves for the greatest common good as the public sees fit, term.

Do the right thing...

There are so many people with home PC's now, that it doesn't make sense to sell off available frequencies to corporate giants—especially when existing servers customers experience lengthy waits just to get online at times of peak use.

Please don’t sell out our airwaves to the highest bidder. The freedom of competition must be governed by the federal government. Corporations already have way too much control over the policies of government, don’t give them anymore, they don't represent the public interests, only corporate interests.

Please do not hand over the Internet to large corporations. It will stifle innovation, and completely kill the appeal of the Internet. The information superhighway should remain open and free-wheeling. Large media and telecommunications companies have already done too much to control and homogenize our discourse. Please make them keep their greedy mitts off the Internet.

I am a customer of Verizon and Comcast. I use both and their costs always go up, almost in lockstep. The only competition is for who can raise their price most without being noticed - and simultaneously offer the bare minimum in service and dependability. Their pricing is not transparent, and is designed to obfuscate to the point of 'bait and switch.' Clearly they do not invest in service or dependability. They prefer to invest primarily in augmenting their cashflow and profits to the detriment of their customers.

I also am an Earthlink customer - which happens to be the chosen vendor for Philadelphia’s (municipally contracted) citywide wireless program. The pricing there (and on my own account) is lower and transparent. The quality of service is equal or better, and the dependability is clearly superior.

It would seem to suggest strongly that there is a better option than selling bandwidth to the firms with the largest free cashflow - rather than the best service. It would also suggest that there isn’t enough competition for the market to work, and that another model could at a minimum stimulate competition.

Sincerely,

Heywood Sloane

Please, do not allow any further laws to be passed that would permit any greater control of the public airwaves by giant corporations. They have shown a relentless drive to control the flow of information in this country in ways that profoundly distort the way news and editorial opinion is conveyed to the general public. This is so very wrong and dangerous to our democratic principles.

As you realize, the airwaves belong to the public. This is part of our public trust and there is an urgent reason for this. The airwaves and their free public use is an essential tool for democracy. I have been disturbed by the way you have steward this trust- bowing to powerful media interests. The airwaves must not be sold on the common market to gatekeepers with special interests. Access to information via the internet is essential to an informed citizenry and the gates to this information should not be closed to the poor. I fear that this moment with tremendous potential for good- civic minded initiatives for free wireless parks and public spaces- will be derailed if large communications companies are allowed to buy administrative rights. What could possibly induce them to restrain the power they would then have? The access to the airwaves must not be auctioned off on a competitive market. Small, visionary companies, and websites with alternative messages will certainly be compromised by this and for this, our republic will suffer.

Jennifer Nelson

The air waves are public and should remain public!!

At&T was broken up because it was a Monopoly...just adding a couple of more names does not change the reality that this is what it will become again.

Use the public airwaves for the public good, not for private profit. Democracy depends on it!

Don't do it!

Please do not sell the available public airways to private corporations—they are too valuable a public resource. As an urban school teacher, I see the ‘digital divide’ broaden every school year. Please instead create public wifi, as Philly has done, to help all citizens gain access to reliable free internet.

Freedom of speech, if that’s at all meaningful to you, means freedom of the written word, of the media, and therefore the Internet. Whose voice are you afraid of? Whose opinion? Whose discoveries? Whose vote?

Let the people control the internet...keep corporate American out.
If you give another citizens right away to large companis what do you expect will happen to our country if this continues. Keep the air waves for the people!

The free use of wireless internet capabilities is critical to America’s long-term success. Other nations are already ahead of us in this critical field and any move that stifles the ability of American entrepreneurs to innovate and use this public resource must be rejected out of hand. That includes the current attempt by AT&T, Verizon, Comcast, et. al. to buy up wireless frequencies and thus keep them out of the hands of the public and these same entrepreneurs. I strongly urge the FCC not to allow this to occur, for the good of our nation.

For the people, of the people and by the people should be left intact as long the United States OF America remains a nation of the same. As more and more of exising public functions are spun off to corporations, Facist ideals become more prominent. Remember when the corporations took control of Germany who in turn planned and tried to control the world? The world, today, is smaller than the United States because of communication and transportation methods now available and becomming smaller every year.

The bundling of services continues to trap Americans such as myself into paying for services we neither need nor want (in my case, landline telephone services).

If it were possible to access wireless services without such landline use – even for a fee – I would be much happier, and better able to manage my bills. I do not need both long distance landline and long distance cellular service.

Please keep the public airwaves free, and available for competition. We seem to be trailing many foreign countries because we are being sold out to corporate America. Help us get faster, dependable and cheaper service so we can remain competitive in the world of communications instead of trailing the rest of the world due to the rationing of service of companies who want to maintain a monopoly and ration the service in order to maximize profits, while limiting our available choices.

Republicanas so often like to use ”Freedome from regulation” as a mantra to win over American’s rightly suspicious of improper power in the hands of too few people. This is a great opportunity for REAL Republicanas to show us that WE the people can be trusted to regulate our OWN airwaves. Do not cower before the money hounds! Stand up for us! Verizon, AT&T, and Comcast are wealthy enough. Where, as President Bush, Jr. would say, is the competitive, innovative, and entrepreneurial spirit in creating and-or cementing the oligarchical communications chokehold of the aforementioned 'immense three' by letting them have all the public airwave space? Having only three communications companies kills competition, stifles creativity, limits the number of people who might profit or become wealthy from having access to the public airwaves. The disparity between rich and poor is already too wide, this will just make it that much worse, retarding our slowing economy, doing nothing but hurting badly my beloved United States.

The President & Congress passed the Communications Satellite Act in 1962 to interconnect ubiquitous space technologies with voice and data for global economic development, national security and open access for poor and developing countries to these same advantages. Later DARPA/ARPA started the concept of interconnecting the world through the use of space and land-based technologies. With every new technological innovation the phone companies have lobbied for their interests to prevent competition and stifle citizen access to the use of airwaves and local signals. With the multitude of new innovations, each time that FCC has yielded to the phone company lobbying, citizens and government lost out and the cost to consumers and taxpayers has been huge. In the end, congress and the FCC has had to pull back and give the competitive advantages to the consumers, especially those in greatest need, those living in rural, agricultural and hard to reach areas. Why must we repeat these same mistakes, each time a new technological innovation comes into use and the greed and power of the communications corporations tries to limit the use of public airwaves to stifle competition. Let’s see FCC do it right the first time out, this time. The public doesn’t need corporate gatekeepers to protect what they already own.

Thank you for your consideration.

Verizon has been slow to offer improved service to my city while it offers high-speed fiber optic service to a wealthy adjacent town. As a librarian I have learned that internet access has quickly become a necessity and should be treated as a right, not a privilege.

The United States needs low cost or no cost WiFi throughout the US to keep our country at the forefront of technology innovation and ahead of our international competition.

I live in an area where ATT and Verizon will not provide high speed internet – not profitable. Giving them control over these airwaves will stifle the expansion and access to the internet even further. I oppose this privatization of the airwaves. I have Verizon cell service but don’t use their internet services – too expensive.

With the decline in newspaper companies, it is essential that we keep the net free for those of us who want the truth. So some degree, the newspaper chains brought this on themselves by not printing relevant news and simply parroting the government line. Now some of the journalists who are leaving the newspapers will be writing on the web. We need this freedom or we will have lost the last place for people to read and write the news that will save this country. Do not let these companies who have proven themselves to be corporate friends and not the people’s take away our country.

Cecile Smith

Public airways should also provide FREE political advertisement to bone fide candidates, using the licensed entity as the avenue of publishing. Licensees should be required to provide at least 1,000 hours of free political advertising. This would help reduce the need for, costs, and bad effect, of political contributions.

Stop giving in to big business, we the people rule, not Bush and his cronies.

Roy Vanderleeie

The millions of dollars needed for a run for office are to spent purchasing "spots" on television. BAN THEM!! They are PUBLIC air waves. The networks reap obscene profits while we are losing our country to corporate thieves (the BIG campaign donors). Running for office should include FREE use of the public airwaves in the form of debates (the interview process) which are far more informative. Contrary to the media spin that people don't want "debates," they are generally the highest rated program when they occur (though not "profitable"). A couple of commercial free hours a hours a month wouldn't kill the networks; serving the public might increase their stature.

To the Federal Communications Commission,
This decision on whether or not to auction off the public airwaves to private companies will have long term ramifications for our country. Please consider the long range effects on whatever decision you make.

Just look at what the oil company monopolies have done for our gas prices. Do we want the same thing for our public airwaves? For the good of the country I would hope the answer is a resounding "No!"

Thanks for your consideration.

Please remeber that you are here to serve Americans - the people of this democracy - not bureaucrats who want to make money.
Republicans say "let the private sector do it" OK then don't give our airwaves to the mega corporations. Keep internet freely competing. It's the American way.

Since the breakup of AT&T we have seen a huge increase in innovation and entirely new business sectors created in both communications and technology. Learn from history. Stifling innovation and putting all the power into one or a few companies never helps the economy, never adds jobs, never creates something new, never adds to the common good. Vote for the entire economy, not just the pockets of a few companies that may have given you some nice contributions. It’s not about them. It’s about you and me.

Re: Public Airwaves To Be Given To Private Companies
Date: May 31, 2007

Please do not give away any of the public airways, present and/or future. After 31 years of full-time work and another 11 years of part-time work I presently find myself with several chronic conditions (CA, diabetes, severely hard-of-hearing, etc.). As I am basically homebound, my main source of communication and enjoyment (and anger at greedy, corrupt politicians) is on the internet. If it is taken away instead of being allowed to grow; I shall blame all of you and yours forever. I think there are going to be massive positive changes ahead for all of us. I hope you will do your part to make it so. Please keep our public airwaves public, for your sake and mine. Thanks, Selling the airwaves to the mega corporations is just wrong. Our present system is great in that it encourages innovation and is easily accessed by everyone who has access to even a community library.

We know that corporate interests lie only in profit unless or until the federal government intervenes.

Since there is no need to maintain the internet and wireless systems by large monolithic businesses why invite the inevitable problem that monopolies bring.

Stop this disturbing trend of selling the USA to corporate interests.

What are our Government Officials thinking? Is the FCC dealing with a full deck of cards or what? It doesn’t take a college grad to know that to even consider such a foolish handover of the public airwaves to “BIG BUSINESS”. Doing so would cause great harm to the true independent voices from venturing into the world of communications for the sole purpose of competition and truth telling... This is a really flawed idea and it must be abandoned. Keep our public airwaves out of the hands of big business. It will be devastating to the freedoms we stand upon and defend with our lives in this country.... Don’t stifle competition or innovation when we need truth telling more than ever in this great country of ours...

Hi,
I just learned about a really important issue, and signed a petition about it. The federal government is on the verge of turning over a huge portion of our public airwaves to companies like AT&T, Verizon, and Comcast—who will use them for private enrichment instead of the public good.
These newly available airwaves are a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize Internet access – beaming high-speed signals to every park bench, coffee shop, workplace, and home in America. Phone and cable companies don’t want this competition to their Internet service—they’d rather purchase the airwaves at auction and sit on them.

CAN’T YOU PEOPLE LEAVE US SOMETHING WE CAN CALL OUR OWN.EVERYDAY YOU BUREAUCRATS STRIP AWAY WHAT VESTIGES OF FREEDOM WE HAVE LEFT.

James E Brown
COLUMBUS, OH 43214

It’s funny how certain political interests point to statements like . . . “the market place will determine which product is best”, and then promote the stifling of competition and evolving progress with government favoritism through laws and rules which subject the market to the self-serving profit making decisions of a few super rich corporations.

Do not make this important decision in favor of their interests. Demand and insist upon a result which mandates development in the public interest. The “airwaves” are this nation’s public properties which are held in your trust. Protect them for the greatest public good with mandated development and availability for public use.

Government is supposed to be for the people, and in my understanding that means all its citizens, and NOT the Corporations (Corporations are NOT people, nor are they citizens). It is your job . . . what YOU are paid by us . . . to do! Protect our short and long term interests.

Thank you.

The FCC should not turn over public airwaves to corporations so that they can become monopolies as telecommunications has become. Our landline phone companies are already monopolies and giving away public airspace in the same manner will stifle freedom of the web and healthy competition.

There are vast differences in the education poor children in communities with few resources receive as opposed to the education children in wealthier families and more affluent communities receive. The key to upward mobility is education. The internet is such an integral part of education today, both in schools and in homes. By allowing private companies to buy the public’s airwaves and sell them back to us for profit, we will be cutting many of our neediest schools and families off from the greatest educational resource we have, thus helping to perpetuate the cycle of poverty in areas where schools are already so underfunded that they do not have the most basic educational tools. The airwaves belong to the people and corporate America should not be allowed to confiscate them, package them, and sell them back to us for enormous profits.

It is important to me and many others that there be a place where opinions that differ from the commercial /Governmental view can be aired. The public needs Public Airwaves to be used as forum for opinions. Please keep the public airwaves public. Just look at commercial TV, is that what you want intellectual radio to be like? It is just palin mindless junk aimed at dumbing down the American public.

Despite being the inventors of The Internet, the United States lags FAR behind many other countries in both broadband speed and availability, all because the telecommunication companies would rather stifle competition rather than spend the money to grow and expand.

I have been had the same service for more than 15 years. Us West sold to Airtouch. Then Verizon purchased Airtouch. I have to sign a new 2 year contract to get a new phone although I have had only 4 phones in more than 15 years. My contract is up Aug. 2008 at which time I will be shopping. I don't think any company should be able to control public airways. They should take better care of the strong holds they already have.

It is bizarre to drive from Calif. to New York over 6 days and hear the same formula of "choice/variety" everywhere and every day on many of the same numbers on the dial. The beauty of the United States has always been the great varieties across the nation. Giving a handful of very rich men ownership of the majority of the airwaves, sets up mediocrity and monotonous advertising schemes.

In spite of abuses, the internet has been the greatest thing to ever happen to freedom of speech. For the first time in human history, the common man has the power to publish. Free and open information sharing has promoted innovation, commerce and community. Ironically, it is this very type of progress that has given rise to the huge opportunities that big communications corporations which to pursue. Ultimately, by promoting an environment in which wireless connectivity is not controlled by commercial interests, the FCC will ensure that individuals and corporations alike can carry forward the spirit that has fueled the internet and wireless revolutions. As users of the internet and technology, you know that it does not require a huge conglomerate to publish or consume online content. As stewards of the public airwaves, please act to keep the airwaves solidly in the domain of publicly controlled resources where they can be of greatest benefit to all interests.

Dave Bricker

Presently, the United States federal government, including you, are nothing more than the corrupted and fascist muscle of the sociopathic, anti-life and anti-liberty, Bush Crime Family. If the present logic-defying course of freedom-smashing actions continue, it will not be long before there is either total destruction of our society through the wear and tear of endless theft and death, or a rising up of the 70% of the population who are plain fed-up with the persistent corruption. That is what has always taken place anywhere and anytime in history when murderous and power-mad dictators attempt to seize control. It will certainly not be any different this time around with your champion Bush and his two-digit I.Q. You are such fools!

A democracy is only as good as the quality of its citizenry. The quality of its citizenry depends on the quality of news and information available. The quality of news and information is directly proportional to the level of 'disinterest' by those who produce it. Corporations are, by definition, highly interested organizations with legal mandates to further these interests (ie. corporate profits) and therefore are a poor custodian of these public airwaves.

John Wattws

The Internet is a vital piece of our present and future economy. It needs to remain unfettered in order to flourish. Allowing the telecom giants to take control of these airways will have a detrimentally effect on that future economy, the one your children and grandchildren will have to live with. Keep them in mind when you vote.

As a lifelong Amateur Radio operator, NZ1M, and FCC Examiner for Amateur Radio licenses, I've observed that corporate “ownership” of airwaves does not translate into more services being offered to consumers. Often the opposite is true: planned non-operation of frequencies is more often the case. Thus, the community - users of public airwaves - is only deprived of more spectrum.

Is this what we want? I think not. Let's keep in mind that public spectrum is, indeed, public! Advancement in radio technology is most always incubated in the public sector. In 1972 USA's public schools rated #1, worldwide, in public education. Now, sadly, we rank 19th. Please don’t corporatize our frequencies and see the same demise in RF development.

Respectfully, Paul Levey, NZ1M

Use PUBLIC Airways for the PUBLIC not corporations already making a huge monopolized profit off of the backs of our people.

We need a neutral internet and TRUE competition in the communications business. This is a lousy deal for everyone who won't directly profit financially. Keep the internet NEUTRAL and FREE!

It's imperative that you keep the public Internet Public. You will absolutely curb American innovation if you privatize the Internet.

Public airways should be able to be accessed by multiple parties/companies, not just by the strongest, wealthiest and most well-known companies who want to dictate what people can access. Please support the competition and the people who want options. Thank you!

Please protect the public good by setting auction rules that prohibit anti-competitive behavior. As a customer of wireless products and an avid internet user, I believe allowing private industry to control the airwaves will hurt the public, stifle speech, and harm our democracy. PLEASE choose to use the public airwaves for the public good - rather than turn them over to big companies who will stifle competition, innovation, and the wireless Internet revolution!!

Don't give away our vital communications to commercial interests. Open communication is part of the basis of free society, and corporations are more concerned with profit than our freedoms.

I agree, all public airwaves should be protected via the internet, etc.

FCC: keep the airwaves for "THE PEOPLE," not for businesses to buy and sell to THE PEOPLE! The airwaves are ours not theirs to sell to what is already ours! SK

Greed ruins all good things. Do not exaserbate the reach of greediness by giving up my access to the public airwaves for corporate profit.

Digital inclusion assists all in pursuing the quality of life and the careers dreamed of by all. It gives the same success tools that middle and upper class tech-savvy people take for granted to all. At least it gives the opportunity, so let’s have wireless Internet cover the USA for the public good!
