

I Use the Internet for Everything!

I use the internet for practically everything in my life--for email, both business and personal; for connecting to my consulting clients; for looking up all kinds of information constantly and instantly; for shopping; for reading daily news; for on-line banking; for downloading software; for playing bridge on-line, and much, much more. Access to the internet should be not guarded by a few big telecom companies. The internet is the most wonderful resource imaginable, and it needs to stay that way.
