

Why not live in China?

When will the government stop kissing up to big money and corporations. The FCCs interference in an open and neutral internet is just another excruciating example of how this administration poses as small government, but yet again opens the doors to monopolies and further infringement on citizens rights. Isn't it enough that our emails and phone calls are being tapped into, now must we allow big corporations decide what and which pathways citizens can use online? The FCC should be ashamed of itself. It should spend its anergy and focus finding online predators rather than trying to find one more way to monitor citizens.
