

Please don't take away our rights!

I am an online game developer. Our indie games are made inexpensively and distributed online inexpensively or freely in some cases. The abolishment of net neutrality will certainly result in losing my business (with 3 employees) and force me to start from scratch in learning an entirely new trade. There is no question that the giant media conglomerates will charge online businesses and users hefty and unwarranted fees for the use of something that has become a utility for every US citizen in the information age. Destroying net neutrality will needlessly hurt everyone's access to free information and entertainment, and will cripple online trade in the US. Please don't sell our rights to companies that already have plenty of money.
