

Info highway as important as goods highways.

When I heard of the telecom companies plans to overhaul how the internet works and how content is delivered, I was shocked. Congress didn't go along. The FCC must not either. Until something else is invented, the Internet is the ONLY highway system for information. Paved roads (Interstate, state hwys, local roads, etc.) are the ONLY highway system for goods and people. We'd never allow unequal access to it on any basis (money, influence, etc.). Information is no less important and it's equally inconceivable and economically damaging to allow unequal access to its only highway.
