

I am concerned with the potential cap on USF funds for wireless providers in the state of Oregon. With the new digital technology, coverage is still rather limited. I am aware of carriers trying to provide additional coverage or cell sites but with the terrain, it is tough. As you may be aware last winter the Kim family lost a loved one in the mountains of Oregon. Cellular service would have saved the Kim family from the loss of their husband/father. Not placing a cap on USF funding will provide the funding to continue network buildout and hopefully, prevent future tragedies due to a lack of cellular service.
