

I support the merger of Sirius and XM Radio. I believe there is sufficient competition in the online entertainment industry. As a consumer, I am very interested in seeing the success of satellite radio. But in the current stalemate between the two rivals, hardware adoption has been disappointingly slow. I feel the merger would encourage more hardware adoption and make it easier for consumers to use the service. Not to mention the benefits of combined programming. After the merger, satellite radio would then be able to compete with free terrestrial radio.
