

I teach online

I teach several courses online. I depend on the free, open and democratic internet to deliver my podcast lectures, receive their papers, and communicate with students. Because I teach media studies (television and advertising) my online courses also depend upon my students' ability to access things like television shows and advertisements that are available on the internet. Net Neutrality is crucial to my ability to educate my students about the media. Please do not let a few powerful interest suppress the democratic potential and throttle our ability to use the internet to educate America's young people. Put the well being of all citizens before the profits of a few already profitable corporations.

Thank you.
