

Keep Equal Internet Access for all People

The interests of large corporations appear to be more important than the citizens' democratic freedoms. Individuals within our society are already taking a back seat because of corporate greed. Manipulating communication media by charging for faster connections and blackmailing businesses to comply is one of the best ways to reduce freedom of expression in this country that's already beset with biased mass media interests. With the proposed corporate media involvement that would result in charges and changes in the Internet, many concerned citizens will lose connectivity as the communications giants make more money. Leave the Internet alone.
