

In my opinion, this merger would be terrific for the consumer and the FCC should allow it to go forward. Satellite radio is another option for the consumer, along with iPods, MP3 Players, internet radio, HD radio, and music on cable television systems, to name a few. Merging the two companies will provide greater choice for the consumer; it is simply another option in the audio "world." Costs would be considerably lower and if the cost rises, the consumer always has other choices, including cancelling their subscription.
