

The Spirit - not $pirit - of these United States

Keeping the "Net Neutral" will mean a greater number of individuals able to continue the commerce and practices that make up such an enormous part of the U.S. economy. More and more enterprises are necessarily conducting their business online, and to limit this ability is to limit, and perhaps even eliminate, the livelihood of far too many good, loyal, tax-paying, freedom-loving citizens.

Additionally, when those of us who are in business have free time (what little of it we can claim), we use the Internet for other purposes, as well - mainly BECAUSE of the limited amounts of time we have.

Please do not continue this myopic and oligarchical view of something as useful and necessary as the Internet.
