

As a daily listener of satellite radio I am writing in support of the proposed merger between xm satellite radio and sirius satellite radio. I feel the merger of these two companies will give consumers more listening choices as well as free consumers from the terrestrial radio stranglehold of endless commercials and limited programming. Additionally with the popularity of the Ipod and Itunes the face of digital media has changed substantially, allowing these two companies to merge will level the playing field and lead to new innovation. In closing I feel the merger of these companies will further competition not limit it.
